Vote Is 246 to 153; Sponsors Stave Off 2 Drives to Tighten Curbs on President

By Robert C. Albright.

The House in a breath-taking finish last night passed a compromise Government reorganization bill imposing a majority vote Congressional "veto" on Presidential merger orders and exempting a score of Federal agencies from any change.

The measure, as passed, empowers the President to submit plans to merge or abolish bureaus or eliminate duplications in them, and provides the plans will become effective unless both Houses adopt a concurrent resolution specifically barring the change.

The vote was 246 to 153. Approval followed a dramatic reversal of an amendment leaders declared would have stopped reorganization. Also rejected on a Republican motion to recommit the bill was the so-called Wheeler amendment requiring affirmative action by both Houses on reorganization orders.

The surprise amendment that almost wrecked the bill was offered at the last minute by Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, leader of an influential conservative bipartisan bloc. It vested authority in either house of Congress to block any White House reorganization plan.

Solidly supported by Republicans and a small bloc of Democrats, the Sumners amendment was approved by the House sitting as a committee 176 to 156. But on the final roll call show-down, Democrats rallied behind their leaders to reverse this vote and narrowly defeat the amendment, 209 to 193.

Recommitment Defeated

The Wheeler amendment, heart of the rival Byrd bill introduced in the Senate, was offered by another Texas Democrat, Representative Kleberg. It was defeated by a 176 to 139 standing vote after bill managers threatened to table reorganization for the session if the House made the change.

Later Republicans offered the same motion in an attempt to send the bill back to a committee pigeonhole. This time they were turned back by a 236 to 163 record vote.

The compromise measure, carrying several eleventh-hour modifying amendments, now goes to the Senate, where Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, has introduced a companion bill and where Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, has offered a measure embodying more drastic economic features.

Last night's 246 to 153 approval of the sharply limited bill compares with the 204 to 196 vote by which the House last session wrote "finis" to the Administration's original omnibus attempt to enact a far more sweeping reorganization plan.

Concession to Economy

As a concession to the new economy drive, bill managers sponsored an amendment declaring "that the public interest demands" the Government be reorganized to reduce expenditures to the fullest extent possible and to increase efficiency through groupings, co-ordinations and reduction in the number of agencies.

The bill's added stress on economy followed submission by Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, of Senator Byrd's amendment declaring a deficit "emer-

Parley Shelves Lewis' Labor Congress Plan

Peace Between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. To Be First Goal

The proposal of John L. Lewis that the independent railway brotherhoods be brought into a national congress of labor will be abandoned, it was indicated yesterday by committees seeking to negotiate peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Instead, the negotiators will try to work out a basis for settling their differences.

A major objective of the conferences, which was formally opened yesterday at the Labor Department, it was learned, is a united labor front in the 1940 Presidential campaign—or at least avoidance of labor going into the campaign in its present schismatic state.

After an initial session of about 2 hours, the conferees recessed to meet again in New York tomorrow night. Lewis and Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee and a C. I. O. negotiator, will go to New York today to arrange conferences look-

Senate Approves Addition to Park

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a bill to add to the Shenandoah National Park 977 acres of land now a part of the Front Royal quartermaster military reservation in Virginia.

The land is mountainous and the War Department said it had no use for it.

Citizens Draft Own Plan to Remodel D.C.

Prettyman Group Proposes to Unite Best-Liked Phases Of Other Reports

By James D. Secrest.

Moves for reorganization of the District government last night appeared to be getting as confused as the Griffenhagen report described the local administration when a third plan for reform was ordered.

The long inactive Prettyman Citizens' Committee was revived, at a conference with District officials, and a sub-committee was appointed to draft the third proposal in the light of the several plans that have been drawn up since the committee offered its original design.

On the sub-committee are Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank; Dr. William McClellan, president of Potomac Electric Power Co., and John Locher, president of Central Labor Union.

This sub-committee will submit its proposals first to the Commissioners and then to the House sub-committee on reorganization. Another meeting of the full Prettyman committee was scheduled for March 16.

The District Building conference followed the first session of the Kennedy sub-committee on Capitol Hill and the disclosure of the Commissioners' substitute reorganization plan, which provided for retention of the Board of Commissioners and most of the independent agencies of the city government.

With the sub-committee sharply divided, the inquiry was recessed until next Tuesday after members begged off from holding a hearing tomorrow.

Assail Griffenhagen Plan

While Chairman Kennedy frequently came to the defense of the Griffenhagen report, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, openly assailed it, and Representative Seccombe (Democrat), of Ohio, offered the Commissioners' plan as his own.

Only Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, showed any indication of supporting the chairman and the Griffenhagen plan, although he stated he has an "open mind" on the question. Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, was similarly undecided while critical of many features of the Griffenhagen plan.

Upon suggestion of Nichols, the Commissioners were asked to obtain more specific data on their reorganization plan after Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, admitted that he could not predict any definite economies or eliminating of overlapping functions.

Whitehurst Defends Plan

"If the plan is not going to save money or eliminate duplication of activities," asked Nichols, "what is your justification for it?"

Capt. Whitehurst replied that he was not ready to admit there is any duplication of municipal services in the District, but he asserted that the Commissioners' plan would make for efficient government.

Earlier Col. David McCoach, Engineer Commissioner, was given a mild grilling by members of the sub-committee as to his administrative qualifications after Chair-

Widow and Friend Face Trial In Weird 'Murder by Motor'

By the Associated Press.

Norwalk, Ohio, March 8.—Mrs. Coletta Schlett, slender 28-year-old widow accused of helping run down and kill her husband in a "murder by motor," expressed confidence tonight a jury would send her back to her daughter, Donna Jean, 6.

"I know I'll be vindicated," she told her mother in jail here, the latter said.

Indicted and held with the light-haired widow on the same first degree murder charges, was a neighbor, Harold Hastings, 35.

Officers who arrested Hastings and told him of the indictment quoted him:

"That's a hell of a thing to do."

Mrs. Schlett's mother, Mrs. Stephen S. Ringholz, said the young widow expressed surprise at the indictment. Conviction would carry a death sentence unless the jury recommended mercy.

Hastings, an unemployed steel worker, and Mrs. Schlett were charged with premeditatedly killing Carl J. Schlett, 29, riding master and paper factory employe. His body was found in a ditch January 27. The coroner said he was "deliberately run down."

Prosecutor Rex Bracy, asserting Mrs. Schlett "has often been seen in Hastings' car and even driving the automobile," said he had "evidence of complicity" against her.

He asserted Schlett's insurance policies had been discussed by the couple in Hastings' presence.

Schlett had two life insurance policies, the widow's attorney said One, for $5,500, was of the double indemnity type—providing a payment of $11,000 for accidental death.

Hopkins Sees '39 Income Of 70 Billion

FHA Forecasts 'Most Active' Building Season; Roosevelt Confers on Taxes

The recovery and business-appeasement drive advanced on several fronts yesterday, with Secretary of Commerce Hopkins forecasting a $6,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000 increase in the national income this year.

Into this scene were projected these other developments:

Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, introduced a railroad relief bill incorporating recommendations of the President's joint committee of rail labor and management.

The Federal Housing Administration reported applications for mortgage insurance on small homes in the week ended March 4 set a new all-time high record, with a total of $21,425,892, compared with $17,613,402 for the corresponding week of last year.

"A most active spring building season, with small home construction possibly attaining the largest volume in a decade," is indicated by the figures, the FHA said.

President Roosevelt conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Undersecretary Hanes and was said to have agreed to revision of the Federal tax structure, while stressing that there must be no reduction in revenue.

The American Federation of Little Business sponsored a measure in Congress to extend credit facilities through 12 intermediate credit banks.

Forecasts $70,000,000,000

Hopkins forecast the national income will rise to close to the New Deal high of $70,000,000,000 reached in 1937, and more than $30,000,000,000 above the depression low of 1932.

At his press conference, the Secretary disclosed that he had a series of discussions with Hanes concerning changes in the tax laws which might remove deterrents to business. "I can say that Johnny Hanes and I have a substantial meeting of minds," the Secretary said.

He pointed out that Hanes "favors substitution of a single flat corporate tax for all the existing forms of corporation levies, such as the undistributed profits tax, excess profits tax, and the capital gains levy."

Hopkins served notice that none of the Administration basic reforms would be abandoned, and contended the entire New Deal program was designed to aid recovery.

"I Don't See Any Retreat"

"Some cynical people charge us with retreat," he said. "I don't know who invented the appeasement phrase. Our program is not being conducted to appease any body. The realism is that our program is on the statute books—the SEC, the FHA, the CCC, banking reforms and others. I don't see any signs of retreat of these reform programs anywhere."

Hopkins insisted, however, that the Administration was not making speeches on business policy without

Stocks Rise To 1939 Highs In Brisk Session

New York, March 8 (AP).—Some of the most prominent stocks listed on the Wall Street quotation boards sold at top prices for 1939 or longer in a brisk resumption of a rising trend today. Many shares were up 1 to 5 points at the close.

American Telephone jumped 3 to 165, highest this year. Also at peak prices for the year were General Motors, Chrysler, National Biscuit, International Harvester, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward and Deere.

Transactions increased to 1,048,440 shares from 586,630 in the preceding session. Wall Street took bullish tips from both London and Washington.

Repeal of All Neutrality Laws Asked

Senate Bill Would Give Free Rein to President on All Foreign Policies

A poll of conferees on the emergency defense bill last night showed a substantial majority favoring the higher limit of 6,000 warplanes voted by the Senate—500 more than the House—as the upper house was plunged into another battle over neutrality and foreign policy.

The latter was started by a bipartisan proposal for the repeal of all neutrality laws, presented by Senators Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, and Johnson (Republican), California. Lewis, majority whip and an Administration stalwart, introduced a bill that would place full control over "the enforcement of neutrality" in the hands of the President.

Senator Johnson, leading isolationist, condemned "ambiguities in the neutrality act which nobody can interpret and which leave the Administration free to do as it pleases."

Defense Bill Speeded

Continuing unabated its drive to strengthen American military, naval and air forces, Congress yesterday speeded the defense bill to early enactment. It was brought up in the House, amendments made by the Senate Tuesday were technically agreed to, and conferees appointed. The Senate named its representatives to adjust differences between the two houses soon thereafter.

Representative May (Democrat), Kentucky, heading the House group, said he favored providing 6,000 planes instead of the 5,500 limit voted by the House, and predicted the larger figure would be adopted. Representative Harter (Democrat), Ohio, said he was for the increase, while the third Democrat, Representative Thomas, of Texas, said he would not "hold out for the 5,500 figure if there is a deadlock."

Both Republicans named, Representatives Andrews of New York and Short of Missouri, said they would vote for the 5,500 limitation "but expected to lose out." The Senate members of the conference committee, Lewis of Illinois, Logan of Kentucky (Democrats), and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, all favor the full 6,000 airplanes.

Profits Clause Controversial

As the conferees prepared to meet this afternoon, it appeared that the only fight might come over the Senate amendment to limit aircraft profits to 10 per cent. Two of the House members, Harter and Andrews, opposed it, while May said he favored the move. Harter said the provision would "destroy the very thing we are trying to do," in making it impossible for the industry to carry on research and experimental work.

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, joining Senators Clark (Democrat) and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, in opposing the move to repeal the neutrality act, said the measure should be made more mandatory upon the President. The group declared they would keep the Senate "in session all summer" if necessary to block the move.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, emphatically opposed the bill because, he said, it would

1,500 Loyalists Reported Sunk By Italian Planes

London, March 8 (INS)—Italian airplanes sank five Spanish warships following Monday's Madrid coup, and more than 1,500 men were drowned, the Daily Express will say tomorrow.

As the Spanish Republican fleet steamed out of Cartagena en route to surrender to the French in Algeria, eight Italian Savoia-Marchetti bombers attacked it, according to the Express.

Three destroyers and a submarine were sunk, the dispatch asserted, and no passengers or members of the crews were saved. Later, it was said, a troop ship with 1,500 aboard was sent to the bottom, and no one was rescued.

'Fine Rain,' Says Rancher, and Is Slain for It

Sacramento, Calif., March 8 (AP).—A cheery remark—"This certainly is a fine rain"—led today to the fatal beating of Grover Russi, 54, a rancher.

Deputy Sheriff Fred Wearn said Russi was beaten with a club by Lloyd Wesley Smith, 62, ranch employe.

The deputy said Smith objected to Russi's statement about the weather, saying he could "see nothing fine about it." An argument which followed resulted in Russi's death.

Communists Fight To Central Square But Miaja's Tanks Drive Them Out

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 8.—Official dispatches reaching Paris said Communist troops fought their way into the heart of Madrid today but were repulsed by troops loyal to Gen. Jose Miaja after a furious battle near the Puerto del Sol.

[The United Press reported early today (Thursday) that an apparent tacit truce had halted fighting. Border reports said "thousands" had been killed or wounded.—Editor's note].

Jacques Pigeonneau, French consul in Madrid, radioed to the French foreign office a description of the battle, which occurred almost under the windows of the French Embassy, in which he was staying.

By nightfall, according to his report, Gen. Miaja's troops were in complete command of the center of the city.

The Communists had been driven back to the site of the old race track in northwestern Madrid, near the Cuatro Caminos quarter.

The Communists, well armed, launched their attack shortly after noon, Pigeonneau reported.

Miaja's troops, manning machine guns in the Bank of Spain and the Madrid postoffice, both of which face Cibeles Square, held off the Communist attacks for an hour.

A squadron of Miaja's tanks rumbled down Calle de Alcala from Puerto del Sol, with strong troop reinforcements behind them. This was at 3 p. m.

After several minutes the Communists, unable to stand against a crossfire from the tanks and the windows of the Bank of Spain and the postoffice, retreated.

Rebel Chiefs Surrender

Madrid, March 8 (AP).—Gen. Jose Miaja's National Defense government today announced surrender of Republican army chiefs involved in a Communist revolt inspired by opposition to Miaja's intent to make a "worthy peace" with Nationalist Gen. Franco in the 31-month-old civil conflict.

Many Communists were said to have surrendered and a number were believed to have fled from the city.

Franco Prepares Fight

Hendaye, French-Spanish Frontier, March 8 (I.N.S.).—Preparing for a crushing final offensive against Madrid, Gen. Franco tonight ordered a blockade of the Mediterranean coast between Sagunto, north of Valencia, and Adra, west of Almeria.

Franco's navy seized the French merchant ship La Corse as she headed for Valencia with corned beef. La Corse was escorted into Barcelona harbor.

Sources close to Franco indicated Spain was likely to see much more bitter fighting before peace is restored, and Franco himself reiterated that no compromises would be vouchsafed Madrid.

Britain Doubtful

London, March 8 (AP).—Great Britain may not recognize Nationalist Spain's blockade since belligerent rights were not granted Gen. Franco even though Britain recognized his regime.

$16 Basic Pay For Women in D. C. Industry

Minimum Wage Of $13 Ordered For Beginners

Women employed in District manufacturing and wholesale plants were guaranteed a $16 weekly salary yesterday by the Minimum Wage Board. More than 1,500 women will benefit.

This basic wage was set for a work week of from 32 to 44 hours after several weeks of hearings. A final hearing was set for April 8. In the event there are no complicating objections, the wage will become mandatory in 60 days.

Part-time employes will be paid on the basis of 40 cents an hour, and for overtime the pay rate will be time and a half. In graphic arts establishments, the board provided for a $13 weekly wage to learners for the first six months of employment. The learners will be raised $1 for each succeeding six-month period

The board also ordered that only one-fourth of the total number of workers in the graphic arts establishments could be learners at a time.

Rain to Attend Rise of Mercury

The temperature will rise slowly today under cloudy skies expected to bring rain in the afternoon, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. A low of 28 degrees was registered yesterday at 7 a. m. as icy March blasts swept into Washington. The mercury climbed to a high of 47.

Risque Cartoons Win Laborer Nazi Prize as Humorist

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 8.—A humble construction worker was singled out today by Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff as the champion humorist among more than 1,000 competitors in a month-long joke contest.

Goebbels started the contest to prove there was humor in Nazi Germany after he ousted five cabaret entertainers for making quips about the 'National Socialist regime.

Cartoons of scantily clad ladies won $40 for the top prize winner, Kurt Naumann, of Grossenhain.

"I won't perform in this costume," says one of his feminine figures attired only in a prewar helmet and a saber.

"Why not," asks a paunchy male companion, scratching his head, "Does one see too much?"

"Rubbish, you old fool," the girl replies, "— too little!"

Another of his drawings depicts a girl clad only in a blouse.

"Why, you haven't seen my new dress," says she to a bearded companion, "I bought it on the installment plan."

"I suppose," he replies, "you are wearing the first installment."

Der Angriff said Nauman won "not so much because we find that the proofs of his filthy mind constitute the very incarnation of humor per se.

"Rather did we believe we saw before us a real fellow, a man who must day in and day out perform heavy manual labor as a simple building trades worker and who nevertheless uses his brief spare moments to put his funny ideas on paper."

Managements Plan To Use Own Trucks; Union Painters To Join Walkout

Managements of 13 District hotels hemmed in by pickets mobilized their forces to meet the threat of isolation from supplies of food.

Informed that organized truck drivers would refuse to cross picket lines to deliver milk, food and beer, they began at once to lay plans to care for their guests. The Ambassador and Shoreham were prepared to use their own trucks for deliveries and it was understood other hotels would meet the flank attack in the same way.

The strike reached out last night to still another union, and made itself felt in the home towns of Congressmen.

Painters to Join

Painters employed at the hotels will join the strike today, Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of Painters Local No. 368, said. He declined to estimate how many would be affected.

Protests will be made today to the District Commissioners that elevators in the hotels are being manned by unlicensed operators, said Samuel Lavine, attorney for the strikers. He added he would protest to the Attorney General that strikebreakers are being imported from other cities.

Secretaries of hotel executives, stenographers and clerks donned uniforms yesterday and took the places of striking waitresses.

Members of the unions' board of strategy, which met all day at its Hamilton Hotel headquarters, said photographs had been made of members of Congress and their wives passing through picket lines and remonstrances had been made by telephone. They said A. F. of L. locals in the Congressmen's home towns and States would be notified for future reference.

"Fun Night" Held

At the Shoreham, where the first "Fun Night" went on as scheduled, merrymakers packed the ballroom while five waiters scurried among them. Though the staff was increased as the night wore on, one party said its order, placed at 8:45, was filled at 10:30. Waiters explained only two cooks occupied the huge kitchen.

The Raleigh, apparently hardest hit, said practically its entire service staff walked out, including cooks, waiters, maids, busboys, bell boys and elevator boys. It added, however, that 90 per cent had been replaced last night.

The Carlton said only 17 employes, who were quickly replaced, left their jobs. At the New Colonial, no loss at all was reported.

Entire Staff Replaced

The Lafayette said its entire staff went out but was replaced in full. Some luncheon business was lost, the management said, but dinner business was "better than usual."

The Harrington and Continental were quiet, though picketed, and reported only "a few" striking employes.

The dining room at the Willard and the Pall Mall Room at the Raleigh were closed.

Disruption of hotel service because of the drivers' strike was discounted last night by Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the associated hotels.

"There is no reason to believe this development will in any way cripple operations of any of the 13 hotels," he said, pointing out that all the hotels maintain two or three delivery trucks of their own.

Robert Lester, president of the Teamsters Joint Council, said the union drivers decided last night to respect the picket lines early today.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Shrewd, able, personable, Senator Lodge is one of the four Republicans in Congress oftenest mentioned to retrieve the Presidency in 1940. Like Harvard football, his jabs at the New Deal are soundly opportunistic. His guest column today is a good illustration of his tactics in the Senate. Typically, he sidestepped an invitation to be humorous.—HARLAN MILLER.)

BY HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR.
SENATOR FROM MASSACHUSETTS.

A Senator like myself, belonging to the minority party, may perhaps be pardoned for getting the impression that whenever the New Deal confronts an election the public is told that prosperity is restored and that "happy days are here again."

Sen. Lodge . . . jabs at New Deal

Whenever appropriation time is at hand, however, the air is filled with statements about the huge increase in unemployment.

* * * *

Let's go back to last June in the Senate when we were making appropriations for relief for this fiscal year I remember thinking that the amount requested by the Administration was probably not large enough to carry WPA through the year, and moved to increase the amount—with a provision designed to eliminate favoritism in giving out relief jobs.

* * * *

This motion met the fate of all motions coming from the minority side and was rejected. Now it is commonly said that large sums of the annual appropriation were spent just before November and that this forced the wholesale lay-offs of large numbers of unfortunate men in November.

Maybe a Senator who, like me, belongs to the minority party, will be forgiven for having a suspicion that the fact that there was an election in November had something to do with this fluctuation.

"—which is the Liberal?"

Query: Does it make one liberal or a conservative to say that laws which would eliminate favoritism as between individual persons in getting WPA jobs, and laws which would eliminate favoritism in allocating money to the States, would be a good thing? I submit that such laws would be acts of plain justice, ordinary common sense, and simple decency—regardless of the particular political theory that attracts you.

* * * *

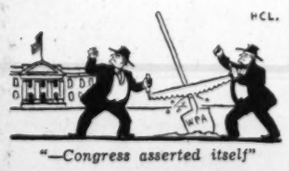
Is it liberal or conservative to want to save the public money? Is it liberal or conservative to assume that while everyone stands to lose by a wildcat inflation and the destruction of Government credit those of moderate means stand to lose the most of all?

* * * *

We had a vote in the Senate, refusing by the figure of 47 to 46 to increase the appropriation beyond the amount appropriated by the House. The idea seems to have spread around the country that this is a vote for economy. Those who favor economy are applauding the vote for that reason. Those who attack the vote do so on the grounds that because of it men and women on WPA will be laid off.

* * * *

Neither argument seems correct. The bill passed by the Senate provided that there could be no lay-offs this winter. This is a new provision in our law and represents a great gain for the security of the man on relief. The bill also contained an invitation to the Executive to submit a statement of further needs in the spring which, if at all well substantiated, will undoubtedly be granted.



"—Congress asserted itself"

The real difference between the two schools of thought seems to me to be actually as follows:

On one side were those like myself wanting quick action, who favored taking a two-month view with the assurance that no one would be laid off and that, of course, Congress would still be here for further appropriation in the spring.

* * * *

Why the Administration thought its view so vitally important and chose to make such a violent stand on it is somewhat of a mystery. Such, however, was its attitude, with the result that it was very publicly rebuked, by one vote.

* * * *

The action of the Senate will not, however, mean one less WPA job or one less dollar of taxpayers' money. What it means—and all that it means—is that the Administration wanted a certain system to be followed and was defeated. In some small measure Congress asserted its rightful responsibilities.

Equalized Rail Rates Favored By Alldredge

Tells Senators He Would Secure Them 'So Far as Practical'

J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, nominated to the Interstate Commerce Commission by President Roosevelt, yesterday told a Senate sub-committee examining his qualifications that he believed in securing, "so far as practicable," equality in railroad rates.

An opponent of freight rate "discrimination" against the South, Alldredge was subjected to three hours of questioning, chiefly by Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas. After the hearing, Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the sub-committee, said the nominee "seems to have both feet on the ground. I think he made a very favorable impression on the whole sub-committee."

Senator Johnson said a vote on Alldredge and the other two nominees—Thomas R. Amlie and William E. Lee—would be deferred at least until next week, as Senator Reed "insisted that the sub-committee make no report until the record of today's hearing on Alldredge is printed."

Favors "Equality"

Alldredge's statement favoring "equality in the facilities and services of transportation and in the rates charged therefor" was read to the committee at the close of the hearing, following a tense few minutes when he and Senator Reed engaged in a sharp verbal duel.

The nominee refused to give a direct answer to Senator Reed's question, "If your nomination is confirmed by the Senate will you as a commissioner participate in the Southern Governors' rate case?" Reed had indicated he thought that this case, involving revision of rates on certain goods shipped from the South, had been inspired by a pamphlet written by Alldredge.

The nominee said he did not know whether or not he would take part in deciding the case. He suggested that the committee pass on the propriety of such action. Here Senator Johnson interposed with the remark, "That judgment will have to be made by you and you only."

"Have to Read Record"

Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, an advocate of Alldredge's confirmation, pointed out that Alldredge had testified he had never taken any part in the Southern Governors' rate case. He insisted that the nominee would "have to read the whole record and then determine whether or not he should help decide the matter."

When Alldredge asserted he thought that Senator Reed was raising the question "that I might not be a fair judge," Reed retorted, "In this particular case, I certainly think you would not."

"In approaching problems before the ICC," Senator Johnson asked, "would you determine rates in the South on the same basis as in any other region?"

"Certainly," responded Alldredge.

NLRB Handles 19,659 Cases In 40 Months

During its 40 months of operation, the National Labor Relations Board has handled a total of 19,659 cases involving 4,435,574 workers, it was declared in a report released by the board yesterday.

Of the cases, only 4,047 are still pending, according to the report. Fifty-two per cent of the cases were closed by agreement of both parties, 16 per cent were dismissed by the board, and 26 per cent were withdrawn. The remaining 6 per cent were closed by issuance of cease and desist orders, certifications after elections, and by compliance with board decisions.

Almost a third of the cases, or 6,166, were brought on grounds of "discrimination against workers because of their union affiliation or activities." Failure of employer "in good faith to bargain collectively" was charged in 4,386 cases.

Jerome Frank Wants System of 'Wifwaff' To Be Applied to 'Agwag' in 'Ugwug'

By the Associated Press.

Jerome Frank, Securities Commissioner, suggested to the Monopoly Committee yesterday that a system of "wifwaff" be applied to "agway" in "ugwug."

FRANK

By that, he meant that a system of regulation should be applied to any "socially desirable" monopolies in industry. He explained that he coined the new words because the old ones had become bound up in prejudices and emotional connotations.

His method of regulation would work out through consultation of Government officials with all elements involved in the problem.

New York, March 8 (AP).—United States Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, made a quick trip from Washington today to see his new granddaughter. The baby, Barbara, was born last night to Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer, the Senator's daughter.

A Young Democratic Clubs of America reported to the clerk of the House the organization had collected $2,566 since January 1 and spent $2,276.

The Democratic Senatorial campairgn committee reported expenditures of $578 since the first of the year, no contributions and a balance of $5,647 on hand March 1.

The Democratic National Congressional Committee reported $1,956 on hand December 31, with $76 in contributions since then and $613 of expenditures.

Boston, March 8 (AP).—John H. Wallace, president of the Anti-third Term League, disclosed today he had received a letter from former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, in which Brookhart said: "If a President has the best program and is a good man to carry it out, he ought to have a third term or even a fourth term if necessary."

Wallace, who has invited Brookhart to support his movement, quoted Brookhart as saying President Roosevelt could "probably" be re-elected for a third term, "in spite of your Wall Street colleagues."

The House tabled resolution which requested the President to give Congress information regarding Mexican expropriation of American-owned property.

The House action came a few minutes after Representative Fish (Republican), New York, author of the resolution, sought unsuccessfully to have the House Foreign Affairs Committee make public the State Department's report on the matter.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, proposed legislation yesterday to set up a Federal employment stabilization board which would make six-year plans for public works, to "promote the most economical expenditure of public funds in periods of business depression, for the purpose of diminishing unemployment and stabilizing productive enterprise."

The Navajo Indians of Arizona and New Mexico are multiplying so fast, Congress was told that the 25,000 square miles of territory in their home reservation soon will be insufficient to support them even partially.

Indian Commissioner Collier said the Navajos had multiplied "about four and a half or five times" in the last 70 years, and 50,000 of them now were residing in an area which, "by white living standards and under white operating conditions," could hardly support 5,000 persons.

Coal Commission Expects to Add 37 Million to Cost

By the Associated Press.

Congress was informed yesterday that $37,000,000 would be added to the Nation's coal bill when the Bituminous Coal Commission fixes minimum prices required by law.

Chairman Percy Tetlow of the commission made the estimate during testimony of the Interior Department appropriation bill for next year.

"If price levels are raised to equal the cost, it would mean raising of the average price of coal 11 cents a ton—$37,000,000 based on the 1937 production," Tetlow told an appropriations subcommittee.

Ickes Bids Matanuska To Eject Slackers

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee disclosed yesterday that Secretary Ickes had given orders to eject lazy discontented members of the Government-sponsored Matanuska colony in Alaska.

The Secretary, in reply to a question by Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, had said at hearings that on his recent visit to the colony he had found "some people there who were disinclined to work."

"When the matter came over to me," he said, "I told them (colony supervisors) to lose no time in shipping them out."

Tydings Calls USHA Effort In Socialism

Marylander Urges A Limit of $3,000 Per Family Unit

Attacking operations of the United States Housing Authority, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, yesterday asserted the USHA slum-clearance and rehousing program was "a venture in State socialism" which "seems to me to be on the Russian model."

Tydings, one of the Administration's most bitter crtics, complained of extravagance in USHA construction and of a drain on the Treasury that "will run into billions of dollars."

Pointing out that USHA "is asking for $800,000,000 to be spent along the same lines," Tydings urged Congress to establish a "ceiling" of $3,000 per family unit—contrasted with the present average cost of $5,520 per family unit, which, he said, is $138 higher than the cost of the "average house occupied by the average American family today."

$2,500,000 Lopped Off

Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee, criticizing USHA's operating costs, slashed $2,500,000 from the agency's request for a $7,000,000 administrative fund in 1940.

Tydings castigated USHA in his speech on the Senate floor not only for the expense of its apartment buildings, but also on the ground that USHA structures are at least partially exempt from local taxation, that they require annual rent subsidies from the Government, that they represent a gift from the Government to the cities of America, and that the cities will actually profit by accepting the gift.

He said "the people of America do not know this" and if they did, "both the people and the Congress would demand that the act be withdrawn and its entire philosophy changed."

Attacks Subsidies

The lanky Marylander charged that "the Government builds a finer house than the average American family lives in, free of any cost to the cities wherein they are built, and then insists that all the other people of America be taxed more to pay the taxes which those who live in the Government apartment slum-replacing houses are excused from paying."

Tydings said the annual rent subsidies paid by the Government "will reach $250,000,000 a year and will likely run for 60 years in the future."

The author of the housing act, Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, said "the amount of subsidy isn't the important thing—the important thing is the economic and social benefits." He said "the slum clearance administration has been very efficient and economical," but added, "of course, I'm going to study these figures."

Compares Figures

Tydings compared the USHA program unfavorably with the "Fort Wayne plan," which provides "new, modern houses for people of low income, without any rent subsidies, exemption from local taxes or borrowed money from the Federal Treasury" at an overall cost "of less than $900." He said he was not urging $900 houses, but "for the same amount of money that Congress appropriates (for USHA), twice as many houses can be built."

The housing committee of the American Federation of Labor, however, said yesterday that the Fort Wayne plan, which provides for erection of prefabricated homes by WPA labor on land borrowed from private owners in return for tax exemption, would tend to cause widespread unemployment among building mechanics and laborers.

Citing extreme highs in USHA costs, Tydings said, "Here in the City of Washington, another of those Government-constructed apartment houses, wherein will be housed 246 families, will cost $6,142 per family unit."

9,500,000 Persons Hospitalized in '38

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—Nearly $9,500,000 patients were admitted to the Nation's hospitals in 1938, a rate of one every 3.3 seconds, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported today. The average stay was 12½ days.

Smith, Former Murphy Aide, Budget Chief

Bell to Remain Treasury Assistant In Financial Matters

Harold D. Smith, appointed by Attorney General Murphy as Michigan budget director when Murphy was Governor, will be named budget director of the Federal Government April 15, the White House announced yesterday.

He will relieve Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director since Lewis Douglas resigned September 1, 1934, in disagreement with the Administration's spending policy.

Stephen T. Early, White House press relations secretary, announced, after Bell had called at the White House for a conference with the President, that Bell would continue as assistant to Secretary of Treasurer Morgenthau in charge of financial matters.

Shunned Policy Position

Bell, career service official, elected at the outset to retain his civil service rating in preference to an appointment which would identify him as an Administration policy-making official. For this reason, he has served throughout as acting budget director.

It has been known for some time that he wished to be relieved of the Budget Bureau position. Treasury officials said he had been carrying on two full-time jobs, since he has been in charge of the Treasury financial matters as well.

During the present session of Congress, there has been a tendency to identify him with the Administration's budget policy. He was criticized by Senate Appropriations Committee members for advising the Federal Housing Administration it could expend available funds to carry on expanded duties and ask Congress for a deficiency appropriation to continue through the fiscal year.

Murphy Lauds Smith

Attorney General Murphy, questioned at his press conference yesterday whether he had recommended Smith, remarked that the Treasury's search for a competent appointee incidentally had come to his attention.

"He is a very competent man," Murphy commented. "He has done a wonderful job in Michigan in building up a finance department and putting into effect economies and sound fiscal policies."

Smith was born in 1898 in Haven, Kans., and received a B. S. degree from the University of Kansas and an M. A. degree in public administration at the University of Michigan. He is married and has three children.

U. A. W. Local 'Suspends' Martin Men

Union Split as Shop Committee Pledges Loyalty to C. I. O.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 8.—"Dual union" repercussions began today for the United Automobile Workers even before the faction led by Homer Martin had adjourned the convention at which it declared its independence of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The C. I. O.-supported faction, which impeached Martin and which is headed by R. J. Thomas, will hold its convention in Cleveland March 27.

Martin Men "Suspended"

The shop committee of Dodge Local No. 3, Detroit, suspended "for 99 years" members who had attended Martin's convention as "rank and file" delegates. The shop committee asserted the union is "loyal to the C. I. O."

The delegates, who elected Martin president; Ivan Carey, of Los Angeles, vice president; Jerry Aldred, of Flint, secretary-treasurer, and approved a slate of 13 executive board members in a tumultuous session that laster until 4 a. m., reconvened this afternoon to wind up odds and ends of convention business.

The election results constituted a victory for conservative forces which have advocated the elimination of extremists from their section of the U. A. W.

Lewis Notified

Telegrams were sent to John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president; Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, C. I. O. vice presidents, notifying them of the convention's action.

Martin indicated there would be close co-operation between his union and David Dubinsky's independent International Ladies Garment Workers Union. Martin disclosed Dubinsky had been in constant touch with the U. A. W. convention and that he was to have a talk with Dubinsky tonight or Thursday.

'Badman' Accused Of Mailing Lewd Letter to Writer

San Francisco, March 8 (AP).—Roy Gardner, one-time-notorious train robber, whose name became a byword in the West because of sensational escapes, was arrested today and charged with sending obscene matter through the mails.

In Portland, Oreg., Carl Donough, United States attorney, said the indictment accused Gardner of sending a "filthy" letter to Mrs. Ardith Homan, of the News-Sentinel, Lodi, Calif. Gardner said he arranged with her to be his "ghost writer" in preparing the story of his life, after his release from Leavenworth Prison.

Last September, said Gardner, Mrs. Homan asked by letter for expenses, and he refused payment. The letter was sent, Gardner said, after the woman's attorney offered to settle the expense demand for $750.

D. C. Employment Center Seeking Aviation Artisans

Aviation mechanics and skilled workers are in demand even though general unemployment is a national problem.

Director C. E. Lamson of the District Employment Center, 928 Fifth street northwest, said yesterday his office had received queries from the United States Employment Service "regarding the availability of skilled mechanics and machinists."

Although there are no airplane factories in the District, Lamson says he expects a demand for aeronautical engineers, draftsmen, body builders, metal workers, assembly line workers, mechanics and mechinists.

He urged workers with experience in the aviation field, or who are interested in obtaining training in aircraft mechanics, to file employment applications with his office.

D.C. Firm Bids Low On Fire Project

Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., of Washington, bidding $183,994 yesterday, was low bidder for construction of the new fire alarm headquarters in McMillan Park. The work will be financed by PWA.

The Commissioners rejected all bids on the Juvenile Court construction opened last week. The low bid by a New York firm was above the earmarked amount.

U. S. Liquor Dispensary Study Asked for D. C.

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, yesterday introduced a resolution authorizing the Senate District Committee to investigate the retail sale of bottled liquor in Washington and the feasibility of substituting Government-owned dispensaries. The measure is similar to a bill introduced in the House by Representative Sheppard (Democrat) of California.

Counterfeit Ring Found In Ohio Prison

Bogus Coins Shipped Outside Walls; Warden, 6 Others Suspended

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, March 8.—Ohio Penitentiary was disclosed by Acting Warden W. F. Amrine today as the source of convict-made counterfeit money, circulated both inside and outside the walls.

Amrine reported that 900 bogus dimes were shipped out of the institution "some time ago" and he asked John Murphy, Federal Secret Service agent, to aid in determining the extent of the counterfeiting ring's operations.

Discovery of illegal 5, 10, 25 and 50 cent pieces among convicts provided the most startling development in an investigation which has resulted in the suspension of Warden James C. Woodard, a deputy warden and five guards.

Evidence of gambling and an intra-prison illicit traffic in liquor and narcotics previously has been reported by Amrine, State superintendent of corrections, who was ordered by Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood to clean up "unwarranted conditions."

Sherwood has indicated that he would seek the removal of Woodard, who described the gambling and liquor findings as "greatly exaggerated."

Some of the fake money was found in cells and buildings during a general search for contraband articles.

Amrine was unable to say how much had been manufactured.

4 Arrested as Prince Georges Presses Gambling Cleanup

3 District Men Seized in Raid On a Riverdale Inn; Several Thousand Numbers Slips Confiscated

Prince Georges County Police yesterday raided an alleged lottery ring headquarters and arrested four men—three of them from Washington. The men were found surrounded by a battery of telephones and a large quantity of "numbers" slips.

The raid was staged on a second-story room of the Old Mexico Inn on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard at Riverdale, Md. It came on the heels of a drive to outlaw gambling in Prince Georges County, opened Tuesday by commissioners.

The men arrested were listed as Ralph Taurog, 37, of the 2100 block of California street northwest; Francis Riley, 22, of the 2600 block of Adams Mill road northwest; Joseph Meyrson, 53, of the 4600 block of Davidson Drive, Chevy Chase, Md., and Ben Rosenthal, 50, of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Taurog and Meyrson were charged at the Hyattsville police substation with operating a lottery and released on bonds of $1,000 each. Rosenthal was booked as a State's witness and released on $300 bond.

Charged with selling lottery tickets, Riley also was released on $1,000 bond.

A hearing was set for next Wednesday at 10 a. m. before Police Court Judge George B. Merrick, in Hyattsville.

Police were armed with a warrant for one of the three men charged with gambling violations, but had no search warrant. The case will furnish a court test on whether evidence obtained in such raids is admissible, police said.

The raiders were led by Prince Georges County Policeman Jack Dent, and was under supervision of Prince Georges State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr. At the time of the raid Wheatley was waiting in the Hyattsville police substation.

When police rapped on the door leading into the alleged "numbers" headquarters there was no answer. They pushed in and confiscated six telephones, a radio and "several thousand" lottery slips, Dent said. Meyrson described himself as a "commission broker," police reported.

The raid marked the first major roundup staged by Wheatley since he took office in January and the first action following recommendations to the Maryland Legislature Tuesday of Prince Georges Commissioners that possession of gaming equipment be made prima facie evidence of guilt.

Action of the commissioners was believed prompted by the reputed rush to counties bordering the District by lottery racketeers after Congress clamped down stringent anti-gambling laws in the Capital.

Meanwhile, "Jimmy's Place," Bladensburg road establishment reputed to be the largest gambling place between Philadelphia and Miami, was reported to be preparing to close Saturday.

Kinderdine Freed In Fatal Accident

Eugene Kinderdine, 50, of 1924 Shepard street northeast, yesterday was freed of responsibility in the death of Mrs. Mary Biddle, 72, of 17 Bryant street northwest, who died Monday from injuries sustained when she was struck Jan. 30 by an automobile driven by Kinderdine at Rhode Island avenue at Logan Circle.

A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental death after hearing testimony that the driver was going north on Thirteenth street, stopped at the circle and waited for the light to turn green, and struck Mrs. Biddle as he was about to turn into Rhode Island avenue. Testimony was that Mrs. Biddle was crossing the street against the traffic light, and that the visibility was bad, as the night was dark and rainy.

Dentists Polish Up on Brushing Of Teeth Here

They Agree It's Not As Simple as Some Would Make It Seem

Brushing teeth is not the simple matter tooth paste manufacturers would have us believe, it appeared yesterday from an examination of the table clinics of the Dental Hygienist's Association at the Five State Post Graduate Clinic at the Mayflower Hotel.

Don't just buy a brush and rub some paste on your teeth with it, Eleanor Dodd, dainty clinician in charge of table No. 7, said yesterday. There is all sorts of differences in brushes, and what matters is not who makes your brush or what it made of, but how big it is. Pig bristles will do, and so will the much boasted new synthetic bristles; what counts is that the brush should be small—only six tufts long and two rows wide.

The proper way to use your brush is a complicated matter, the subject of much dispute between learned mouth-experts. Miss Vivian Frederick at table No. 8. explained the five different methods defended by different members of the profession. "There is a sixth method," she explained, "the one most people use—the wrong one."

The popular way described on tooth-paste cartons, "a combination of firm up-and-down and rotary movements," finds no scientific basis she said.

The Forsyte method is to lay the brush against the gum and make eight separate and distinct strokes downward or (upward, as the case may be) and then move on to another part of the mouth. The Interdental, with its variations, is based on a "slow shimmy" movement of the brush against the gums, followed by a quick jerk down the tooth. Dr. Bruce Taylor objects to touching the brush to the gums at all; finger massage is more effective, he thinks. Other more complicated movements, which to a layman's eye seem to demand long practice for perfection, are involved in the Fones and Thompson methods. No one method is backed by the whole profession.

A luncheon of past presidents of the District of Columbia Dental Society and officers of the State dental societies was held in the north room of the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, at which Dr. James W. Brown, president of the District group, was host. The day ended with a banquet, over which Dr. Fenton Bradford presided, followed by a dance.

Washington Children Have Best Teeth

Washington children have better teeth than children in 12 other cities of comparable size, according to the exhibit of the Community Campaign for Preventive and Restorative Dentistry. Miss Margaret H. Jeffreys gave the local Parent-Teachers Association credit for this.

The local organization won the National Parent-Teachers Association award last year for the best dental campaign during the school year 1937-38.

Meeting to Seek Curb on Vandals

To curb destruction of school property which last year ran up a bill of $14,000, a mass meeting of parents, teachers, and officials of District schools, citizens' associations and the Police Department will be held March 21 at 3:30 p. m. at the Stuart Junior High School, Fourth and E streets northeast.

Representatives of all religious groups and boys' clubs in the Trinidad section will attend the meeting, called by W. R. Strawbridge, principal of Stuart, and Miss F. C. Mortimer, principal of the Wheatley School.

Ruhland to Speak

Prevention of blindness as related to health and education will be discussed tomorrow at 8 p. m. by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, at the annual meeting of the District Society for Prevention of Blindness in the American National Red Cross auditorium.

House Passes Reorganization Bill, 246 to 153

Offices

gency" exists. Robertson withdrew the Byrd language after managers of the bill agreed to rephrase [illegible] ilar objectives.

In another concession the committee accepted an amendment by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, denying the President power to extend the life of emergency agencies or their functions beyond their legal limit by executive orders.

Another modification in line with economy-drive objectives made it mandatory that the President state the reduction in expenditures involved in any reorganization plan. Still others in line with the Byrd bill assured independent Federal agencies of their right to continue preparation of their own budget estimates and denied the President power to set up any new executive department.

Fight Off Amendments

Throughout the long afternoon, Representative Cochran, of Missouri; Representative Warren, of North Carolina, and Representative Cox of Georgia, Democratic bill handlers, fought a flood of amendments to add to the list of agencies exempted from merger. In the end, one on the exempt list of 17—the National Bituminous Coal Commission—was made subject to reorganization. And three others—the National Mediation Board, the Railroad Retirement board and the Railroad Adjustment Board—were added to the exempt list.

But it was against the Wheeler-Byrd amendment, offered by Kleberg, and against the Summers amendment, which caught them off guard, that leaders concentrated their fight.

While both Houses would have to vote "no" to stop Presidential orders under the House bill, both Houses would have to vote "yes" under the Wheeler plan before the orders could take effect. The upshot would be that one House, failing to approve, could prevent reorganization.

Representative Warren declared it would "do nothing but reiterate present law." He charged Kleberg used it as a "dagger" to try to strike down the committee bill, and asserted:

"If this is adopted, then we shall move to table the bill and let it be said that the death blow came from the majority side."

Sumners Loses Plea

"If either House fails to agree to a plan, it is not the will of Congress," Sumners told the House in urging a veto by the chamber. "It is wise not to force a consolidation which is against the will of one House. It would cause friction, and is not worth the price you pay for it."

Speaker Bankhead took the floor to query Sumners on his proposal. He brought out that Sumners was not raising constitutional objections to the committee's concurrent resolution plan, previously under constitutional fire from Republicans, but was objecting on "policy" grounds.

Finally, Majority Leader Rayburn, Sumners' Texas colleague, appealed to the House to defeat the amendment. Rayburn warned that if it was adopted "there is strong probability no reorganization will come about."

Leading the defense of the compromise bill was Representative Cox, the conservative Georgian who had fought the more-sweeping reorganization bill last session. Against attacks on constitutionality of the "concurrent resolution method of stopping merger orders, by Taber, of New York, and Wolcott, of Michigan (Republican), Cox insisted the method was "valid."

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, directed a bitter assault on the "merit system" as administered by the bipartisan Civil Service Commission, and demanded its exemption from merger be lifted. The House retained the exemption after Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee charged Nichols was an advocate of "spoils" and promised to lay before the House "a really effective merit-system bill."

For five of the nearly eight hours the House was in session, members fought to add other agencies to the exempt list. Efforts to exempt the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Employment Service, the Forest Service, and other agencies, were defeated, as were attempts to eliminate the exemption of the Labor Relations Board and the Coast Guard. But a motion by Representative Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, to remove the Bituminous Coal Commission from the exempt list carried 164 to 53. And Representative Crosser (Democrat), of Ohio, succeeded 126 to 100 in exempting the National Mediation Board, the Railroad Retirement Board and the Railroad Adjustment Board.

Other Exempted Agencies

Besides the agencies mentioned, the bill's exempt list now includes the Army Engineer Corps, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Power Commission, Federal Trade Commission, General Accounting Office, Interstate Commerce Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Board of Tax Appeals, Employes Compensation Commission, Maritime Commission, Tariff Commission and the Veterans' Administration.

An amendment by Crosser to deny the President power to abolish "functions" as well as agencies, was defeated 162 to 136.

13 Who Testified On Insurance Reported Fired

New York, March 8 (AP).—A Federal investigation of the reported discharge of 13 Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. agents who testified recently before the national monopoly committee was requested today by Lewis Merrill, general president of the United Office and Professional Workers of America.

In a letter to Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a member of the committee, Merrill said, "This action of the company serves to intimidate any other agents who may be subpenaed by the Government . . ."

He declared the dismissal was an attempt by the company "to whitewash itself by placing responsibility on the agents for malpractices in the holding of elections." The agents testified on "forging" of ballots in elections to the board.

Don't Send Funds To 'Prisoners' In Mexico

The State Department again warned citizens of the United States yesterday to be on their guard against a "swindle scheme" practiced by a person or persons in Mexico.

The department said a person in Mexico who represents himself to be in distressing circumstances (usually imprisoned) appeals through the mails for funds. A generous reward is promised for assistance.

Savings of $285,000,000 in bills in "a secret place" is the lure in letters recently circulated.

De Valera Guarded On Way to Vatican

London, March 8 (U.P.).—A score of Scotland Yard men and uniformed policemen today guarded Prime Minister De Valera of Ireland when he stopped here en route to Vatican City for the coronation of Pope Pius XII.

The guard was assigned because of recent terroristic activities ascribed to the outlawed "Irish Republican Army."

Ruling Due Today On Steel Wages

Justice Bailey will rule today on the petition of three Eastern independent steel producers for an injunction against enforcement by Secretary Perkins of minimum wage scales in the industry.

The Lukens Steel Co., Coatesville, Pa.; the Alan Wood Steel Co., Conshohocken, Pa., and Central Iron & Steel Co., Harrisburg, claimed Miss Perkins exceeded her authority by issuing blanket wage-hour orders under the Walsh-Healey act. The orders, they claimed, placed them at a disadvantage in bidding for Government contracts.

Vatican Pleased Kennedy Will Attend Ceremony

Vatican City, March 8 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt's appointment of Ambassador Kennedy to represent the United States at Sunday's coronation of Pope Pius XII tonight encouraged hope that diplomatic relations between Washington and the Holy See may be resumed before the end of this year.

Conservative church leaders were cheered by the selection of the ambassador, who is an ardent Catholic, and interpreted it as an "official seal to the opening of negotiations for resumption of normal diplomatic relations."

[Carpenters began building barricades in St. Peter's Square today to control the enormous crowds expected Sunday to witness the coronation on an outside balcony of the Basilica, the Associated Press said. More than 200,000 requests for tickets for the coronation mass inside St. Peter's had to be rejected.—Editor's note.]

Wallace Takes Cotton Plans To President

Treasury, Commerce And State Officials At Export Parley

Secretary Wallace yesterday laid before President Roosevelt proposals designed to alleviate the cotton situation—a situation which finds the bulk of current supplies tied up under Government loans and exports decreasing sharply.

Out of the conference, which was attended by Secretaries Morgenthau and Hopkins and Francis B. Sayre of the State Department, Administration recommendations to Congress are expected to develop.

Concerned over a 43 per cent loss in exports from last year's subnormal level, Wallace took the problem to the White House when congressional committees failed to agree on legislation after wrestling with the problem since early in the session.

Foreign buyers have been turning elsewhere for cotton largely because prices of the American staple have been above world levels and because of difficulties in obtaining ample supplies of some grades. The loan program has tended to peg American prices above foreign prices as well as "freeze" supplies.

Sources close to Wallace said he suggested at the White House conference that one of the following plans might be followed:

A two-price system under which foreign buyers could acquire cotton at world price levels, while domestic processors would be required to pay a bounty of 6 cents a pound. This bounty would be distributed among farmers co-operating with the Government's cotton-control program.

Continuance of the present loan program and addition of provisions for subsidizing exports.

Special subsidies to farmers keeping cotton of future crops from being placed under loan.

Release of upward of 3,000,000 bales of loan cotton to farmers agreeing to make further reductions in planting operations. Advocates believe this would tend to lower prices to competitive world levels.

ing to renewal of the Appalachian soft coal agreement, which expires March 31.

The peace talks, it was intimated, may proceed in New York intermittently with the labor contract negotiations with coal operators, which Lewis, as head of the United Mine Workers of America, must give prior attention.

Harry C. Bates, chairman of the A. F. of L. negotiating committee, yesterday said the Lewis proposal for an American Congress of Labor, and any other proposals which might be advanced, would be considered at the meeting Friday night. This was interpreted as a backdown from the previous A. F. of L. action in rejecting the Lewis suggestion as "fanciful."

A. F. of L. Makes Compromise.

Bates' announcement, however, it was learned, indicates a compromise. It was reported Lewis had taken the position that, if the A. F. of L. continued its previous attitude, the peace efforts might as well be dropped. To avoid being blamed for wrecking the negotiations, therefore, the A. F. of L. group agreed to "consider" all proposals.

The one feature of the Lewis plan which will receive consideration, it was disclosed, is that providing for equal representation by the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. on the executive body of his proposed labor congress.

Expectation was that negotiations might continue for six weeks or more. Even if the conferees finally disagree, it was explained, they may pave the way for settlement.

Secretary of Labor Perkins attended the opening conference for about half an hour. On leaving, she said she had been consulted about the "mechanics" of the negotiations. She would not comment on the Lewis proposal except to say that "everybody was surprised" by it.

A Key man in the negotiations, it was learned, is Daniel J. Tobin, head of the A. F. of L. teamsters union and a staunch advocate of labor harmony. Tobin, who will attend the meeting in New York, is said to be the man on whom President Roosevelt is relying heavily for definite results. It is reported that, after declining to serve on the A. F. of L. negotiating committee, he was induced to reconsider by direct intervention of the President.

Frank Sees Good in Some Monopolies

Remark Produces Heated Discussion Of NRA's Record

By the Associated Press.

A proposal by Jerome Frank, of the Securities and Exchange Commission that the Government sanction certain monopolies led the monopoly committee yesterday into a heated discussion of the results of NRA.

The clash began when Frank said the program he offered did not imply a return to the NRA. Prof. Frank A. Fetter, Federal Trade Commission consultant who was being questioned by Frank, expressed gratification.

Willis J. Ballinger, FTC economic adviser, broke in to say he had been "worried that you are in favor of a return to NRA." He asked what difference there was between Frank's suggestion and the NRA, in which there was total betrayal of the public interests."

Gives View of Faults

Frank replied that NRA was faulty because it operated under emergency pressure and "its attention was not directed primarily toward increasing production and lowering prices."

"We needn't throw the baby out with the bath water," Frank remarked. "Because there was a thing called NRA which made mistakes, everything that even remotely resembles it need not be condemned."

Leon Henderson, secretary of the monopoly committee and former NRA economist, took exception to any "complete and wholesale condemnation of NRA."

"If that kind of condemnation of all the effort of many earnest-minded people is to continue," Henderson said, "I shall ask the committee for an opportunity to discuss the constructive work of NRA."

"Out the Window," Says King

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, brought an end to the controversy by commenting that "NRA is out the window and I don't feel it is the duty of this committee to hold a post mortem on its vices or virtues." He added he believed any good features of NRA were due to the "ability, patriotism and fine work of Mr. Henderson."

Ballinger said that he felt he owed Henderson an apology. While there were earnest people in NRA "who were socially-minded, in the end they were pretty generally overwhelmed," he said.

Frank had suggested that there were certain types of industry in which monopoly would be "socially valuable."

Contending that the FTC had "over-simplified" the problem by declared rigid Government control to be the only alternative to free competition, Frank proposed that a system be worked out for co-operation and consultation between all elements of certain industries and the Government to arrive at maximum production, lowest possible prices and highest possible wages.

Trained Houseworkers Needed, Says Mrs. Kerr, WPA Leader

Director of Women's, Professional Projects Tells Luncheon There Is Shortage in Domestic Field; Predicts Attitude Change in Future

Before the 1940's have ended, "houseworkers" of this country will be going about their jobs with the precision and efficiency of present-day office workers—and no one will think of calling them domestics.

This was the prediction made yesterday at 1114 O street northwest, where Mrs. Florence Kerr, director of women's and professional projects for the WPA, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by workers on the District's WPA household service project.

"The best thing about training girls and women to be houseworkers is that there is a definite shortage of trained workers in the domestic field," Mrs. Kerr declared.

Standardization of hours and wages will come as employers are "educated" to the need for them, Mrs. Ella N. Putnam, supervisor of the project, declared.

"The odium that clings to the word 'domestic' has done as much to keep girls out of housework as has the low wages paid. It's still hard—and will be for 25 years, possibly—to get high school graduates interested in this type of employment.

"We have had 1,000 girls and women trained on the District projects. All who were being trained for outside jobs, got them. The really good persons got really good jobs, too," she said.

With Mrs. Kerr at the luncheon were Mrs. Blair Bannister, Assistant United States Treasurer; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, writer; Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee; Mrs. Mary Steele, local director of WPA projects for women; Mrs. George R. Meyercord, of Chicago, and Mrs. Bernice D. Schultz, assistant local director.

Greater Crisis In Europe Seen By U. S. Aide

The European situation today is "even more crucial" than at the time of the Czecho-Slovakian crisis, Dr. H. L. Dunn, Census Bureau statistician who spent last September in Germany, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia, yesterday told the Washington Rotary Club at its luncheon in the Willard.

"This is an extremely critical period," Dr. Dunn declared, "because Germany must act very soon, if it is act at all—in view of the speed with which her potential enemies are now preparing."

Roosevelt Son Warns Against Radio Censors

Elliott Pleads Before FCC for Taste, Free Speech

The Federal Government was warned yesterday by Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President and Texas radio executive, to avoid any function which might constitute censorship of radio stations.

He defined the best criterion for radio program control to be the "good taste" of broadcasters and listeners.

He asked that radio commentators be guaranteed complete freedom in their remarks. He expressed belief, however, that opportunity should be extended always for replies.

Before a monopoly inquiry by the Federal Communications Commission, Roosevelt called for Government representations to curb broadcasts emanating to this country from Mexican stations, which he said were degrading American standards.

Roosevelt opposed a suggested "bureau of standards," by which listener reactions would be charted for possible use in guiding Government radio sentiment.

Crawford, Chief Police Clerk, Ousted

Commissioners Act 'For Good of Service' On 11 Accusations

The District Commissioners yesterday ordered the removal of Howard E. Crawford as chief clerk and property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department "for the good of the service."

Suspended November 15, 1938, pending the outcome of an audit of the accounts and an investigation of conditions in his office, Crawford was recommended discharged by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

At the same time Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said the duties of the chief clerk and property clerk would be continued by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards. He said he doubted that a successor would be named.

"In event we decide to name a new chief clerk, he will be under the supervision of the major and superintendent of the Police Department," Hazen said.

Formerly, the chief clerk and property clerk was an independent agency in the department, Hazen said.

Specific Charges

The action of the commissioners was based on 11 specific charges drawn up by Maj. Brown. A portion of these changes follows:

Failure to turn over to the rightful owner any part of proceeds received from the sale of an automobile received in his possession as property clerk.

Unserviceable pistols which should have been dumped into the Potomac River were found in Crawford's locker cabinets.

Pistols taken from suspects were later found in Crawford's office desk.

Failure to keep legible and understandable records of receipts and disbursements as property clerk and permitted an accumulation of moneys and other articles of value in envelopes and containers, unmarked for identification, and permitted Government and private property of value to become comingled with his own personal property.

Made application for car tokens and received them, knowing that he had in his possession thousands of car tokens.

Order Quoted

On February 17 Crawford, through his attorney, James A. O'Shea, filed an answer to the charges. The Commissioners' order yesterday said:

"Whereas the Commissioners of the District of Columbia having carefully reviewed the charges against Howard E. Crawford, chief clerk and property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District, and reply filed by him in answer to said charges, and report made by the Corporation Counsel on the charges and answer, find the said Howard E. Crawford guilty of the charges filed against him, it is hereby ordered that Howard E. Crawford is hereby removed as an employe of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District for the good of the service, effective from and after November 15, 1938."

Crawford was appointed chief clerk and property clerk of the police department on December 24, 1931, and property officer on March 28, 1933.

Tour of Va. Historic Sites Planned

Indian lore and historical records of early Colonial life will be studied at the Stafford Courthouse, Stafford, Va., on a tour to be conducted Sunday by James F. Duhamel, corresponding secretary of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District.

The tour will include visits to Quantico, Mount Vernon, Fort Belvoir, the Robert E. Lee mansion and other points. Luncheon will be held at historic Pohick Church. Members of the tour will leave Washington from 1416 F street northwest at 9 a. m. and return at 5:30 p. m., C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, sponsors of the tour, said.

Ohio State Society To Meet Monday

The Ohio State Society will meet Monday at 8:30 p. m. to elect officers for the coming year. Former Senator Bulkley, president of the society, will preside.

Highlight of the meeting will be a report on Ohioan's part in Government circles by Representative Ludlow, of Indiana, former president of the National Press Club and former columnist for a newspaper in Columbus, Ohio. Walter Howe, member of the National Symphony Orchestra, will play the vibraphone. A dance will follow the entertainment.

Secretaries Turn Waitresses; Senator Passes Pickets, in Hotel Strike

Strike

Musicians and other organized employes waited word from their union headquarters before taking action. Meanwhile, diners at most of the 13 beleaguered hotels had music as usual.

The strike, which originally involved the Ambassador and Roger Smith hotels, spread to 11 others early yesterday. Striking service employes are members of the Hotel and Restaurant employes International Alliance, and the International Bartenders League, A. F. of L. affiliates.

Closed Shop Sole Issue

Although conflicting estimates of the size of the walkout came from union and hotel representatives, the mass demonstration was the largest in the history of Washington labor disputes. The union claims 2,200 employes left their jobs, but the hotel people contend the number is closer to 1,130—904 of whom walked out at dawn yesterday.

The sole issue, according to both sides, is the closed shop—whereby none but union members would be hired. The present strike affects waiters, bartenders and kitchen help, although in some instances bellhops, chambermaids and elevator operators joined the walkout.

The hotels around which picket lines have been thrown include the Wardman Park, Shoreham, Raleigh, Mayflower, Willard, Harrington, Carlton, Lee House, New Colonial, Continental and Lafayette. A walkout was staged at the Ambassador and Roger Smith Powhatan last week. The Annapolis, Washington and Hay-Adams House have pending negotiations with the union and for this reason action was withheld.

At the Mayflower Hotel, where officials said they had enjoyed a "remarkable day in the coffee shop" and "one of our largest afternoons in the cocktail lounge," it was stated that only 125 out of a normal total of 750 employes have walked out. "A good part" of the 125 have been replaced, the management said.

Hardly had the strike been announced yesterday when hotel employment offices were swamped with offers of outside aid, it was reported. Lines of unemployed workers waited to be interviewed for jobs at at least a half dozen of the larger hotels—some even came from Baltimore and Philadelphia, hotel officials said.

By midafternoon, with their depleted service ranks augmented by replacements, nearly every hotel reported "business as usual." Main dining rooms in several cases were closed, and all meals were served in coffee shops. In each of the hotels affected by yesterday's walkout, secretaries turned waitresses and business executives served drinks, carried baggage and ran elevators.

An effort to adjust the deadlock will be attempted today by Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, it was reported last night. Colvin said he had got in touch with both sides and indicated a conference would be held some time this morning.

"I have been exploring the situation very carefully," Colvin said, "to see if there can be any basis for an adjustment."

Numerous Federal officials and members of Congress were delayed at breakfasttime yesterday.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, father of the Wagner labor act, said he avoided going through the picket lines by using a side door of the Shoreham Hotel.

Speaker Bankhead of the House said he "hoped the strike would soon be settled," but declined to comment on whether he would pass the pickets at the Mayflower.

Several other public figures, including Senators Glass, Capper and J. Hamilton Lewis, who all live at the Mayflower, said they "noticed some delay," but were quick to come to the defense of the hotel management.

At the Willard, where 160 of a total of 275 employes walked out, Managing Director Harry Somerville said he was forced to close his main dining room, but anticipated no discomfort to patrons because of the nonunion coffee shop.

At a luncheon of the Rotary Club at the Willard, members were forced to wait upon themselves, but took the whole thing good-naturedly. The meeting was transferred from the main ballroom on the top floor to the ground floor dining room because enough waiters were not available to carry the food up.

The biggest problem, hotel managers agreed, was replacing chefs.

"We aren't having a bit of trouble finding waiters and other help," said Somerville, "but it is hard to find someone who can cook."

He said women cooks might be used in the Willard kitchen for the first time in its history.

Skeleton Staff Serves

At the Wardman Park and Carlton, 184 out of a total personnel of 752 joined the strike. The Shoreham reported 125 out.

Lunch time at the Mayflower found officials faced with providing service to several hundred delegates to the dental convention. Osgood Roberts, executive assistant, reported the luncheon was served in record time with a skeleton staff.

Gardner Moore, manager of the Shoreham, and also president of the Hotel Men's Association, said he felt the "next move" was up to the union. He indicated the hotel men would not yield to the union demands.

Yesterday's strike was called after the union refused to accept a "preferential shop" agreement under which the hotel people would use union help whenever possible but would not require union membership as compulsory before employment.

Samuel Levine, attorney for the union, said the walkout was called "to prevent the union from breaking up."

Union locals involved are the Bartenders, No. 75; Service Workers, No. 80, and Catering Workers, No. 781.

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the hotel interests, said the "preferential shop" proposal would stand as the managements' final concession.

Executives' Secretaries Are Waitresses in Hotel Strike

When things became acute after waiters and bartenders walked out of the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, Mrs. Francis Lyon, secretary to Osgood Roberts, executive assistant, and Miss Marie Ethridge, secretary to C. J. Mack, assistant manager, donned aprons and took over duties in the coffee shop.

"I made $1.60 in tips," laughed Miss Ethridge, after it was all over. "It was the fastest I ever made that much money—but golly, do my feet hurt!"

Both agreed they would never again "bawl out" a waitress. Miss Ethridge had a bit of trouble serving because she is left-handed, but she said the customers were "understanding."

They said they would stick to typing and shorthand.

Everyone from the manager on down joined the depleted staff at the Raleigh and carried baggage and ice water.

Senator Robert Wagner, strong friend of labor, lives at the Shoreham. He used a side door to avoid going through the picket lines.

Secretary of State Hull was delayed a few moments while leaving the Carlton because the line of pickets was passing the driveway and blocked his car.

C. I. O. Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, here to attend labor peace conferences, checked out of the Carlton soon after the strike was called.

The A. F. of L. transferred its scheduled banquet for Lewis G. Hines, retiring organization director, from the Willard to the Washington. The dinner will be held Saturday, and the Washington is one of the few hotels not being picketed.

A woman at the Shoreham made sure she was going to eat. After stocking up on provisions at a nearby store, she said:

"I've been through these things in New York—and I'm not going hungry."

Britain Ready For 'Any War,' 3 Chiefs Say

Hore-Belisha, Wood And Duff Cooper Warn of Her Might

By International News Service.

London, March 8.—Three of Great Britain's most powerful spokesmen tonight thundered a broadside warning potential aggressors that Britain is now ready to fight and win in "any war."

War Secretary Hore-Belisha began the concerted admonition with a description of Britain's powerful, streamlined, and mechanized army.

Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air, then proclaimed that Britain's air force is comparable to any in the world.

And Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned from the Cabinet last year in protest against "capitulations" to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, added the most stirring touch. He suggested a foreign legion composed of German refugees, who might make the "best soldiers when turned against their own country."

"Land Fleet" Ready

Hore-Belisha, presenting record army estimates of $805,665,000 for the coming year to the Commons, pictured a "land fleet," a vast army on wheels capable of striking with disastrous speed anywhere on the continent of Europe.

He disclosed that Britain now has a "field force trained and equipped to meet the event of war."

It is composed of 13 infantry divisions, 3 motorized divisions, 3 armored car divisions, 2 cavalry brigades and several miscellaneous units.

Exclusive of troops stationed in India and Burma, Britain now has 531,353 men available for service immediately, an increase of 83,000 in a year, the war secretary said. Speaking in glowing terms of the tremendous advances in British armament, he said that with Britain's "formidable land fleet:

"We now are able to carry one-half our entire infantry personnel awheel, with the entire army's equipment and ammunition.

"If we are involved in war, our contribution will not be half-hearted, or be based on any theory of limited liability. . . .

"We on our side have made plans in great detail. We have calculated the shipping required, have made productive arrangements and plans for the accumulation of reserve equipment in order to make it possible for us to deliver the maximum effort in a continental war. . . .

"Security Against Invasion"

"British-French (general staff) conversations are based on defense, not aggression . . . but our foremost obligation is to give, insofar as it can be contrived humanly, our people that security against invasion which they are determined to achieve.

"Provision for the security of Britain itself is the governing factor and the first principle in the disposition of our forces . . .

"But the prime minister's declaration of solidarity with France makes it incumbent in us to consider to prepare for use a field force in certain eventualities.

"Conversations between ourselves and the French have not committed us in this respect, but prudent minds should be ready for any eventuality."

Sir Kingsley Wood, the air secretary, then took up the warning:

"It can be said that so far as our new aircraft are concerned, they are as formidable as any in the world. Certainly some types that we possess I believe to be the best in the world."

He revealed that aircraft production is increasing every week, and added:

"We still have much to do, but we can record at any rate a great increase in our intrinsic strength."

Bishop Ryan Proposes a Catholic Congress To Promote Friendship Between Americas

Lays Groundwork In Airplane Tour Of South America

The Most Rev. James H. Ryan, D. D., Bishop of Omaha, who recently made an 18,000-mile airplane tour of South America, yesterday visualized a great Pan-American Catholic Congress as a means of strengthening relations between the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Bishop Ryan, who is to see President Roosevelt today and tell of his experience on the good-will tour, said he could think of nothing that would better develop inter-American confidence than such a religious conclave.

Tradition is Catholic

"South America is, by tradition and by faith, almost completely Catholic," Bishop Ryan said. "There are many Catholic churchmen down there, however, who because of lack of contact regard the United States as purely a Protestant country. It was pointed out to them that this is a Chrisian country, but not Protestant. They were very much interested to learn that the largest single Christian body in the United States was the Catholic Church.

"The Catholic Church of South America is kindly disposed toward North America, and would welcome anything that would bring the Catholics of the two continents closer together. There remains now the working out of a plan, the setting up of an organization, that will make the Catholic congress a reality."

Bishop Ryan, who had as a flying companion the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religion at the Catholic University of America, was the first member of the American hierarchy to make a planned tour of South America.

Groundwork Laid

The American prelates did much to lay the groundwork for a Pan-American religious conference. They invited Cardinal Leme, of Brazil, and Cardinal Copello, of Argentina, and other high-ranking churchmen to attend the golden anniversary celebration at Catholic University in November. Plans for the proposed conference might begin to take shape at that time.

Bishop Ryan agreed with Father Sheehy that Nazi propaganda in

BISHOP RYAN

South America has proved a boomerang.

"The truth is that Communist and Nazi propaganda have been more effective in the United States than in South America," Bishop Ryan said. "Such ideologies are extremely distasteful to South Americans."

Recalling a conversation he had with a high-ranking official of one South American republic, Bishop Ryan quoted him as saying:

"I will keep the Nazis out of ——, if the United States will keep the Communists out of ——."

Communists From U. S.

This official, Bishop Ryan said, explained that most of the Communist agitators who came to his country had passports from the United States.

The Omaha prelate, while minimizing the effectiveness of Nazi propaganda in South America, suggested that the newspaper profession of the United States ought to do something about the Nazi-subsidized Interocean News Service, which supplies "garbled and anti-American" news reports to small South American newspapers free of charge.

American movies are very popular in South America, Bishop Ryan said. One way Hollywood might help further, he said, was to produce some films based on the careers of that continent's popular heroes. Also, he said, it would help if stars like Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney made personal appearances down there.

Bishop Ryan, who is stopping at the Mayflower Hotel, proudly displayed a newspaper clipping of a forecast he made before the College of Cardinals began balloting on the new Pope. He picked Cardinal Pacelli as the cardinals' choice, even though at that time "experts" in Rome were counting him out.

Bishop Ryan had met the new Pope on visits to Rome. He also saw him in 1936 when, as secretary of state for the Vatican, he flew across the United States, stopping briefly at Omaha and making a more extended stop at St. Paul. Pius XII, like his predecessor, desires peace above all else, Bishop Ryan said, "true peace, the peace of Christ." That means, he said, that he is against exaggerated nationalism and racism, with all its "intolerant stupidities and cruelties."

Pius' Policy Stated

"Does all this mean that Pius XII is certain to clash with the states and individuals who hold doctrines opposed to his? Not necessarily. The Pope is not a fire-eater; he is not a dictator nor a tyrant. He will make every concession possible to the point of view of other people.

"But one thing he will not concede — that error is truth. There is one thing that he will not compromise—Christian justice. Where truth and justice are involved, Pius XII will not budge an inch. If the totalitarian states, therefore, wish to push the new Pope into a conflict, they can do so, for it is simply unthinkable that he will sacrifice a jot or tittle of the truth because some powerful statesmen insist that he do so."

Arab State Seen as Final British Plan

London Promises Decision Next Week As Conference Fails

By the Associated Press.

London, March 8.—The British government today decided to impose its own "final plan" for controlling the Holy Land after failure of month-long efforts to get Arabs and Jews to compose their differences over a London conference table.

The British decision, understood to have been made at a cabinet meeting today, constituted an admission that the London conference had broken down.

Decision "Next Week"

Arab and Jewish delegates were notified the British plan would be submitted to both sides "early next week." A British spokesman said Britain "will not agree to consider any major changes" once the plan is drafted.

The British plan was expected to provide for creation of an Arab state in Palestine with Jews constituting a permanent minority, a formula that Britain has threatened to impose since Arabs and Jews failed to reach any agreement of their own.

Almost three years of Arab-Jew conflict have cost more than 3,250 lives in Palestine, inflicted injuries on thousands of persons and cost an estimated $50,000,000, leaving the Arabs and Jewish inhabitants unreconciled.

Arabs demand immediate stoppage of Jewish immigration to Palestine, creation of an independent Arab state and termination of Britain's League of Nations mandate over Palestine.

Equality Demanded

Jews demand equality of status for the estimated 402,000 Jews in the Holy Land. The Arab population is about 883,000. In addition Jews ask support of the 1917 Balfour declaration in which Britain promised to promote the development of a national home for Jews in Palestine.

A final appeal to Colonial Secretary MacDonald was sent today by Jewish representatives asking a specific statement of Britain's intentions regarding the rights of Jews to buy land in Palestine, to migrate there and enjoy equal rights.

It was understood the ultimate Jewish decision regarding the British plan would be left in the hands of the Jewish conference executive committee.

British Make Loans to Save Chinese Dollar From Extinction

By the Associated Press.

London, March 8.—Chancellor of the Exechequer Sir John Simon announced today two British banks had contributed half of a £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) currency stabilization fund newly established by the Chinese government.

The move was called a thrust at Japan's expansionist policy and an effort to protect £180,000,000 ($900,000,000) in British investments in China against a Chinese-Japanese financial conflict.

Sir John told Commons the British government shortly would ask approval for a guarantee by the treasury of the private Britsh subscription.

To a question by Frederick John Bellenger, Labor member, whether "consultations took place with the United States prior to the loan," Sir John replied that he thought his statement "will generally be welcomed by other countries than our own."

(A financial battle was foreseen between the Chinese government currency and the Japanese-sponsored federal reserve bank notes beginning Friday, when Japan has forbidden the circulation of the Chinese dollar in North China. The Chinese dollar is worth about 16 cents.

(With the Yuan notes of the federal reserve bank, established in Peiping March 10, 1938, the Japanese hope to drive Chinese currency out of North China, and thereby be able to meet large military expenditures there without drawing on limited Japanese foreign exchange and to impose a trade barrier to foreign competitors. The Japanese-sponsored yuan thus far has no standing in foreign exchange markets outside Japan's own yen bloc.

(Foreign observers believed Japanese efforts to dominate North China economically would depend on the outcome of the contest.)

give too much power to the President. He told The Washington Post, "I wouldn't even trust my own mother with all that power. As a Senator, I want to have some part in shaping policies that involve danger of war."

The bill was offered hard on the heels of President Roosevelt's verbal onslaught on the neutrality act at his press conference Tuesday.

Meanwhile, it was indicated that the long-postponed hearings on revision of American neutrality laws might get under way within two weeks, with an impressive list of State Department officials, university professors and students of the neutrality question appearing as witnesses.

Pass Submarines Bill

The Senate passed a $5,000,000 bill to modernize three large Navy submarines. The measure, which now goes to the House, would increase the speed and install new type torpedo control systems on the Argonauts, Narwhal and Nautilus.

Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff of the Army, appeared before the House Appropriation Committee in executive session, to urge adoption of the $119,539,28" supplemental Army fund to provide additional seacoast defenses and modern weapons for the "initial protective force" of 400,000 men.

Meanwhile the Navy announced that the Coast Guard will join with military and naval forces in testing the defenses of New York and New England next month. Two hundred Army and Navy planes, 13 naval vessels and all available Coast Guard craft and Army troops will form a "blue force" defending a 350-mile coast line against an attacking "black force."

Two Navy admirals, Ben Moreell and Arthur J. Hepburn, appeared before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee to urge approval of the $5,000,000 project for developing Guam as an air base. Admiral Moreell, chief civil engineer of the Navy, told the group that transfer of the controversial item to a rivers and harbors bill would cause delay. The committee is planning such a step.

Quiz Hepburn on Guam

Members of the committee questioned Admiral Hepburn repeatedly regarding the strategic importance of Guam and the Navy plans as to its fortification. The admiral, who headed a naval board which recommended establishment of an air and submarine base on the island, said the $5,000,000 development proposed by the Navy Department would make it valuable as a "warning post." Its greatest value, however, would be realized in creating a strong fortified base, while for $200,000,000, he testified, the harbor at Guam could be made to hold the entire U. S. fleet.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, questioned Admiral Hepburn regarding the linking of an American base at Guam, French bases in Indo-China, and the British stronghold at Singapore into a "great Pacific barrier." Bone said "there is talk all over the country" of such a move. Hepburn answered that "if a working alliance existed," the chain of bases "would be very effective."

Would Question Japan

At the request of Senator Johnson (Democrat), of California, the Senate Naval Committee agreed to ask Secretary of State Hull if Japan has broken treaty obligations not to fortify the mandate islands which surround Guam.

Berlin, March 8.—The daily line of Jewish applicants for American visas filed today past two policemen instead of the usual one as the result of a minor riot yesterday in the vestibule of the United States Consulate here.

American consular officers, it was learned today, have received 240,000 visa applications—half the estimated Jewish population of Germany.

Bodies of 3 Canadians Found in Wrecked Plane

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

DRY MARTINI 71 PROOF

COCKTAIL PRIMER

Q. Why does a bartender shake cocktails?
A. To chill them — but principally to blend the ingredients.
Q. Are cocktails at their best immediately after this blending?
A. By no means! The world's most popular cocktails — the kind served on all fast trains — are blended long before you drink them.
Q. Is this an advantage?
A. Decidedly! Instead of being mixed with a quick shake — ingredients have time to "wed" into smooth, delicious perfection.
Q. How can I get these fine, flavorful cocktails?
A. By asking your dealer today for Heublein's CLUB COCKTAILS . . . ready-mixed in the bottle.

G. F. Heublein & Bro., Hartford, Conn.

● CHOOSE FROM THESE SEVEN VARIETIES
Dry Martini (71 proof), Martini (Medium Sweet) (60 proof), Manhattan (65 proof), Daiquiri (70 proof), Old Fashioned (80 proof), Side Car (60 proof), and Bronx (60 proof). What isn't used from any opened bottle keeps indefinitely.

HEUBLEIN'S The CLUB COCKTAILS

2 Cocktails for 25¢ — *With adequate shaker-icing—you get 18 drinks from each CLUB COCKTAIL bottle. At current prices, this averages about two drinks for a quarter, or less . . . depending upon variety.

Miss Hepburn Perplexed By Capital Audiences

Misses Laughs Scored in Other Cities; Adds Lament Over Local Child Labor Law; Brief 'Takes' on Local Amusements

KATHARINE HEPBURN is a bit perplexed by Washington audiences—as many stars have been before her. It all harks back to that more or less groundless charge that theatrical audiences in the National Capital are the coldest in the world, a stigma which this city seems to be encountering some difficulty in living down, although I do not perceive in what particular this should be borne in upon Miss Hepburn's consciousness. The reception she received in the stellar role of Philip Barry's new comedy of "The Philadelphia Story," in the National Theater on Monday night, was one of the most tumultuous of the season.

BELL

However, in a brief chat in her dressing-room following yesterday's matinee performance, Miss Hepburn wondered why Washingtonians didn't laugh as much at certain points in the play as audiences in New Haven and Philadelphia had done. The idea of the ebullient college spirit, in the first instance, and "The Philadelphia Story's" being a Philadelphia "home-town" play, in the second, was brought up.

"Quite true," Miss Hepburn admitted, "but the play still isn't sufficiently localized to Philadelphia to make all that difference." That seems to be true. Perhaps Washington is just a bit slow on the trigger, but I still am of the impression that if any more laughs were registered during the progress of the three acts and four scenes the audience would be the loser by having obliterated from its ears speeches that deserve to be heard.

Needless to say, Miss Hepburn is highly enthused by the reception "The Philadelphia Story" has been accorded in every city in which it has been presented. It is pleasant to have a hit on one's hands.

Asked about future film commitments, Miss Hepburn was eagerly candid in saying that that would depend entirely upon the length of life of her present vehicle on the boards. She was equally and characteristically frank in her expression of the belief that her success in the recent screen version of the Mr. Barry's "Holiday" had had nothing in particular to do with the fashioning of her present play to her measure by Mr. Barry. She understudied Hope Williams in the original stage production of "Holiday," assumed the stellar role on the screen with a complete comprehension of what it was all about and looks upon the fabrication of her current play as the result of a long friendship with Author Barry rather than as any impetuous outgrowth of a signally successful performance on the screen in one of his earlier plays. All of the tangible evidence seems to be on Miss Hepburn's side.

When we barged in on "Katie" at the most inopportune hour on the worst day of her week—5 o'clock on matinee day—she was typically gracious, good-humored and remote from her libelously alleged antipathy toward the press. Miss Hepburn never has been in the least belligerent toward this particular press and yesterday merely kept her score perfect for camaraderie and patience. If you have to know everything, she was perched on the couch in her dressing room when we entered, pulling on a manish-looking tan shoe to match her dark brown slacks and gabardine jacket. When she slipped out to battle the crowd of autograph-hunters banked about the stage entrance to the National—under the muscular protectorate of Sergt. Harrington of the traffic squad—she had snuggled into the slightly contradictory warmth of a huge mink coat. She was bound for her hotel for a between-show snack. The prospect of a waiters' strike and short rations—if any—seemed to worry her no whit, as the saying is.

The Hepburn, as anyone in like circumstances would be, is enthusiastic over the prospects of a considerable New York run for her new play—the best she has had to date in a career that has not been particularly circumscribed in the living theater.

"The Philadelphia Story" moves from the National to Boston for two weeks and then goes directly to Broadway and the "Death Watch." That "Death Watch" was pretty malicious in its attitude toward Miss Hepburn in "The Lake." They will find it difficult to defend a like stand in the case of "The Philadelphia Story." It is an ultra-smart comedy, exceedingly well played by a well-balanced and competent cast.

Both Miss Hepburn and her director, Robert B. Sinclair, whom we accosted on the way out, feel that the Barry comedy has been done a rank injustice here by the operation of the indefensible District child labor law that imposes restrictions upon traveling "road" attractions that it does not see fit to make applicable to local enterprises designed for commercial gain.

This is not to say that they do not recognize the merit of Lorraine Bate's performance in the role of Dinah Lord, but merely to imply that a 12-year-old girl is able to give a more perfect impersonation of a 12-year-old girl than an actress sufficiently older to meet the inequitable demands of a law that prohibits appearances by actresses under 18 years of age.

It is a thoroughly cockeyed law, but what to do?

So yesterday's mail came mostly from South America . . . A postcard arrived from Sidney and Celia Lust, mailed in Rio de Janeiro some time in February, and no sooner had we received it than Sid called up from his office, having arrived home on the S. S. Normandie in a neck-and-neck finish with his written message . . . What goes on with the South American mail service? . . . From the same point of origin came an equally pretty postage card from Tony Muto, gradually working his way north from a comprehensive tour of the South American continent . . . Fox Movietone News must have a few undisclosed plans up its sleeve—if it has a sleeve . . . Then there was another letter from Maynard Owen Williams, of the National Geographic, having himself a time, of one sort or another, in Buenos Aires . . . Mr. Williams saw "You Can't Take It With You" in Buenos Aires under the title of "Live As You Please" . . . Not bad, at that . . . And this afternoon "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" opens at Keith's . . . Don't forget that . . .

Molly Picon, darling of the Yiddish Theater, will appear in "Mamele," her latest musical talkie, at the Masonic Temple Auditorium, one day only, on Sunday, March 12 . . . The King-Smith Playhouse School of the Theater invites anyone interested to attend a rehearsal of "Angels of War," tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock . . . Visitors will be taken backstage to watch the wheels go 'round . . . There will be an extra Thursday matinee of "Five Kings" at the National next week.

New York, March 8

THE AMERICAN railroads are arranging a joint World's Fair Exhibit to be called "Railroads on Parade" . . . Kurt Weill is writing the music and Charles Alan is directing the job . . . Alan decided that the entertainment value of one of the scenes would be enhanced by including four white oxen, but suspected that his superiors would not approve of using oxen in a railroad show. And so, in his budget request, Alan cloaked the expense of hiring these animals by including them among the cast and giving each ox a fictitious actor's name . . . It might have remained undiscovered—but the facts were revealed yesterday. All because the World's Fair officials, preparing to issue passes for all employees, requested photos of each member of the cast.

THE PRESENT schedule calls for Claude Bowers, who just was relieved as Ambassador to Spain, to be transferred to Peru. Hugh Wilson is slated to go to Madrid . . . Fred Astaire will return to New York and appear in a show for Dwight Wiman . . . Sigourney Thayer, the New York socialite, will be sued by an usher at the Majestic Theater. Thayer allegedly slapped the usher's face during a performance of "Stars in Your Eyes" . . . Archie Firestone, the former assistant district attorney who committed suicide last week, had been appointed by Gov. Lehman two days before as assistant counsel in the insurance fund investigation.

SAM GOLDWYN has retained Max Steuer in his suit against United Artists . . . Goldwyn's lawyer, until recently, was Charles Schwartz . . . And Schwartz has been retained as one of the counsel to defend United Airtists in this suit . . . To add to the complications until October 1 of last year, Max Steuer was trial-counsel for Charles Schwartz.

IF, AS EXPECTED, Thomas R. Amlie asks the President to withdraw his nomination for the Interstate Commerce Commission, the job has been promised to a member of the American Labor Party . . . If the dates can be arranged, Warner Bros.' new film, "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," will have its world premiere at Madison Square Garden—where the Nazi Bund Rally was held a few days ago . . . Because of the McKesson, Robbins story, Schenley's new report will show that they've hired a Wall Street engineering firm to check on all its inventories—all to prove that every asset claimed by the Schenley books actually exists—on paper and in fact.

WHEN THE BOAT from Nassau arrived in New York yesterday, two socialites were discovered to have been unwilling stowaways . . . The two are Paul Bancroft, jr., and Harry Rust, who left the boat to walk New York's streets shortly before noon—still wearing the white tie and tails they wore when they boarded the boat in Nassau to say good-by to Billy Joyce and Mrs. Harold Ross . . . They forgot to heed the "All Ashore" warning and so became passengers against their will . . . Both men returned to Nassau last night—on the first plane back.

BRAZIL'S ARANHA, who first suggested that America's unemployed go to Brazil and find opportunity there, soon will announce another plan for the unemployed to work in new factory set-ups here. He will explain how it is possible for the United States and South America to profit thereby . . . Richard Himber will be Lew Brown's new musical director . . . The State Senate, which is holding up the re-appaintment of Morris Ernst to the State Banking Board because of an accusation that he is a red, yesterday found a ready answer to that charge . . . Ernst, a true liberal who for years has attacked all dictatorships—of the right and of the left—yesterday was attacked in the Daily Worker, the Communist newspaper.

SUNDAY'S NEWSPAPERS featured photographs of a group of Savoy Ballroom jitterbugs, breaking ground for a World's Fair exhibit by the sheer force of their stompin' . . . After the photographs were taken and the group departed, the officials discovered that the jitterbugs had broken the wrong ground . . . The plot on which they had operated—and the ground the jitterbugs had broken—actually was the territory assigned to Morris Gest's Midget Village.

AUGUST W. HALFELD, who represents the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger in New York, called Macaulay's, which just published "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler," and asked for a review copy. "Review copies," he was told, "are presented only to representatives of papers published in places where copies of the book can be sold"

THE CURRENT STORY is of a German refugee who stepped off the boat and wore, on his coat, a tag bearing a West 192d Street address. A gyp-hackie took the refugee into his cab and started to drive him to the West 192d Street address, but by way of Canarsie. After one block, the refugee tapped on the window and directed: "Up the West Side Highway ramp, please."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood March 8 (I.N.S.).—Put the name Greer Garson down in your book for future reference. You'll be talking about her when "Goodbye Mr. Chips" is released and even more when "May Flavin" is filmed. Yes, she is the choice of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the Irish girl whose life story is told in Myron Brinig's widely read novel. At the time "May Flavin" was bought for $55,000, both Margaret Sullavan and Barbara Stanwyck were mentioned as possibilities. Either would have been good.

LOUELLA PARSONS

But Miss Garson was born in Ireland and is 100 per cent Irish even though she has spent most of her acting life on the English stage. She has left London, and is on her way back to Hollywood with a new contract, and it is probably Sam Wood's enthusiastic letters that have brought about the Flavin idea.

Bette Davis, after her performance in "Dark Victory," proved that she is a Katharine Cornell, Helen Hayes and Lynn Fontanne rolled in one. She can always be depended upon to come through with a great performance no matter how difficult her role. Today, Hal Wallis taking stock of all the plays he has on hand for her, decided to follow "The Old Maid" with "The Miracle," putting it ahead of "All This and Heaven, Too." The Reinhardt play is to be a $2,000,000 Technicolor spectacle, and will have the personal advise of Prof. Reinhardt, although Edmund Goulding will actually direct.

We are certainly in a death cycle, just as the New York stage seemed to be last summer, with "On Borrowed Time," "Dark Victory," "The End of the World," and now "The Man Who Lost Himself." Well, maybe it's no bad to take a good look at what we must all face sooner or later. Leslie Howard is the star in the latter movie, and he will travel to England to make it with Walter Futter just as soon as he washes the grease paint off his face in "G. W. T. W." This particular death opus will be taken from a Devere Stackpole novel. The theme, a weird one, concerns a man who passes on and then returns to earth to do the things he always wanted to do. Leslie, I hear it whispered, should have had the lion's share of credit for "Pygmalion." He will again co-direct and co-produce and, of course, act.

Chatter in Hollywood. Errol Flynn, that happy wanderer, has been located. A telegram received today says "Dear Louella: We found Errol Flynn for you. He came out of hiding last night and went to the Stork Club with Jimmy Durante and Charles MacArthur. He told us to give you his love from Mexico." Signed. "Celebrity Service Earl Black well and Ted Strong." That's what I call being on the job. Now I'm wondering why all those postcards are arriving from Acapulco. Was Errol there or did he have them sent?

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Virginia Cherrill, here to see her mother, is very ill with flu. Now the wife of the Earl of Jersey, Virginia was once wed to Cary Grant; what a lot of chattering Lupe Velez and Billy Seymour were doing at the Beverly Derby. Wonder if Lupe is buying more "jools?" Joan Crawford, Miriam Hopkins and Ann Sheridan among the glamour girls who wept unashamed at the "Dark Victory" preview. Joan signed autographs with big tears rolling down her cheeks; too bad the Richard Rauber concert was the same night; Marlene Dietrich and a handful of movie folk want to the concert and the rest of Hollywood packed the Warner Theater; was Bridegroom Gene Markey's face a bright crimson when Nigel Bruce, Richard Greene and Basil Rathbone all kissed him at once? Never knew until today that Edith Nash, Irene Dunne's efficient secretary, is Ann Harding's sister; Sally Eilers with a real snow burn doing fancy figures at the Pan-Pacific Ice Arena.

Don Ameche, who steps off the train in New York today, wired Jack Barrymore to meet him at 21; a situation indeed when Ernest Truex, escorting Helen Gulliland, ran smack into his divorced wife with a well-known escort at Neville Fleeson's; Maurice Costello, yesterday's Clark Gable, dining on the strip with Anne Ritchie; the Fritz Leibers celebrating 28 years of married life tomorrow, and that almost a record; Mary Astor hurrying back from New York for the "Midnight" preview. What a week with "Dark Victory," "Midnight" and Irene Dunne's "Love Affair."

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 8.—At the opening of Stanley Rogues' (pardon me, Stanley Rose's) Gallery, with lights, [illegible] and celebs, Rose introduced Harpo Marx to Erskine Caldwell as "the biggest reader in Hollywood!" Now we know why Harpo does not talk. He can READ! Margaret Bourke-White, Caldwell's bride, wore a bridey grin, and a plucky, tweedie suit. They're off on their honeymoon to Hon-o-lulu!

HEDDA HOPPER

Eleanor Griffin, who collaborated on "Boy's Town," was telling the crowd around the punch bowl that she is going to deduct her dogs' upkeep from her income tax because they didn't produce puppies. Hubby Arthur Rankin found he owned 3,000 books when he took an inventory. He hasn't read them yet—they're for research.

'Tis said Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable are house shopping again.

Henry Koster completed "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" and celebrated by taking his wife for a walk on Hollywood boulevard! They'll be three in May.

Twentieth-Century produces 56 full-length features this year. Half of them under personal supervision of Darryl Zanuck. What with five story conferences going on simultaneously, his brain must feel like the "innards" of a signal tower.

The reason they house those Blackfoot Indians at Twentieth-Century is that Mr. Zanuck is afraid they might go—squawing!

The machine shop at Paramount has gone completely sissy. The male members of the cast of "Knights of the Round Table" have their fittings in the machine shop. Some of our men complain of stiff collars—well, I don't imagine a pair of King Arthur's shorts would be any more comfortable!"

Bob Florey, Paramount director, isn't buying any more statues for his Napoleon collection, sight unseen. A man in New Orleans wrote Bob saying he had one of the emperor and would send it along for $5. Bob sent the money, and it arrived today— a 4-inch one—of Wellington, who licked the pants off Nappie at Waterloo. Bob took his Waterloo philosophically, but he's having no more dealings wit' any other ambitious modern Wellingtons.

Universal is using some shots from a G-Man short, called "You Can't Get Away With It," for their new Crime Club picture. But J. Edgar Hoover, who was in the film, won't make a movie comeback. Studio has deleted all his scenes. Can they get away with it?

'Five Kings' Features New Theater Bills

At National Monday; Orson Welles Is Star; Other New Programs

"FIVE KINGS." Orson Welles and Burgess Meredith in the former's two-part arrangement of the Shakespeare chronicle plays, the first of which includes "Henry IV," parts 1 and 2, and "Henry V." Welles will play Falstaff and Meredith will be the Prince Hal. The company of more than 60 also includes Robert Speight, John Emery, Lora Baxter, Edgar Barrier, Morris Ankrum, Lawrence Fletcher, Eustace Wyatt, Grace Coppins, Alice John and Margaret Curtis. The engagement opens Monday evening, but because of Mr. Welles' radio commitments there will be no performance on Friday, in place of which there will be an extra matinee on Thursday, besides the Wednesday and Saturday afternoon performances. Evening performances begin at 8 and the matinees at 2.

RKO-Keith's

"YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN." W. C. Fields, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen in a new comedy written by Charles Bogle (W. C. Fields), with Mortimer Snurd, Constance Moore, Mary Forbes, Thurston Hall, Princess Baba, John Arledge and Ivan Lebedoff in the cast. Opens this afternoon at 5:30. Walt Disney's "Donald's Lucky Day" is held over.

Capitol

"FAST AND LOOSE." Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell in a romantic mystery concerning a valuable manuscript belonging to an eccentric millionaire. Reginald Owen, Ralph Morgan, Etienne Girardot, Alen Dinehart, Jo Ann Sayers and Joan Marsh have the principal supporting roles. Film Star John Boles, remembered from "The Desert Song," "Rio Rita" and many recent films, stops the stage show. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"THE OKLAHOMA KID." James Cagney as the central figure in an action drama of the westward surge of the 1890s, with Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Donald Crisp, Harvey Stevenson and Hugh Sothern, James Barton, Tedd Allen, the Del Rios and Carole Manners on the stage. Opens Friday morning.

Palace

"PYGMALION." Held over for a second week is George Bernard Shaw's first film. Leslie Howard is the phonetics exper' and Wendy Hiller the raucous flower girl whom he teachs to speak such beautiful English that she passes for a Duchess.

Metropolitan

"YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU." The winner of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award as the best picture of 1938 continues with Lionel Barrymore, Spring Byington, Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Donald Meek, Edward Arnold and Mischa Auer. Frank Capra's direction won him his third academy award for the best direction of the year.

Columbia

"TRADE WINDS." Frederic March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy and Ann Sothern in a gay round-the-world chase for a blonde beauty who turned brunette to evade arrest for murder. Director Tay Garnett took most of the background shots while on a cruise and Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell wrote the screenplay. Opens a return downtown engagement Friday morning.

Belasco

"... ONE THIRD OF A NATION ..." Sylvia Sidney and Leif Erikson in the screen version of the Federal Theater's "living newspaper," which was performed here last year by the Washington Civic Theater. Opens Saturday afternoon.

Trans-Lux

"MILDEWED MELODRAMA." Clips from the thrillers of other days, tops the list of shorts which also includes shots of skiiers from Sun Valley, Idaho, and life on the Sahara. "Donald's Ostrich," a Disney cartoon, and 35 minutes of newsreels complete a new bill which opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"ROWDY REVELS." Jean Williams, Fred Bender, Jack Rosen and Art Gardner top the cast of the burlesque production opening Sunday afternoon. Jitterbug contest starts this Saturday midnight with the finale "Jamboree" performance of Dian Rowland.

Recorder Takes It All Back; Owners Do Want Deeds

Dr. William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, announced yesterday he wished to withdraw any expression of his to the effect that property owners were not interested in having the original deeds to their land.

He said Monday that 1,500,000 documents—accumulated since 1792—were crowding seven vaults in his offices and he wished people would come to get them because it cost money to guard them and he needed the room. Dr. Thompkins hinted that many of those old deeds were worth money for the autographs of those who signed them.

The switchboard at the deeds building was swamped Monday and Tuesday and yesterday. Numerous inquiries came by mail, too.

Spy Suspect Admits Pay From Russian

Ex-Agent of U. S. Says Navy Knew He Gave Japan Data to Soviet

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 8.—Hafis Salich, former Naval Intelligence Bureau agent, admitted under cross-examination in the Federal espionage trial today that he received money seven times from Mikhail Gorin, local manager of Intourist, Soviet travel bureau.

Salich and Gorin are being tried on charges of trafficking in information concerning Japanese activities, obtained by the Naval Intelligence. Gorin's wife, Natasha, is charged with conspiring with them.

Asked about reported criticism by Gorin's superior over the information Salich had supplied, the witness testified he told Gorin that perhaps he should take no money but said the Russian replied:

"Never mind; sometime you will have information that is worth the money."

The defense rested late today without having called Gorin or his wife to the stand.

Isaac Pacht, attorney for the Gorins, indicated he was content to rest his case on the defense presented on behalf of Salich.

The Government also rested its case and final arguments were set for tomorrow morning.

Little

That hauntingly imaginative film, "Lost Horizon," returned yesterday morning for a week's run at the Little Theater.

James Hilton's "Shangri-La," the setting of this film, has become a new phrase in our language for "Utopia." The hidden garden spot on the Tibetan plain is a world where worry and ambition are unknown and the very ingenuousness of the place creates an atmosphere which remains with an audience long after the film is over.

Ronald Colman is a British consul in whose Chinese province war breaks out among the natives. In an effort to flee to Shanghai, he joins a little group that includes John Haword, as his brother; Edward Everett Horton, as a pedantic fossil collector; Thomas Mitchell, as a law-evading swindler, and Isabel Jewell, as a tubercular wanton. When their pilot takes them far off the sky-way to outer China, they crash amid the snows of Tibet. They are rescued by the inhabitants of a strange, secluded valley in which life is lived so peacefully that age and personal ambition mean nothing. All but the consul's brother find the life pleasant and fascinating, much to their amazement. But he, attracted by a strange young woman, played by Margo, seeks to return to the outer world.

Colman has been entrusted by the dying old Lama, Sam Jaffe, with carrying on the destiny of Shangri-La, but his brother urges him to return to the world they both knew. When they do reach the ice and snows of the mountains beyond the valley of the Blue Moon, the youthful Margo shows her real age and the young brother loses his mind. For long months Colman seeks to return to his life in Shangri-La and Jane Wyatt, whom he has loved.

It took a James Hilton to tell this fantasy in words. Frank Capra skillfully directed the film. Primarily, it is a romantic and spiritual adventure, a fascinating film which brings pleasure and joy to adults and children alike.

Also at the Little is an interesting travelogue of our own town, made in the summer of 1935, a matter which makes it seem an oddly strange town, quite foreign to our Capital of March winds, 1939.

expecting to back it up through action.

The Lea railroad legislation would create a new transportation board, give the carriers greater discretion in fixing their own rates, place heavy tolls on water carriers and transfer the Bureau of Roads to the new agency.

Lea declined to comment on any provisions of the new bill, which differs considerably from his own suggestions, but said:

"I have introduced this bill in accordance with my suggestions at the start of our committee's hearings that we ought to consider every suggestion from a responsible source."

Would Co-ordinate Rates

Lea's original bill, which the committee used as a basis for opening general hearings in January, would reorganize the Interstate Commerce Commission, giving it authority to co-ordinate rates among various types of transportation and power to establish minimum rates which would divert traffic to the type of agency best fitted to handle it.

Legislation to establish a new system of regional intermediate credit banks to extend credit to independent small business was introduced by Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, in the Senate, and Representatives Patman (Democrat), Texas, and Voorhis (Democrat), California, in the House.

The bills would establish the 12 intermediate credit banks with $120,000,000 capital from the RFC. Local credit associations would operate under them with the RFC subscribing up to $100,000 in preferred stock for each, with a total of $60,000,000 to be provided for this purpose.

Common stock subscriptions in the local associations would be insured up to $5,000 by an insurance fund of $100,000,000 from the RFC.

The RHA said that large gains in home financing activities under it have been made since the first of the year.

"The trend in the Middle West is very gratifying," it said, "because that section, until recently had been lagging behind the rest of the country."

Experts Assail President's Power To Devalue Dollar

The Administration's request that Congress continue President Roosevelt's power to devalue the dollar was under fire before the House Coinage, Weights and Measures Committee yesterday. Frederick A. Bradford, Lehigh University economist, recommended that devaluation powers be reclaimed by Congress.

Benjamin H. Beckhart, Columbia University professor, echoed Bradford's request and called for repeal of the silver purchase act.

Edwin W. Kemmerer, of Princeton University, said power to devalue the dollar "should not be placed in the hands of one man, but should be exercised by Congress."

7,000,000 Given Pay Rise in Italy

Rome, March 8 (AP).—Fascist authorities, an authoritative spokesman indicated tonight, have promulgated wage increases of 5 to 10 per cent for 7,000,000 workers.

Foreign observers believed the move was intended not only to meet higher living costs, but to lift the morale of the country to a higher point at a time when Italy is developing colonial demands on France.

Eleven cents an hour was the average for industrial workers in 1938, and commercial workers have averaged 79 cents per day.

M. P. Asks Oil Pipeline, Canada to England

London, March 8 (AP).—Col. John McNamara, Conservative member of Parliament, asked War Minister Hore Belisha today if it would not be possible to lay an oil pipeline from Canada to Britain. He said he understood there were no insurmountable engineering difficulties to such a line.

Citizens Submit Another District Plan of Reorganization

man Kennedy had asked him how many employes the District has.

McCoach replied "about 2,000," and then turned to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who said he believed there was 12,000. Kennedy added that the number exceeds 13,000.

Proposes Nine Departments

The nine departments which the Commissioners propose in lieu of the 17 departments suggested in the Griffenhagen report are: Finance, law, personnel, public safety, health, public welfare, public works, unemployment compensation and parks and recreation.

The Commissioners' plan leaves the independent status of the Board of Education and the library trustees intact as well as a dozen minor occupational boards and the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, which the Griffenhagen proposal would abolish.

Only one of the new departments suggested in the Griffenhagen report is accepted by the Commissioners without change. It is the welfare department, which Griffenhagen left almost intact.

Would Not Disturb P. U. C.

The District heads proposed that the Public Utilities Commission be left undisturbed, that the Police, Fire and Traffic departments be consolidated under a department of public safety and that the recorder's office, the superintendent of insurance, and the Alley Dwelling Authority and the Zoning Commission continue as now constituted.

The coroner's office, whose duties would be divided in the Griffenhagen set-up, is retained as an independent office in the Commissioners' plan.

The Department of Public Works, modeled somewhat after the present Engineer Department, would comprise five bureaus—Survey and Planning, Highways, Sanitary Engineering, Construction and Buildgineering, Construction and Building Management.

Besides the police, fire and traffic departments, the new Department of Public Safety would include the U. S. Park Police, the Zoo guards, the Department of Inspection, the Poundmaster and the Office of Superintendent of Weights, Measures and Markets.

Hazen Praises D. C. Record

Commissioner Hazen, in a lengthy review of the history of the District government and a critical analysis of the Griffenhagen suggestion, defended the present commission government on the ground that no major official has been accused of graft or neglect of duty since it was established in 1878.

"Over a period of 60 years," he said, "the present government has functioned not only as well but better than the majority of the other forms of city governments. It does not suffer by comparison. It has an enviable position in the realm of municipal government."

Hazen complained that the Commissioners had not been consulted by Griffenhagen and his associates, and denied that the present District government is hopelessly complex and confused, as charged in the Griffenhagen report. He stated, however, that if Congress intends to delegate certain legislative powers to the city government "the creation of some form of governing legislative body is essential."

"The District of Columbia is peculiar among cities because of its relationship with the Federal Government," he added. "In our opinion, it would not be desirable, even if possible, to dissolve this relationship."

Criticizing the Griffenhagen plan, Hazen said that the District heads consider 17 departments excessive and too many for a single administrator to govern.

Powers Exceeded In Bromo Seizure, Firm Declares

Baltimore, March 8 (AP).—Officials of the Emerson Drug Co., of Baltimore, manufacturers of Bromo-Seltzer, tonight called the Government's seizure of a quantity of the product in Atlanta, Ga., yesterday "arbitrary exercise of power by an administrative authority not intended to be granted by Congress when it passed the new food and drug act."

A statement issued at the company's offices said, in part:

"The manufacturer has had many clinics conducted and has obtained scores of opinions from nationally recognized medical and technical experts which support its claim that its product is not dangerous in any degree. . . . The arbitrary procedure which the food and drug department has invoked in this instance, seems most unfair."

Poll Shows Senate Favors Douglas For High Court

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

As a result of a secret poll conducted by Administration leaders, President Roosevelt was informed yesterday that the Senate would confirm a nomination of William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to the Supreme Court.

Reports in the Senate were that Mr. Roosevelt plans to send the name of the successor to retired Justice Louis D. Brandeis to the Senate within the next few days.

Douglas, only 40, born in Minnesota and raised in Washington State, was reported satisfactory to most of the Westerners demanding that the new Supreme Court appointee come from beyond the Mississippi River.

U. S. Seizes Books Of Night Clubs

New York, March 8 (I.N.S.).—The books of 73 night clubs and theater ticket brokerage firms, including most of "cafe society's" hot spots, have been seized to learn which have been remiss in paying Federal amusement taxes, the United States Attorney's office announced tonight.

Preliminary investigation was said to have disclosed a failure to pay a total of $2,000,000 in the last year. The seized records are to be submitted to a special Federal grand jury which will start the inquiry next month.

Early Agreement Forecast in Oil Talks With Mexico

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, March 8 (AP).—Donald R. Richberg, representing American and British oil interests, held and hour and a half meeting with President Cardenas today at which both reported "effective progress was made toward reaching an early agreement" on the Mexican oil problem.

This view was made public in an official statement by the Government Press Bureau which said the two "exchanged general views" and arranged for a second meeting tomorrow.

Later Richberg said: "The best hope of a solution acceptable as having permanent benefits to all concerned lies in maintaining such an atmosphere of good will, of mutual confidence and patient tolerance of differing opinions, as seemed to me to characterize the discussion held today."

Roosevelt Urges Canal in Florida

The House Rivers and Harbors committee yesterday heard letters from President Roosevelt and Gov. Cone of Florida urging approval of the contested Florida Ship Canal.

The President reiterated his recommendations that the canal would be valuable both for commerce and national defense. Cone declared the people of Florida were supporting the plan.

The Neutrality Flop

President Roosevelt was on unassailable ground when, in response to a question at his Tuesday press conference, he doubted that the neutrality law has made any contribution to the cause of peace and suggested that, in some respects, it has tended to make war more probable.

Almost without exception, close students of the subject agree with the President on both points. The neutrality law was originally put on the statute books in the belief that it would somehow serve as a barrier to American involvement in the event of another world war. Our present armament program graphically emphasizes just how ineffective a safeguard it is deemed by competent authority.

The existence of the neutrality legislation has not saved us from feeling the full impact of the developing world crisis. And to this crisis this legislation has actually contributed, by encouraging the aggressors to regard the United States as a cipher which could be utterly disregarded in the making and launching of their plans.

To permit the United States to make the full contribution which should be expected from us for preservation of world peace it would be wise to wipe out the neutrality act altogether, as requested in the bill introduced yesterday by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis.

Short of complete abrogation, it would be useful to modify the existing law so as to rid it of the mandatory provision which seeks to compel the President, in the event of a foreign war, to clamp an embargo on aggressors and victims alike. Such a blanket embargo could, without any risk whatever, be replaced by an extension of the cash-and-carry provisions, to include munitions in both the narrow and broad senses of the word.

Peace Through Strength

The vote in the Senate on the Army and Air Corps expansion bill constitutes further proof of the all but unanimous agreement which exists in Congress, and among the people of the United States generally, regarding America's defense needs.

The House had approved the bill by a vote of 367 to 15. The Senate, after deciding to increase the number of planes to be authorized from 5,500 to 6,000, approved the measure by a vote of 77 to 8. That change, incidentally, constitutes the one material difference between the House and the Senate bills.

In view of these votes the United States will soon be in a position to begin making up deficiencies in its air arm, a category of defense in which we have been laggard and the importance of which can hardly be minimized.

There remains, of course, the War Department appropriation bill and the naval air and submarine base bill. The House approved the former by overwhelming vote the other day and approved the latter bill by 368 to 4 after eliminating the provision regarding Guam. Aside from the Guam clause, whose ultimate fate remains doubtful, there is every reason to anticipate an equally overwhelming approval of those bills by the Senate.

It is an interesting and heartening circumstance that in all the Congressional discussion of defense there has been an almost complete absence of jingoism. Congress has considered the question with no chip on its shoulder and in no spread-eagle attitude. The members of both Houses have shown full realization that the expansion of America's defense establishments is an unfortunate necessity. And the well-nigh overwhelming approval they have given the major bills seeking to meet this need is also proof of the relative moderation of the Administration's requests.

In this time of world crisis not the least contribution which the United States can make toward peace is to be strong, calm and self-confident. This is what the American people desire and this is what Congress, reflecting the wishes of the people, desires, too.

Not At All Helpful

In criticizing the Griffenhagen plan, at the opening of the Congressional hearings on the subject yesterday, Commissioners Hazen and McCoach made one very illuminating statement. Since the present commission form of government was established in 1878, they said, "there has not been a single instance of major graft charged against any major official" in the District government. Furthermore: "No major official has ever been charged with neglect of duty or other serious offense."

Such a negative indorsement of the present municipal set-up unfortunately gives the impression that the Commissioners are inclined to dodge the very important issue raised by the Griffenhagen report. It makes no accusations about graft in the local government. It brings no indictment against any official of that government, past or present. So this fervent defense against a nonexistent charge is at best totally irrelevant. But if there were in the District Building a strong desire to confuse the issue in the public mind, then there would be ample explanation for this entirely superfluous defense.

There is no mystery about the Griffenhagen report. Under the authorizing act "the express purpose" of the study was defined as ascertaining a basis for "such legislation as will effect a more efficient and economical handling" of municipal government in Washington. And in their covering letter to the two Congressional District committees the investigators summarized their findings by noting that local government here "is now unbelievably complex, confused, illogical and cumbersome," adding that in their recommendations for improvement "the objectives of simplification and modernization" have been emphasized.

The public hearings on the Griffenhagen plan would have had a better launching if Commissioners Hazen and McCoach had frankly admitted the obvious deficiencies of Washington's present municipal government, instead of dragging red herrings across the trail. To have been frank on this issue would also have saved them embarrassment from Representative Kennedy's shrewd cross-examination, which, among other matters, demonstrated that Commissioner McCoach thinks there are about 2,000 employes on the District pay roll while Commissioner Hazen says there are about six times that number. If such a discrepancy in the estimates of responsible officials is not a sign of "confusion," then it is hard to say what confusion is.

The Commissioners' prepared statement further expresses uncertainty as to whether it is the intention of Congress to delegate to the District government a certain amount of autonomy in the field of strictly local legislation. There is no need for any doubt on this score. The authorizing act implied that this is precisely what Congress has in mind and a mere glance at the report shows it to be based on the assumption that the municipality will be granted a measure of self-government.

So, again, it is difficult to understand why the Commissioners should solemnly go out of their way to inform Congress that action on the Griffenhagen report should be preceded by "a definite conclusion" regarding the delegation of legislative powers to the municipal government. Congress knows that already, just as the people of Washington know that the issue is not graft but the inadequate character of their local government.

The Griffenhagen report, over and above its specific shortcomings, signalizes a great opportunity for Washington to acquire a municipal government worthy of the name. In such a constructive movement one would expect the Commissioners to take the lead. To do so in principle would not prevent criticism of the many details of the report to which exception should be taken. Those criticisms the Commissioners make—and there many of their points are valid. But the unfortunate impression they leave is that the District Building opposes not so much the shortcomings of the Griffenhagen report as the basic reform movement itself.

Scarcely A Failure

The National Symphony Orchestra Association's campaign to finance the 1939-40 season failed, by a few thousand dollars, to reach the quota originally set. That is to be deplored. But the resultant situation is by no means tragic. The failure, such as it was, need not materially hamper the orchestra, far less deprive the community of this vital local institution.

The musicians had requested a 25-week season. Accordingly the orchestra association increased its campaign quota from $103,000 to $111,000 to meet that request and to give an additional fortnight of the enjoyment that Dr. Kindler and his organization provide.

When the campaign closed, the larger amount had not been raised. But, with something more than $103,000 in cash and pledges, the people of Washington had subscribed a sum sufficient to maintain the orchestra at its same 80-piece strength and through a season precisely as long as that of this year. Certainly, it is inaccurate to call that a failure.

The details remain for attention. The musicians still have to accept the 23-week contract. Because so valiant an effort was made to meet their wishes there is the more reason to believe that they will make this relatively small concession. Secondly, the subscribers must permit their cash gifts and pledges to stand, even though they were made on the basis that the campaign would reach its $111,000 goal. That any donor would actually ask a refund now is unbelievable.

On the contrary, now that the immediate financial strain of attaining the original quota has been removed, it may be hoped that funds will be forthcoming to make possible the delightful six weeks of summer concerts at the Watergate.

The Hotel Strike

Guests at 13 of Washington's largest hotels are confronted by the unpleasant necessity of running the gantlet of picket lines as a result of the strike called yesterday by three A. F. of L. unions of hotel employes. And developments even less agreeable to the community as a whole are possible if the issue is not promptly settled.

The walkout was voted because of the refusal of the hotel managements to assent to demands for a closed shop. In other words there is no absence of machinery for collective bargaining, which was in fact established some time ago. The three locals involved in the present controversy, comprising kitchen and restaurant employes, service employes, and bartenders, are represented by a joint executive board consisting of elected delegates. The hotels affected by the strike likewise have a common bargaining association which has been negotiating with the joint board.

No question has been raised as to the representative character of the unions' bargaining agency. That issue was, however, recently brought before the National Labor Relations Board when the Hotel Hamilton objected to dealing with its employes as a single unit. In that case the NLRB decided that this single unit, consisting of employes within the jurisdiction of three separate locals, was appropriate for collective bargaining purposes and that the joint board might properly be designated as their representative.

With conflicts over the bargaining unit and jurisdictional disputes eliminated, it should not be very difficult for the unions and the hotel managements to reach a compromise on the one disputed issue of the closed shop. Indeed, the unions had already indicated a willingness to modify their demands before the break came, while the employers had also made some concessions.

The conciliation service of the Department of Labor was unable to avert the strike, but is still hopeful of being able to effect an adjustment that will prevent a prolonged deadlock. What is needed is some formula that will protect union members against arbitrary discharge without imposing restrictions upon the hotel managements which would deprive them of the right to fire for cause, thereby encouraging insubordination and inefficiency.

A fight to the finish would injure both sides, to say nothing of the disastrous effect on the community at the opening of the spring tourist season. Both sides, and therefore Washington as a whole, stand to benefit from the existence of a responsible trade unionism in this industry. Hotel employes are a class of workers especially in need of the protection afforded by unions against overlong hours and underpay. Hotel managements are particularly dependent upon stable, reliable and disciplined working forces. Therefore, it is to everybody's interest for the principals to declare a prompt truce to ill-judged hostilities, and to lay the foundation for better working conditions and better service through peaceful negotiation.

Maple Sugar Outlook

From the Chicago Daily News

In average years the small State of Vermont has consistently produced more than a million gallons of maple sirup, and almost a million pounds of maple sugar. New York, next biggest commercial producer, has averaged less than three-quarters as much sirup, and less than half as much sugar. No other of the ten States listed by the Department of Agriculture as commercial producers comes anywhere near matching the Vermont output.

One is therefore inclined to argue with a Department of Agriculture bulletin which says that, despite the destruction of a third of Vermont's maple trees in last fall's hurricane, "little decline" is expected in the amount of maple sugar and sirup produced in the country as a whole. It appears, on the contrary, quite certain that commercial maple products are going to be scarcer and more expensive, not only this year but for many years to come. You cannot extemporize a maple tree; neither will any number of reforestation projects be of immediate benefit. It takes 40 years to grow a good sap maple.

Simple As That!

From the New York Times.

Upon the request of newspapermen for a terse definition of the basing point system, the witness (Prof. Frank A. Fetter) supplied the following, which was read into the record:

"The basing point practice is quoting and selling in certain territory homogeneous products by a formula of delivered prices identical with that of another mill or mills, made up of the base price of another mill than the one selling, plus freight from that mill. It necessarily involves refusal to sell at f. o. b. prices."

Surplus Food For The Poor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is considerable discussion of the "two price proposal" of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Mr. Wallace has made the suggestion that certain surplus farm products (cotton, fruits, vegetables, meats, milk) for which there is an elastic demand should be sold at two prices: The ordinary price which should be sustained, and a cut price at which Americans lowest in the income scale could buy them.

The reduction in the price to the needy consumer is to be financed by the Federal Treasury, which in the orthodox way will borrow the subsidy, and again in the orthodox way the community will be taxed for the borrowed money that enabled the subsidy. The proposal is a promising one, however, since it is directed toward lower prices for the consumer, and has a good tincture of consumer-consciousness instead of the prevailing producer-consciousness.

Mr. Wallace's idea resembles the post-war Austrian experiment in selling bread at a greatly reduced price, the government making up the difference to grocers by deficit financing. Austrian prosperity increased, but the budget was unbalanced, whereupon the League of Nations stepped in and forced Austria to discontinue consumer subsidies. (See Col. Repington's "After the War: a Diary.")

Knowledge is now accessible for a vast improvement upon the Austrian experiment. The reduced price element should be retained, but the financing of reduced prices should be accomplished by debt-free credit. Thus for example an agricultural surplus commodity account could be established at the U. S. Treasury. This account would be backed by the glut of real agricultural wealth for which buyers cannot now be found. With this backing, credit could be created that would not originate as a debt to the banking system, and this specially created credit could be applied to reduce prices to the ill-fed and ill-clothed third of the Nation.

These needy consumers, accredited with cards, would be entitled to a discount upon their purchases of cotton goods and farm products, the retailers to be reimbursed by their banks for the discount, the banks in turn to be reimbursed by making periodical drafts upon the agricultural surplus commodity credit account for the sums credited to retailers.

Such a plan would dispose of the present objections of retailers to the Wallace proposal and would solve the administrative difficulties which the Department of Agriculture foresees for its present plan.

Take Your Choice

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Among those now in charge of our policy on foreign relations, Senators Borah and Johnson are exceedingly articulate. Our post-war policy is their work. If the citizens of the United State find world conditions entirely to their liking it is only proper that they listen carefully to the advice of these two veteran Senators.

If, contrariwise, they are disturbed and uneasy, oppressed by the proclamations of warlords whose national history is replete with repudiation of self-imposed international obligations it is meet and right that they pause and inquire into the omniscience of these Senators who have brought us into uncharted perils.

A similar choice lies with the citizens to weep, with the two Senators for the innocent women and children who might have been starved because of their government's criminal acts or with the thousands whose families have been bombed, the thousands whose families will be bombed, because they believe in some measure of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Col. Watson's War Record

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the recent assignment of Edwin M. Watson to the secretarial staff at the White House, the following might be of interest:

As major commanding the First Battalion, Twelfth Field Artillery, Second Division, A. E. F., he was cited in General Order No. 40 of that division in these words:

"Reconnoitered positions for the batteries and placed them in position in the face of hostile shellfire, June 2 and 3, 1918. Throughout the operations of his battalion he conducted himself in a gallant and fearless manner."

As lieutenant colonel, second in command of the entire regiment, he was cited in G. O. 64, Second Division, "for gallantry in action against the enemy in the St. Mihiel sector."

The brevity of language in which citations issued by combat divisions are framed, is partly accounted for by the trying conditions under which the recommendations were written. These were often composed by company and regimental officers before the echoes of battle had subsided, written upon scraps of paper and forwarded to division headquarters, where a sergeant-major, working with the division adjutant, collected them and shaped their contents into a citation order.

The early orders, for reasons of secrecy, failed to note the place of action where the soldier was serving. The order relating to June, 1918, covered incidents during the engagement which included the clearing of the Bois de Belleau, the capture of Boureches, and the operations resulting in the storming of Vaux on July 1. The order itself was written in the village of Le Ferte-sous-Jouarre, the sergeant-major working throughout the day and night of July 4; his evening lamp, incidentally, consisting of two candles affixed to the corners of his typewriter.

After the war the War Department began issuing compilations of citations, both American and French; but after some pamphlets appeared the activity was halted for lack of financial support on the part of Congress. Hence, men received citations from division and other headquarters during hostilities which have never been published from Washington.

Then, too, a number of French decorations were personally presented to American soldiers, without a documentary certificate accompanying, leaving many persons with medals and nothing in writing to justify their claim to wear them.

Col. Watson's regiment was commanded by Col. Manus McCloskey during the Belleau Wood and Soissons operations, and, as an organization, was cited twice in French orders, thereby conferring upon the men serving in it the right to wear the green and red fourragere.

One For Mr. Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Mr. Westbrook Pegler is being funny it is frequently his habit to prepare his material in such haste as to overlook the very cream of the jest.

About a week ago he maundered on about the Irish immigrants to this country, touching at random on everything he could recall that would be discreditable to them. He referred to the "sale of various issues of Kathleen Mavourneen bonds for various Irish republics among American citizens." Only one such bond issue is recalled by this writer. It was made in the early 1920's, and was paid in full with 25 per cent bonus.

Mr. Pegler's column animadverted against the courage of these Irish. This to follow up an earlier statement, "The immigrants were untidy, disorderly and troublesome, speaking in general terms."

If one may be permitted to speak in more particular terms, a War Department publication, "Decorations, United States Army, 1862-1926," is informative in this regard. It shows that 1,817 separate awards of the Congressional Medal of Honor, highest decoration for gallantry in the face of the enemy, "above and beyond the call of duty," were made during that period. Place of birth was not recorded for 257 of the recipients. Of the 1,560 remaining, 151 were born in Ireland, slightly over 9.6 per cent. For comparison, it is shown that 67 were born in England, Scotland and Wales combined, or not quite 4.3 per cent.

During the indicated period it is quite probable that Irish immigration exceeded British, and it is also quite probable that during the "No-Irish-need-apply" period, of which Mr. Pegler speaks, they were still welcomed into the Army, and perhaps constituted a larger percentage of the whole than their British brethren.

It is certainly not my purpose to reflect on the courage of other racial extractions, and the results of this hasty poll may be weighted in any other manner one chooses.

Of the various antagonists Mr. Pegler selects for reproof, he is at his best in Pegler vs. Pegler, best two falls out of three.

M. V. GANNON.

What Next?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not difficult for us to perceive that our present-day form of civilization is surely and unalterably retracing its steps back to the chasm of intellectual and social malformation. All of man's ideologies and inherent desires for self-betterment are now standing at the brink of extinction. Yet, at many stages of man's progress, his efforts in behalf of good will, have appeared checkmated. Today, the world is again viewing barbarism returning to its former prerogative of hate, lust and murder. Those who bloodily insatiate themselves in endless quest for material gain, shall know in time, speedy and deserved retribution.

The question arises as to how these modernistic imitators of Caesar, Hannibal, Alexander The Great and Napoleon can be held back. Solidarization of democratic powers is our last medium of defense. No doubt, pacifists will go on as always, clamoring for complete isolation from other spheres of influence, now in the vortex of maelstrom and human suffering.

Let an effusion of national pride be ever present in us, so that we may say to those seeking to disprove causes for America's rearming, that preparedness is indeed, a tangible asset. With regard to this country's position as possible signator or signator in fact to military and/or commercial pacts, it is needless repetition to state, that in "unity there is unbounded strength." HARRY A. MAGEE.

Washington, Feb. 26.

The Post Impressionist

Fire Chief

IN 1892 old No. 10, a red brick building with wooden floors, stood in the 1300 block of Maryland avenue northeast, and Washington lay between Florida avenue on the north, Thirty-sixth street in Georgetown on the west, Fifteenth street northeast, and the Anacostia River. Half the year the doors of No. 10 stayed open and passersby, pausing to look into the cool interior and to speak to the boys, no doubt drew a deep feeling of satisfaction from knowing that the red shining equipment, the fast sleek horses and the men all stood ready to save their homes from fire.

Washington then had 10 engine companies and 2 truck companies. The stalls of No. 10 boasted 5 horses, 3 on the engine and 2 on the "spool," around which the hose was wound instead of being folded flat as today. At No. 10 in 1892 there was a youth of 20—an "apprentice fireman"—already started on the route he wanted his life to take, who liked adventure and who wasn't afraid of work. His name was Charles Edward Schrom.

The duties of an apprentice fireman were numerous. In the day, he washed the horses, fed them, exercised them, saw that they were properly covered in cold weather and kept them protected on runs from the sparks of the engine. After a long run he dosed each horse with arnica to stop its panting and to save its wind. At night he took his shift, in all weathers, walking up and down in front of the engine house looking for red lights on the low horizon of America's capital—for in those days there was no fire alarm system in Washington and all alarms came in by telephone.

Most of his time in those early days he spent about the horse stalls in the rear of No. 10, shining harness metal in quiet moments, oiling the leather of harness. When an alarm came he pulled a string that, by a series of weights, simultaneously opened every stall door. Across the wooden floor five horses thundered, each into its exact position. Youth, excitement, adventure sang in this apprentice fireman's veins. He was learning a career. He was living the life he loved. And his salary was $40 a month.

He moved up to a "hoseman." His duties now were to maintain a constant vigilance over the hose and spool. They might be needed at any instant of the day or night. He went to fires and got the hose in service on the spot. Under the direction of his foreman he assisted in every way he could—a thousand and one ways—in extinguishing fire. It was a day of many wooden houses, wooden office buildings, wooden stores and warehouses, and he was a fire-fighter.

There was a story that followed him all his life and that happened when he was a hoseman. There were three horses in one hitch—three horses in harness, running side by side—on their way to a fire. Suddenly one horse stumbled, fell and lay dead in the street. The other two would not go on without him. Something had to be done. A young fireman, a hoseman, leapt in the place of the dead horse, and the other two ran a short distance before the engine to the fire.

In 1897 this man very nearly lost his life in the Lansburgh Furniture Co. fire on the location where the Capital Garage now stands. He was then still a hoseman and for four hours he lay in water, cut off from rescue by burned-out stairs. At last he was reached and saved—only, three months later, again almost to lose his life in a stable fire at Massachusetts avenue and Twenty-second street northwest.

It was in no small part due to his efforts that for four successive years the No. 10 Engine Co. won the Harrison Naylor flag — a trophy awarded annually by a Washingtonian who took great pride in the city's Fire Department—for efficiency in "hooking up" the horses and in responding to alarms.

Washington still remembers the Knickerbocker Theater disaster of January, 1922. The young apprentice fireman of 1892 was now battalion chief in charge of the companies that responded on the first call to fire alarm box 817 at Eighteenth and Columbia road northwest. In the first vital moments, stunned moments, his quick clear thinking greatly lessened the suffering and hastened rescue. The Fire Department rewarded him with a ribbon decoration for his services on this night.

Another decoration followed soon after when his knowledge of fire-fighting and his leadership confined the Kann's warehouse fire to one building. All who saw that fire were convinced it would consume the entire block.

Through every grade he rose. To sergeant, lieutenant, captain, battalion chief, deputy chief. And finally to chief engineer of the District of Columbia Fire Department. It was in 1933 that he assumed supreme command of all fire-fighting forces in a new, large, strange Washington. About him there grew up a little legend that every fireman and many civilians knew. At a fire they watched his movements, watched his face, until at last his hand went to his breast pocket and removed a cigar. When he had lighted that cigar, all the force knew that the fire was under control.

Fair Enough

Harrison's Warning

SOME HAPPY DAY another generation of Americans will have a cackle at the expense of this one for our gullibility in the presence of a plague of number fakers, calling themselves economists, who persuaded us that wrong was right, that loss was profit and that a crashing failure was equivalent to a smashing success. They put a spell on us—that's what they did—and convinced us we could spend our way out of debt when anybody's little boy could have shown with a pencil and paper that this way was against the rules of arithmetic and the unchangeable examples of the apples.

At present, after more than six years of chancing on such advice, there comes a warning from Pat Harrison, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, that unless we stop squandering, economic chaos is inevitable—which is another way of saying that the United States Government will go through the wringer like any other mismanaged business.

This is the first time since the innocents rallied around early in the first New Deal that the "charge it" school of management has been challenged that loud and the first time in the life of the Roosevelt government that the people have troubled their thoughts with the truth.

Savings And Thrift Became Disreputable

BACK IN THE EARLY stages there were many who had their doubts, but waived them without much resistance in the presence of the depressing fact that saving and economy in their own affairs had left them broke in the great crash. This experience was said to prove that saving and thrift were folly and extravagance and waste new virtues.

Meanwhile, from time to time, businessmen were still compelled to do business by the old arithmetic and threatened with jail for any resort to the new, and uneasy mention of such little bothers as taxes and costs was met with scornful oratory about well-fed clubmen, copperheads and tories.

The cost will be high, but one result will be the exposure of the frauds who came into Washington disguised as minor statisticians and office managers and presently were imposing on the affairs of the American Government their personal interpretations of figures and debating on truths which were not arguable but fixed.

Old Fundamentals Brought Sneers

SIMPLE REALITIES of mathematics became subjects for whimsical ruling to the contrary. There were no rules, and individual authorities often disagreed with each other, and both disagreed with obvious facts, but the hex was on the people and they could not even question, much less argue.

Deficits became assets and the spending mounted toward that height at which the whole column of figures would topple and bring down with it the despised American system. There were economists who obviously believed that this would be the best way to destroy the old method—which was not worth saving, anyway—and permit the substitution of a new system from one quarter or another or Europe.

All this has been accompanied by a sneering and domineering demeanor toward any who presumed to mention old fundamentals, but the time has come now when a stand is being made not so much, immediately, against further spending as against the philosophy, so-called, of irresponsible, mischievous and cynical world-shakers come to power quietly and almost secretly by casual appointment.

Debt Repudiation Would Be Recourse

HARRISON'S declaration—which represents not Harrison alone but the whole "anti" group of the Democrats—calls for a public understanding of the fact that, if the spending continues, then the Nation must go broke and, in the way that nations have been broke, bail itself out of debt by repudiation. If a nation repudiates, those who hold its bonds or money are the victims unless laws then be made to compel those who hold goods to sell them at fixed prices in depreciated money.

Harrison hasn't said the Nation will go broke. That would be unstatesmanlike and alarmist language, but that is the common man's interpretation of what he did say.

And he did say: "If everyone connected with the operation of the Government, whether in the executive or legislative department, will realize that a serious fiscal situation is confronting us and counsel together and cooperate in mapping out a plan and unflinchingly and without political consideration work toward that end, we can accomplish results that will bring financial stability to our Government.

"With world conditions unsettled, with threats and rumors of wars being heard on every hand American statesmanship demands that the credit of the United States be preserved and our own house placed in order. I have no confidence in the economic philosophy that we must spend ourselves out of this economic disorder."

Poland's Policy

By Mary N. Hawes

Walking The Tight Rope

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Warsaw.

POLAND lies between the "devil and the deep blue sea." At least so the Poles view their respective great neighbors—Germany and Russia. To those of the east, Russia is Poland's chief bugbear; to those of the west, Germany appears more alarming.

Poland, they fear, may become the battlefield of German and Soviet troops, the front line trenches of either or both powers. Hence whether rightly or wrongly they generally maintain their country must never become the ally of one against the other. Only a small group of imperialists dream of a joint German-Polish expedition to the east.

Worse even than a conflict between her two neighbors would be their friendship. For such a friendship, the Poles believe, would lead to partition again. The mere thought of another Treaty of Rapallo, such as that concluded by Germany and Soviet Russia in 1922, is a nightmare to the country which lies between these two great forces.

TO KEEP Germany and the U. S. S. R. from war or alliance Poland has adopted a "tight-rope walking" foreign policy. For obvious reasons if the balance is to be maintained it cannot join any ideological front. But also for the same reasons it has discarded the idea of collective security in favor of bilateral agreements—a system much better adapted to the art of balancing and which the Poles consider more trustworthy in an undependable world. Hence in 1934 Warsaw as well as Berlin opposed the proposals for an eastern Locarno, although it was intended to perpetuate her frontiers both to the east and to the west.

The Poles, or rather their famed Marshal Pilsudski, realized from the very first the significance of Hitler's rise to power. Back in January, 1934, it was that the policy of balancing was really inaugurated; but not till after the marshal had suggested to Paris a joint preventive war against Germany. As this proposal was not taken up and as France appeared indecisive in her attitude toward the Nazi government, Pilsudski decided that Poland must look after her own welfare and come to an agreement with Berlin.

Policy Of Balancing Now Deemed Justified

THUS BEGAN the policy of balancing, and to many Poles it seems to have won justification with the events of succeeding years—rearmament of Germany, reoccupation of the Rhineland, the Anschluss and now the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia. But there is a credible suspicion that had Germany not been sure of her eastern neighbor, Hitler would have thought twice before launching his challenges. In the case of the Anschluss and particularly during the crisis of last September Foreign Minister Beck's policy played right into the hands of Hitler, whether or not of long-run benefit to Poland.

Indeed in those critical times Col. Beck very nearly overbalanced into the lap of Germany and ran a danger that the Russian troops, already massed on the border, might invade Poland. While some consider the outcome as evidence of his intrepid skill a few lay it to luck in a stupid and unworthy venture. Certainly nothing that Beck did last fall was required by the Polish-German accord, and one is left wondering whether Marshal Pilsudski would have ever leaned so far over to Germany's side.

THE ART of balancing requires skill, and Col. Beck has so far practised it with a certain ingenuity. His manipulations in recent months prove this. Immediately after the crisis came the news of the reaffirmation of Poland's pact of non-aggression with Soviet Russia. Warsaw was trying to recover its balance. Recently Beck called on Hitler at Berchtesgaden, but not before everyone knew that Count Ciano would later come to Poland.

The day in January when Von Ribbentrop arrived in Warsaw, Col. Beck allowed one of his rare interviews to be published. It laid stress on Poland's alliances with France and Rumania. The Nazi foreign minister also knew that his visit would soon be followed by the signature of a Polish-Soviet commercial accord greatly increasing the trade of the two countries and that toward the end of February Count Ciano's long-expected visit to Poland would take place. Perhaps he suspected that in March Rumania's Foreign Minister Gafencu would be on his way to Warsaw.

Since then it has come out that the foreign minister of Hungary may soon journey to Poland; that Polish Prime Minister Gen. Slawoj-Skladkowski has gone to Paris and that Col. Beck will go to London toward the end of March to talk over the Jewish problem and Poland's need for raw materials (perhaps colonies).

DOUBTLESS there are those who wonder whether this policy of playing with all leaves Poland any true friends. But the Poles generally hold that friendship is not a determining factor in the question of whether a nation will help another one in an emergency. They have doubts whether France or England would come to their aid in case of attack any more than in the case of Czecho-Slovakia. Nor is it clear that Poland would go to France's aid if she were attacked on the colonial issue—thought not to be covered by their alliance.

As for Russia the Poles question her ability to give assistance or her intention of doing so should Poland ever, in face of aggression, decide to climb off the tight-rope and form a front against Germany. Besides, they are generally dead opposed to allowing Russian troops on their soil.

Germany Going Slow On Ukrainian Issue

"THERE IS no difference between Germany and Russia," say many of them, "except that Russia is colder." But this overlooks a difference which vitally affects their country and which they admit when pressed. Moscow has no territorial ambitions against Poland whereas Berlin has. Russia might like to spread communism, but it would not attack its western neighbor, and actually Stalin dissolved the Communist Party in Poland last year on the ground it was being used by agents provocateurs.

In Polish-German relations since 1934 cause and effect are often confused. It is not trouble in Danzig which may strain relations between Berlin and Warsaw. If the relations between those two capitals are good, in other words if Germany's eyes are turned toward the south or toward colonies, then trouble in Danzig and agitation among the Polish Ukrainians of Eastern Galicia is unlikely. If on the other hand the relations are strained then outbursts from the "Free City," and rising feeling among these Ukrainians likely—probably due more to hopes roused by Germany than by direct agitation from Berlin.

After the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia it was generally assumed that Hitler would concentrate on the Ukrainian dream he advanced in "Mein Kampf," using sub-Carpathian Ukraine for a base. Indeed Germany's efforts and success in preventing Hungary from taking this region all pointed in that direction.

THERE WAS some responsive agitation in Eastern Galicia, but since Col. Beck's visit to Hitler the impression has been that Germany has no immediate aims in that quarter. Poles generally feel that he will tackle the colonies first and possibly Rumania. They claim they will resist any designs on their territory, whether that covers a change in the status of Danzig is open to different opinions. But they insist it applies to Silesia and eastern Little Poland (Ukraine.)

That determination, they believe, has persuaded Hitler against a move that would result in war. With ill-founded contempt Poles are saying "We are not like the Czechs; we will fight." However, because of strict censorship, many of them still don't know how much their foreign minister was playing the hand of Germany in the week before Munich. Only a few regret the loss of Czecho-Slovakia as one less barrier between them and Germany.

Col Beck and Poland to a certain extent resented the important place Czecho-Slovakia had in the councils of Europe. Poland, it must be remembered, aspires to be recognized as a fifth great European Power. It already has a population nearly as large as that of France and likely to surpass it in a few years. But to be a great power she has felt bound to show her diplomatic independence from Paris, and this again led to the policy of balancing.

Already Poland has given notice in different ways that she is going to demand her share of colonies if there is any redivision of them. She prefers equatorial Africa. So Warsaw strives to be recognized as a fifth great power, determined not to be left out of any international decisions and carrying to the extreme a Polish proverb, "Nothing about us without us."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Beyond The Armed Peace

IN THE PAST fortnight there has been a most remarkable change in the Italian and the German propaganda. In December the Italian press was saying that Italy would go to war if France did no make concessions. A few days ago Signor Gayda was writing that the democracies were making ready to attack Italy. In September, at Nuremberg, Chancellor Hitler declared that Germany had achieved such self-sufficiency that she could never again be blockaded. In January he announced that Germany, though it is not blockaded, must export or die, and in the past week Dr. Goebbels spoke at the Leipzig fair on how the rich democracies were denying Germany the necessaries of life.

Thus in the course of a few months the Rome-Berlin axis has changed its tone. That change of tone has followed certain decisive events: First, the failure of the French general strike and the general recovery of France; second the decision of the Chamberlain government to rearm on a really great scale; third, the decision of the American people with no substantial dissent, to enlarge American armaments; fourth, the ending of the Spanish civil war; fifth, the adoption of a much more independent policy in Rumania, in Yugoslavia, in Hungary and in Poland; sixth, the strengthening of the Chinese resistance which prevents Japan from risking an adventure in the direction of Singapore; seventh, the disclosure that the German economy is already overstrained by the cost of armaments, whereas the British and French have just begun to enter seriously into the race of armaments.

BETWEEN THESE events and the change of tone in the propaganda of the axis there is more than an accidental connection. It is the connection of cause and effect, in an era of power politics, the balance of power has shifted decisively in the past months. And the chances are now much better than even that a world war has, therefore, been averted.

But, of course, the peace which seems to have been achieved is only an armed peace, depending for the time being on huge armament programs. The question, therefore, is whether and how this armed peace can eventually be converted into a real peace in which all the nations can honorably participate. For the moment the world has just barely succeeded, and even that is as yet by no means a certainty, in getting the danger of a world war under control. That is a great deal. It is much more than informed observers dared to hope was possible a few months ago. But, in the long run, it is not enough.

The first question that needs to be considered is whether there is any foundation whatever for Signor Gayda's statement that the western democracies are planning to attack Italy in order to wage a so-called "preventive war." The answer is that there can be no foundation whatever for this statement. The proof that there is no foundation is in the facts of the situation, even if Signor Gayda chooses to disregard as meaningless all the declarations of peace by Mr. Chamberlain, M. Daladier and Mr. Roosevelt.

The first fact is that Great Britain and France have no claims whatever to any part of the Italian empire. They have only one claim against Italy, and that is that the Italian troops should be withdrawn from Spain. To enforce this claim they will not go to war because it is wholly unnecessary for them to go to war. It will be Gen. Franco who will request Mussolini to withdraw his troops, and that request will have a more united support from the Spanish nation than any other single thing that Gen. Franco can do.

The idea of a "preventive war" makes no sense. For why should the democracies wage a preventive war if they have already succeeded in preventing war?

A much more serious question is raised by the German argument that Germany is unable to export goods to buy the imports necessary to maintain the standard of life of the German people. In examining that argument, it is necessary to begin by remembering that no country, certainly none of the western democracies, has erected any special official barriers to German imports.

There is a partial and sporadic unofficial boycott of German goods in many parts of the world. But this boycott is not promoted by governments nor is it under their control. There is no way of compelling free men to buy goods that they do not wish to buy, and it is obvious that the boycott, such as it is, has been provoked and is kept going not by the hostility to the German nation, but solely and directly by acts of the Nazi government. There is only one remedy for it. It is an obvious remedy, and can be adopted inside of Germany whenever the German people wish to adopt it.

The boycott is not, however, a major cause of Germany's difficulties. The real causes are more complicated. Thus there is the fact that the American tariff is higher against German imports than against British. It is higher because we have a trade agreement with Great Britain and none with Germany. What prevents the Germans getting a similar trade agreement? Not our unwillingness to make such an agreement, but the fact that the Nazi commercial system cannot conform to the principles that govern all our trade agreements.

In order to make an agreement with Germany we should have to discriminate in her favor and against the other nations with which we have tariff treaties. That we are unwilling and unable to do. But it can hardly be said we are discriminating against German trade because we do not discriminate in favor of it. When Germany is willing to trade on the same basis as Great Britain, she can have a similar trade agreement.

In order to expand her foreign trade Germany needs foreign credits. But what is it that causes the outer world to withhold credit? It is that the German system of exchange control makes it virtually impossible to have the credits repaid, plus the fact that the creditors of Germany, even the short-term commercial creditors, have had such discouraging experience. It is hard for any nation to borrow if it does not pay its debts and probably could not pay them.

Now, these difficulties have not been imposed upon Germany from the outside. They are the direct consequence of the regime itself. Germany is spending about half of its relatively small national income on armaments and political policies; we think our government is extravagant, but if Mr. Roosevelt were spending thirty billions a year, instead of ten billions, he would be doing about what Mr. Hitler is doing.

This is the root of Germany's economic difficulties, and the only effective remedy is to reduce German armaments. For if Germany stopped spending such a huge proportion of her national income on unproductive armaments, she would, given her low wages and the remarkable capacity of the Germans for work, be one of the lowest cost producers in the world. She could then compete in most of the markets, certainly in all the markets of industrially backward countries. But today her exports are produced at high cost. For they carry within them the invisible tax which supports the armament program.

MOREOVER, it is this armament program which renders impossible any settlement of the colonial question. For as long as Germany is armed to the teeth, any German colony must be regarded, and will be regarded, as a strategic base rather than as a source of raw material. Therefore, as long as Germany is warlike in spirit and armed for aggressive war, she can never get colonies unless she conquers them by war.

This does not mean that Germany needs to disarm as she was disarmed after Versailles. It means, though, that Germany needs to disarm morally and to reduce her physical armaments to a level where her neighbors do not feel that they are intimidated. To such a Germany it would not only be possible, but it would be a matter of justice and prudence, to make substantial colonial concessions.

The conclusion one reaches is that Germany's problem is Germany's problem. It is not the world's problem if, as now seems to be the case, war is excluded as impracticable. Germany alone can solve the German problem, and all that the world can do is to wait patiently, hopefully and, of course, vigilantly, until the Germans themselves decide how they are going to solve their problem.

They will find, when they have solved it, that the western democracies have learned a lot since the tragedy of Versailles, and that they are learning from the bitter experience of the prolonged crisis. They will find, too, though this must seem to the Germans now rather hard to believe, that the German people have no implacable enemies, that when they are ready for peace with honor, they will find also charity and forbearance.

New Dealers And Taxes

By Mark Sullivan

Change In Attitude

WE MUST ASSUME that President Roosevelt and his Cabinet members, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, are completely in earnest in their assurances to business about taxation and other matters. Indeed no one doubts that Mr. Roosevelt and all the New Dealers would like to see business improve from now until the 1940 Presidential election. Whether the New Dealers are right in thinking this is another matter. The fact is they think it and say it.

If Mr. Roosevelt would genuinely like to see business prosper, and in that purpose would be willing to change certain forms of taxation which are an impediment to business, then he has come a long way during the past ten months.

'Sock The Rich' Taxes Impede Business

TWO FORMS of taxation widely considered to be impediments to business are the tax on capital gains and the tax on undistributed surpluses. These taxes, in their direct effect, bear especially heavy on some rich men and corporations—they are sometimes called "soak the rich" taxes. But in their indirect effect they prevent rich men from going into new ventures and thus interfere with business growth.

Just why this is was explained in lucid terms by Mr. Bernard M. Baruch and others to a Senate committee over a year ago. In brief, these taxes keep business static. If these taxes were repealed, business would expand in a way which would bring into the Treasury a much larger revenue in the shape of ordinary taxes upon increased volume of business.

In the belief that this is so, Congress last year greatly reduced both these taxes. It reduced the capital gains tax to a flat 15 per cent and the undistributed surplus tax to 2½ per cent.

These reductions, made by the recent Congress, were included in an act covering several tax matters, and the whole act was sent to President Roosevelt for signature. Mr. Roosevelt kept the act on his desk up to the last hour of the ten days during which he could act upon it. On the tenth day he was scheduled to make a speech at a school in a Government rehabilitation project in Arthurdale, near Scots Run, W. Va., one of the projects fostered by Mrs. Roosevelt. It was a background well adapted to give momentum to a speech purporting to be for the people against the rich.

Permitted Act To Pass Without His Approval

MR. ROOSEVELT began his address with a local allusion to "Scots Run, with its very poor conditions of life." He expressed his conviction that "this first bold Government venture will save human lives and human happiness."

Then he turned to taxation. He assured the school children before him—who must have been mystified—and, over the children's heads he assured the country that "taxes, local and State and Federal combined, are nowhere near as high in this country as they are in any other great nation that pretends to be up to date."

Then Mr. Roosevelt talked about the capital gains tax and the undistributed surplus tax. He said that Congress, in the bill just passed and now on his desk, had reduced both these taxes and, as to the first, had eliminated the principle of graduation. This action by Congress Mr. Roosevelt condemned. The reduction, he said, "helps the very few at the expense of the many." He spoke about "a small number of very rich stockholders."

Finally, speaking of the bill before him, Mr. Roosevelt said: "You will see the difficulty in which your President has been placed. This tax bill contains several undesirable features, especially the ones I have just been talking about. If I sign the bill—and I have until midnight to sign it—many people will think I approve the abandonment of an important principle of American taxation. If I veto the bill it will prevent many of the desirable features of it from going into effect. Therefore, for the first time since I have been President, I am going to take the third course which is open to me. I am going to let the act go into effect at midnight tonight without my approval."

Congress Restive At That Period

IF, TODAY, Mr. Roosevelt is of a mind different from that which he expressed last May, a part of the explanation may be deduced from the circumstances at the time of his speech at Arthurdale, compared with the circumstances today.

The speech at Arthurdale was made May 27th last. At that time Mr. Roosevelt had a Congress which was wavering between great deference to him and restiveness under his domination. It had declined to pass his bill to change the Supreme Court and his Government reorganization measure. That Congress, at the time Mr. Roosevelt made his Arthurdale speech, was just going before the country in primaries for renomination. Mr. Roosevelt had a motive for putting Congress on the defensive. He was about to begin the attempted "purge" in which his close personal and official intimates tried to defeat Democratic Senators who had not fully supported the President and in which he personally went into three States for the same purpose.

Mending The Fences

By Barnet Nover

Second Wind After Munich

GERMANY is discovering that it is easier to break an egg than to make an omelette.

In a period of a little over six months, in 1938, the Third Reich succeeded in swallowing up Austria and annexing the Sudetenland. The path to German hegemony in Central and Eastern Europe was open and unchallenged.

Now, five and a half months after Munich, it is apparent that the establishment of German domination in the region between the Rhine and the Caspian Sea will not prove as easy as some imagined. The old barriers to Germany's drang nach osten (push to the east) were undoubtedly smashed at Munich. But new barriers have since been erected.

They may hold and they may not. This no one can foretell. The important fact today is that the effort to erect these barriers began with Munich and has continued with increasing vigor to this day.

AT MUNICH Great Britain and France sold Hitler the key to the Danube Valley, the Balkans, the Ukraine, in return for an uncertain breathing spell. They washed their hands of Czecho-Slovakia and, presumably, of France's other allies in Eastern Europe. Once again, as in the days of Bismarck, it could be said that Europe had lost a mistress and gained a master. The nations along Germany's eastern and southern borders were quick to take the cue. But the spirit of defeatism that possessed them as it had possessed Great Britain and France in the days immediately following Germany's great victory quickly died.

However, it was not long before those nations began to mend their shattered fences. Open defiance of the Third Reich is, for any one of them, out of the question. They saw what had happened to Czecho-Slovakia not only at Munich but after Munich and they made up their minds that if it was at all possible to do so they would avoid a similar fate.

America's Policy Of Cardinal Importance

THEY HAVE been encouraged in this endeavor by several facts. The first was that Germany obviously needed time to digest her gains and that her internal situation showed no improvement but an actual deterioration after Munich.

The second was the French and British rearmament programs which indicated a determination on the part of the European democracies to restore the military balance of power between themselves and the totalitarian powers.

The third was the fact that the United States was shocked out of its indifference and isolation by the events of last fall and has since shown a readiness to play an active part in world peace efforts.

This latter fact cannot be minimized. Thus the Bucharest correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, discussing the recent conference of the Balkan Entente (Rumania, Yugoslavia, Turkey and Greece), declared that:

"The most interesting feature of the . . . conference . . . is probably the great influence President Roosevelt's recent attitude has had in renewing the desire of the member states to work with the democratic countries."

BUT THE GREATEST incentive to fence-building on the part of the nations in the path of the German steamroller has, of course, been the desire to maintain their hard-won independence and their present boundaries. That may, in the long run, prove impossible. But those nations are unwilling to give up the ghost so early in the game.

By no means all of the nations along the path of the drang nach osten have been equally successful in this fence-building activity. Hungary, for instance, has not succeeded at all well, while, on the other hand, Rumania has so far succeeded very well indeed. In the post-Munich crisis King Carol, erstwhile "playboy of the Balkans," has proved capable of beating the Nazis at their own game. It is not surprising that he is today—with President Roosevelt—the particular bete noire of Dr. Goebbels' journalistic mouthpieces. Rumania happens to be rich in the agricultural and mineral wealth which the Third Reich so desperately needs and a convenient stepping stone in the direction of the Ukraine.

RUMANIA has not only suppressed her own particular variety of Nazis but is showing no disposition to give way to external German pressure. Wisely refusing to carry a chip on her shoulder, she is fortifying herself against the day of siege. In this connection the recent successful visit of the Rumanian foreign minister to Warsaw shows that she is not alone in this desire. Poland, too, is manifesting a healthy determination to keep her head out of the paws of the Third Reich.

It is an interesting fact that Poland today is making serious efforts to rebuild her alliance with France. Not long ago, Gen. Sikorski, former minister of war and a friend of the late Marshal Foch, was allowed to go to Paris to make discreet soundings on this subject. To be sure, Sikorski has for long been on the outs with the powers-that-be at Warsaw. But the recent visit to France of Premier Skladowski shows that Poland is by no means prepared to write off the Franco-Polish alliance as a total loss. Nor, for that matter, is France.

Yugoslavia Shifts To Paris-London Axis

IN YUGOSLAVIA the recent upset of the Stoyadinovich government, while due almost wholly to domestic factors, may also have a bearing on the foreign policy of that kingdom.

Stoyadinovich followed a policy of propitiating the axis without submitting to it. His successors will be under similar compulsion not to antagonize Germany and Italy. But there is a considerable difference between such a policy and one of following the Berlin-Rome lead. The fact that the Croats and other elements formerly in the opposition now have a toehold in the government suggests that the link to Paris and London will be strengthened. For these opposition elements distrust the Nazis and are, in large measure, Francophile and Anglophile.

Even truncated Czecho-Slovakia is struggling hard and valiantly against excessive German domination. The German press is complaining bitterly because the Prague government is employing dilatory tactics in putting anti-Semite and pro-German laws into effect. While Berlin regards Czecho-Slovakia as a conquered region, the Czechs cling so far as they can to the tradition of liberalism and independence which made their nation, before Munich, an outpost of democracy in Central Europe.

IT ALL GETS DOWN to this: The nations to the east and south of the Third Reich want to preserve their independence. They are increasingly convinced that they can do so. At least they are determined to try and they are encouraged in this determination by the growing strength of the democracies and the increasing internal weakness of the totalitarian powers. These efforts will continue and will be intensified, particularly if the democratic powers now stand their ground.

Now as always, the strong have no trouble in finding allies, the weak stand alone.

Interior Supply Bill Also Includes Funds For Memorial Bridge

Mount Vernon boulevard, which has been dark for several years for reasons of economy, is to be relighted under a $14,000 item in the $160,578,905 Interior Department supply bill reported to the House yesterday.

The measure, which carries $10,642,512 in appropriations for Interior institutions in the District, also provides funds for repair of Arlington Memorial Bridge.

A report on the bill disclosed that the Budget Bureau had been asked to approve an estimate for acquisition of 5,000 acres within 20 miles of Washington for the expansion of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Rejected Two Buildings

The committee rejected a $600,000 estimate for construction of two buildings at the present hospital site on the ground that it had reached a practical saturation point.

Indicating a dissatisfaction with the air conditioning of the Capitol, the committee disallowed $2,500,000 for installation of air conditioning equipment in five Government buildings. Experience and observation have shown, the report said, that air conditioning is not satisfactory when not installed at the time a building is constructed.

Government employes in the following buildings will continue to swelter during Washington summers as a result of the committee's action: Agriculture Department, south wing; State Department, Civil Service Commission, Tariff Commission and Internal Revenue Bureau.

Ickes Is "Chief Janitor"

Secretary Ickes complained during the hearings of a shortage of available office space and high rents, the transcript disclosed, and identified himself as "chief janitor of the United States Government."

The Government now rents 138 buildings within the District and pays local property owners $3,432,000 in rent, he said.

"The rents are going higher," he warned, "because this is a landlord's market. I think we have been a fairy godmother to the real interests interests in Washington."

Ickes said that he had been considering the possibility of moving some Federal offices to Baltimore.

Committee Trims 6 Millions Off Ickes' Budget Request

By the Associated Press.

The House Appropriations Committee whittled $6,254,188 yesterday off the amount requested to run the Interior Department for the year starting July 1, but gave the agency $14,851,991 more than it had for the current fiscal year.

The committee recommended a total of $160,578,905 to finance the department's manifold activities, including reclamation, Indian Service, National Park maintenance, the Geological Survey and the Office of Education.

For the current fiscal year, the department's regular appropriation amounted to $129,678,460, but deficiency items boosted the total to $145,726,913.

Air-Conditioning Denied

Principal reductions effected in the budget estimates included denial of $2,500,000 recommended for air-conditioning of five Federal buildings in Washington, $1,000,000 lopped off a $5,000,000 item for continuation of construction on the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkway and $1,000,000 cut from the estimate for the Bonneville Dam power project.

The committee explained, however, that some of these savings were temporary because the expenditures would have to be made later.

A $600,000 slash was recommended in the bituminous coal commission's funds for next year as necessary if expenditures of that agency were to be held within the anticipated receipts from the 1 per cent excise tax on soft coal under the Guffey coal act. The commission still would get $2,900,000 for the next fiscal year.

USHA Criticized

Criticizing what it called excessive salaries paid some officials of the United States Housing Authority and the USHA's proposals for numerous promotions "in many of the higher salary grades," the committee cut the authority's administrative expense fund from $7,000,000 to $4,500,000 and proposed a ban on promotions in positions paying $4,000 or more yearly.

Among other items in the bill was $1,070,000 for the Government-owned reindeer industry in Alaska.

Brazil Gets Huge Credit for U. S. Goods

By the Associated Press.

One month of conversations between the Brazilian foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, and American Administration leaders came to an end today with far-reaching agreements expected to be announced.

It is learned that Aranha will take back to Brazil assurances of credits for about $20,000,000,000 with which to free Brazil's frozen exchange and permit her importers to make up to date payments on imported American goods; credits from the Export-Import Bank to finance future exports from the United States to Brazil, and an agreement for the creation of a central reserve bank in Brazil, expected to operate through the co-operation of the United States stabilization fund.

President Roosevelt, who gave a luncheon for Aranha yesterday, said of him: "Dr. Aranha has won the friendship and esteem of all who have had the privilege of knowing him, and we wish him a safe and pleasant journey back."

Miss Hepburn Said To Have Bought Play for Screen

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 8.—Film rights to Philip Barry's play, "Philadelphia Story," now playing in Washington, have been sold to an undisclosed person, on a film royalty basis. According to Luise Silcox, executive secretary of the Dramatists Guild, the play is the first to have been sold on a royalty basis before opening in New York.

It was reported the purchaser was Katharine Hepburn, its star, and the play might be filmed by Howard Hughes.

Griffenhagen Aide Defends D. C. Report

Everett Upholds School Board and Public Utilities Commission Items

Two of the chief bones of contention in the Griffenhagen plan for District reorganization were defended last night by Frank Everett, Griffenhagen associate, before the Rhode Island Citizens Association.

Everett defended the recommendation for a school board closely identified with the local government, saying that a study had shown "no correlation between autonomy and efficiency or freedom from politics." The provision already has caused Henry I. Quinn to resign from the Board of Education and aroused opposition of the Federation of Citizens Associations and many individual groups.

The proposal to absorb the Public Utilities Commission into a Public Utilities Department, he said, would, if anything, increase the independence of the commission, since it would be freed of any administrative duties.

This point also has been challenged by the Federation and various associations on the ground that the plan would limit the quasi-judicial powers of the commission.

Everett told the group, "You don't have a government of the District, but a government for the District. You have a mess of unrelated agencies."

North Randall Highlands

North Randall Highlands Citizens Association last night indorsed the stand of the Federation of Citizens on the Griffenhagen plan, agreeing in principle, but demanding that suffrage be incorporated and that the Board of Education remain autonomous.

A special committee was named to study the Shepard bill for an investigation of local liquor sales. On Friday, officers of the association will meet with Sybil Baker, superintendent of playgrounds, to arrange for acquirement of land at Minnesota and E streets southeast for a playground and children's club.

Immediate Change In Soft Coal Act Is Demanded

Immediate amendment of the national bituminous coal act was demanded yesterday by the Committee for Amendment of the Coal Act, through its chairman, John A. Howe. He said, "In practically going back to start its work all over again, the commission gives additional proof that the act in its present form is unworkable."

Howe said the commission's action in terminating its informative hearing and setting March 27 as the date for a final hearing had brought forth protest from producers in the industry. The switch, without due notice, would raise a question of the legality of coal prices when and if arrived at, he said.

Howe said the act requires the commission to find the weighted average costs of producing coal in all sections. "To find costs in an intricate industry such as the coal industry is naturally a most difficult if not impossible task." He added, "Before finding such costs the commission is required by the coal act to hold full and complete hearings and give all interested parties an opportunity to present their case."

Exercise Vote, Elks Told, to Check 'Isms'

Darr Warns Against Becoming Patriotic Flag Wavers

Resolutions opposing communism do not check that doctrine any more effectively than aspirin cures a headache caused by sinus trouble, Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, last night told 300 fellow Elks.

Speaking in observance of the Americanism Week sponsored by the order, Darr appealed for a concerted effort to find the cause of un-American movements, instead of periodic condemnation of the results of discontent.

"Let's not develop into patriotic flag-waivers," he said. "We must think clearly and then act in the spirit of American democracy.

"Sins of omission are more deadly than those of commission," he declared. "No man who fails to exercise his constitutional freedom of speech or fails to make use of his franchise can call himself an American patriot, no matter how often he marches in parades."

March Field, Calif., March 8 (A).—Col. Jacob E. Fickel, Ninth Corps Area aviation officer at the Presidio of San Francisco, was named a brigadier general in command of the first wing of the United States Army Air Corps today, subject to Senatorial confirmation.

He is scheduled to succeed Brig. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, recently elevated to major general in command of the general headquarters air force.

G. W. Medical Student Invents Device to Record Heart Beats

A third-year medical student at George Washington University who used to sing in a night club to help pay his way through school was revealed yesterday as the developer of a heart beat recorder which is expected to have many valuable uses.

Assembled by Edmund Ziman after a year's experimentation, the diagnostic device is now being used on cardiac patients at Gallinger Hospital. Ziman is from New York City.

The young inventor emphasized that the apparatus embodies no new principles, consisting merely of a phonograph recording machine, a microphone stethoscope, recording amplifier and playback machine. Recordings of heart sounds have been made before, he explained, but results have not been satisfactory.

With the new device, said Ziman, these sounds are preserved for "playback" purposes with their original qualities. Heart beats heard on a record sound exactly as they would under a stethoscope.

Avantages of the instrument, as explained by Ziman and his teachers, are that it will facilitate teaching and, in addition, permit the keeping of more complete and accurate case histories by attending doctors. A cardiac patient might, for instance, have his beats recorded from time to time as an aid in noting changes in his condition.

Miss Smith Feted On Retirement

Miss Marion Smith, who came here as an 18-year-old Texas girl to work for the Government, told her associates good-by yesterday in resigning after 49 years of service. More than 50 fellow workers honored her at a party and give her a gold watch. Miss Smith said her first activity in retirement would be to plunge into spring housecleaning at her home, 1201 M street northwest.

Officially, she leaves the service in the chief clerk's office, Interior Department, on March 31.

Labor Dispute Delays Bridge

Work on the $2,000,000 Pennsylvania avenue bridge over the Anacostia is nearly at a standstill pending settlement of a jurisdictional dispute between the pile drivers and rod workers, it was learned yesterday.

After pouring the cement piles, it was explained, a small piece of a central rod is left sticking out. The rod workers have left the project until it is decided whether they shall cut the rod at the top of each pile or whether the work shall be done by the pile drivers.

Deputy Allen, Warring Trial Witness, Fired

Marshal Colpoys Announces Dismissal; Refuses to Comment

The Department of Justice yesterday announced that United States Marshal John B. Colpoys had reported he had dismissed Deputy Harry C. Allen, whom he suspended during the Warring criminal contempt of court hearing.

Deputy Thomas R. East, who was suspended at the same time, was reinstated last week.

Allen and East gave testimony valuable to two lawyers who were exonerated of contempt and Colpoys promptly suspended them pending an investigation of whether they improperly notified defense lawyers of their evidence. The deputies said they reported to Colpoys' office two days before they testified.

Colpoys refused to discuss the case.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Murphy announced yesterday he would send a message to Congress today asking that United States deputy marshals be placed under civil service.

Letters on the subject to Speaker Bankhead and Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, will be accompanied by a draft of a bill to carry out the recommendation.

The decision to make this request is an outgrowth of the jury-tampering scandals arising from the Warring income tax conspiracy trials. Murphy directed the G-men to make a full investigation of the local situation. He would make no comment on the progress of this inquiry.

The department bill, it is understood, will exempt special deputies appointed in emergency situations for service not to exceed ten days and paid on a per diem basis.

Musicians' Union Asked to Shorten Symphony Season

The Musicians Protective Union last night was invited to agree to a 23-week season for the National Symphony Orchestra in 1939-40, instead of the anticipated 25 weeks, in a letter signed by Dr. William McClellan, president of the symphony association.

Pointing out that a "thorough and well managed" campaign has brought in a sustaining fund of $103,272 instead of the announced goal of $111,000, Dr. McClellan said the orchestra could be operated for a 23-week season for $103,000, the same as the amount subscribed for the current season.

The association believes "it cannot continue with less than a first-rate orchestra of 80 men," the letter continues, urging a reduction in the length of next year's season as the only possibility of "keeping faith with its subscribers."

His Arm in Sling, Man Is Hit by Car And Leg Is Broken

His right arm in a sling from a recent fracture, John P. Werner, 58, of Cottage City, Md., suffered a broken left leg last night when he was struck by an automobile on Rhode Island avenue in Mount Rainier.

Werner was taken by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad to Casualty Hospital. The driver of the car, Joseph A. Dean, 23, of Glendale, Md., was released on his own bond.

Capital News In Brief

Robber Caught in Act

A Baltimore colored man was arrested after he hurled a brick through the show window of Stanton & Kelly jewelry shop, 1349 U street northwest, and made off with $92 of merchandise.

Attracted by the sound of breaking glass, Officers R. J. Wagner and W. B. Satterthwaite, of the Thirteenth Precinct, arrived in time to see him smash the window of the New York Pawn Broker's Exchange, around the corner at 1916 Fourteenth street. They cornered their quarry and all the jewelry was recovered.

Purse Snatcher Slashed

Police last night asked hospitals to look out for a white youth slashed about the neck and face, believed to have been wounded when he attempted to snatch a purse at Third and Van Buren streets northwest.

Mrs. Bessie Lyman, of 6523 First street northwest, told police she swung the bag at the head of her assailant, and afterward, she found scissors, which she carried in the bag, protruding from the bag, their blades bloody.

Lucky at That

Russell Scruggs, 39, of 1811 North Capitol street, was treated last night at Gallinger Hospital for bruises suffered when he lost his balance after a moving streetcar knocked one crutch from his grip. Scruggs, who is one-legged, fell at the corner of North Capitol and S streets.

Asphyxiated by Coffee

A cup of coffee which went into his lungs instead of stomach caused the death Tuesday of John Kelly, 48, of 909 M street northwest, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ruled last night, issuing a certificate of accidental death by asphyxiation.

Child Hurt in Fall

Raymond Adams, 8, of 3813 M street northwest, was treated at Gallinger Hospital for cuts and bruises after he fell down an embankment near his home.

Safety Society To Seek D. C. Industry Code

Congress to Be Asked To Delegate Power To Draft Standards

A code of "industrial safety standards" for the District will be sought from Congress by the Washington Safety Society which last night ordered appointment of a special committee to look into procedure.

Swen Kjaer, of the Labor Department, in proposing the creation of a code, pointed out that Congress must pass separately on all safety codes or measures for the District and that the Commissioners have not the authority to establish safety standards without Congressional assent. To remedy this situation he suggested that either the Commissioners or the Unemployment Compensation Board be granted power to draw up safety codes for the building and other industries under one act.

Cyril Ainsworth, assistant secretary of the American Standards Association, told the society that, as the District is a State in all but Government, it should aim at coordinating its safety codes with those of the other States.

Dr. Rasmussen Preaches on Lenten Duty

The Lenten season is most fittingly observed by making the surrender to Christ real and absolute, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen said yesterday afternoon at Epiphany Church, addressing the Church Federation Lenten service. Pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, he was introduced by Dr. Warren D. Bowman, of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, who conducted the program.

"In this Lenten season we are again reminded how great a surrender Christ made for us, and gratitude calls for the best that we can dedicate to Him," asserted the clergyman.

Gallinger Compromise Reported

Approval Today By Commissioners Asked; 'Ultimate' Power Ruhland's

A satisfactory settlement of the year-old controversy between Health Officer George S. Ruhland and the two local medical schools over the control of five major wards at Gallinger Hospital will develop today at the District Building, it was learned yesterday.

It was understood the "ultimate" control of the hospital will remain with Dr. Ruhland.

After a week of sessions before a congressional committee, and a report by Richard Mackenzie, District Commissioners' investigator, it is understood the Commissioners will be asked to act today on a compromise agreed on yesterday by Dr. Ruhland with Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University and the Very Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University.

Last July 1, five resident physicians were appointed by Dr. Ruhland to head the major departments at the hospital. Prior to that time, the visiting staff physicians supplied by the medical schools were in charge of the wards.

Navy to Promote Swasey, Architect Of Mosquito Fleet

Commander Albert L. Swasey, leading expert on "suicide" boats, small craft designed for operations against war vessels in narrow seas, was named for promotion by the Navy yesterday.

A prominent civilian architect and a member of the Naval Reserve since the World War, Commander Swasey has been on duty for several months helping the Navy build a fleet of the "mosquito" boats, which have been carried to a high degree of development abroad. He will be promoted to captain in the Volunteer Naval Reserve.

Three other Naval Reservists, prominent in naval construction circles, were selected for promotion to commander at the same time. They are Henry H. W. Keith, head of the department of naval architecture and marine engineering, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Donald R. Battles, Electric Boat Co. official, and Jerome C. Hunsaker, director of the Guggenheim Aeronautical Laboratory at M. I. T.

The Navy Department also announced that Capt. William A. Glassford, commander of the battleship Maryland, has been ordered to China as commander of the Yangtze Patrol, Asiatic Fleet.

Life Begins at 70

Dr. Hasbrouck, 72, Sees to It Mallards Don't Live That Long

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

The wild duck chase which Dr. Edwin M. Hasbrouck is beginning Sunday may turn out to be a wild goose chase instead, but his determined words are, "I'll not come back from there (Florida) until I have bagged a pair of Florida speckled mallards."

A retired physician who will be 73 years old in July, Dr. Hasbrouck, if he isn't the duck-gunnedest hombre in all the wide world, rates so close to the top that it is hair-splitting to call him anything else. And he's got that way just in the last few years, since his retirement from the Veterans' Administration.

All his life he has been an amateur ornithologist and a duck hunter but it is only since he turned 70 that he has become a collector and taxidermist specializing in North American wildfowl. Of the 36 species of wild duck of the United States and Canada excluding the eider duck, he has shot, stuffed and mounted 23 of them. The display specimens adorn the walls of the game room in his home at 4909 Fourteenth street northwest.

Interested In Pairs

The Florida duck, or speckled mallard, is one of the missing 13. Dr. Hasbrouck, after long phenagling, obtained permission to shoot six. Out of a half dozen—assuming he bags that many—both sexes should be represented, he figures. Like all scientific zoological collectors, he is interested in pairs, not singletons.

The only other Eastern species which he lacks are the red-breasted merganser and the American scoter. To get the Western duck he will have to go to the Rockies, the Pacific Coast, perhaps even into Alaska and British Columbia.

But surely you could complete your North American collection by swapping with other fanciers, like the philatelists and numismatists do?

Got Them All Himself

"Fie upon that idea!" thundered the outspoken birdman. "Everything you see on these walls"—and he waved an arm to indicate the dozens of dead, but lifelike, teal, canvasback, mallards, blacks, etc., which decorate the room—"was brought down by me personally."

Born in Syracuse, N. Y., his interest in birds began one winter's day more than 60 years ago when he went on a hike.

"I came across a bluebird, dead, lying in the snow," says Dr. Hasbrouck. "It was so beautiful that it made me want to learn about birds."

He began to collect eggs—"snitching them out of nests is what it was"—and reading up on feathered creatures. By the time he came to Washington to enter Georgetown Medical School he had an enviable collection of birds. A medical student has all he can handle in classroom and laboratory, however, so he had to give up his hobby.

Began Practice in 1895

Dr. Hasbrouck launched his practice here in 1895. When America entered the World War he joined the medical corps and, in 1929, went over to the Veterans' Administration. All this time he hunted whenever he got the opportunity, but always as a sportsman, rather than collector as well.

DR. EDWIN M. HASBROUCK

When he was retired from Government service and time began to drag, he started going down to the bird division of the Smithsonian Institution to putter around. First thing you know he was a taxidermist and a North American wildfowl fan.

Isn't duck hunting a bit rigorous?

"Not at all," Dr. Hasbrouck replies. "I've fallen into water up to my neck and been two hours getting into dry clothes and never had a single sneeze as a reminder. But let me open the door to look out when a fire engine goes by and presto! I have a cold."

Woman of the World

The older, or shall we say the more mature, woman this spring has had as many little flashes of wit and wisdom designed into her clothes as has her teen-aged daughter (illustrated on the following page). There are scarcely any motherly or spinsterly dress types left today. Instead there are many gracious young women of the world wearing snoods and wimples instead of Mama Hats. Their fashion selections on this page have been identified with local stores for your convenience. For information, call The Post Fashion Editor, Marshall Adams, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

To the Fingertips

Fashion designers have gotten themselves mixed up in nail enamel right up to their fingertips. They have even matched the rich red-violet tones of one of the new nail polishes with the print of the silk afternoon frock, above. The dress is pleated all over and dotted with thousands of fingernails.

Sly as an Alligator

The alligator is a crafty old reptile. For years, handbag craftsmen have striven to gloss the alligator's hide to a brilliant sheen. Now all that is over and done with. The very smartest handbags this season will be in dull-surfaced alligator. Dashing, debonair, but—dull! That's the formula. Above, a suave over-the-shoulder bag, Fa-cile closed for ease in opening and closing it.

Circus Dots

A number of clever style creators got together on the striking frock, above. Grace Ashley designed it along the classic lines of her wearable and eternal shirtwaist. She used a fine pure silk crepe from a famous fabric house, splashed with circus dots, in royal and navy. The versatile painter, Covarrubias, designed the Aztec-inspired Telavera rose buttons and matching earrings.

Redingote Fever

A style that is flattering to every figure is the redingote. It is especially liked by the slightly older woman, whose poise and charm depend mainly upon her faultless grooming. A wise choice for her would be the silk lined navy redingote, above, worked in a basket weave woolen and belted in kid. The chic blue and white printed crepe, of course, is part of the twosome.

Dignified Distinction

There are many older women of dignity whose quiet tastes run to the distinction of navy blue for daytime frocks. The woman above wears a dress with the poise it deserves. Its simplicity of line is relieved by tiers of self-scalloping. Removable snowy handmade lingerie details outline the neck and sleeves.

The Integrity of the Store from which you buy is of Importance.

Essential Coat

Perfectly simple and simply perfect is the type of coat above. Its softly flaring skirt, diagonally tucked sleeves and kid-belted waistline achieve a trim neatness for all figures—notably good for the slightly more mature one. The accents of brown for shoulder flower and ascot sit well with the neutral beige of the coat.

SPRING SUIT

A three-piece ensemble suit as gay and colorful as the season. The striped tweed jacket, in a combination of brown, orange, white and taffy, matches the topcoat. The skirt, flared with pressed seams, is in flecked taffy tweed.

High Jacks

Women of varying ages but universal good taste in clothes admire the fine designing hand of Eisenberg, the Chicago style creator. He high jacks figures this spring into perfectly fitting little coats or boleros. The ensemble, above, is typical. A hip-high jacket is slipped over an exquisite frock of superb detail. Ribbed woolen for the jacket is used with its twin smooth-surfaced fabric for the dress. A jeweled clip on the pocket is part of the decor.

QUALITY CLOTHES

by experts

There is much talk in the market about quality. We hear that playing up quality merchandise is the thing for the new season. Fine! Not that it affects our program—for we have always dealt in excellence. The "quality movement" is no adventure for us. It has always been the very pulse of our business. So there's nothing of the impromptu about our beautiful clothes. From start to finish they are done by experts—skilled in every detail that goes toward the final perfection.

A Family Affair . . .

Initial Success

Here is a practical way of creating a rose-tinted outlook for yourself this spring. The girl, above, carries her initials, colored with a new rosy copper hue, on her sleek kid bag. This process gives a little variety to last year's less exciting gold or silver initials, which now can be separately finished in rose tint or both gold and silver combined with rose.

Young Girl's Fancy

Puritan Lass

Priscilla and John Alden would have fallen overboard for this collar and cuff set. It has all the maidenly freshness and demureness so dear to their Puritan hearts. In fact, the squared yoke and cuffs, above, are called pure-Puritan by their designers. Fine eyelet embroidery dots the fine organdy.

Blouse Mad

A perfect frenzy of blouse consciousness has hit Washington women. They're not settling on just one blouse this year for their softly tailored suits. They find the lingerie waists as delectable as a creme de menthe, but the tailored blouse as necessary as beer with skittles. The neatly tucked and buttoned shirtwaist, above, is dead white in an all-silk washable crepe.

Spring Has Come!

Spring is more than just in the air when bright young things sprout forth in their brave new costume suits. One of the most wearable of these afternoon classics is the soft gray woolen, above. The bountifully blue-fox-trimmed jacket makes a girl feel expensive and worldly at even a chaste afternoon tea.

Tiger Lady

The serenely lovely girl, above, resembles anything but a jungle cat, and yet she lets tiger wood get in her hair. "On her head" is better, for her large-brimmed hat is fashioned of tropical tiger wood. It is pressed into mosaic-like strips as fine as silk, then laminated with a waterproofing process, which keeps this new bonnet moisture repellent to the last drop.

Captain Blue

The most nautical and jaunty color of the season is Captain Blue, which is used to advantage in the sandals above — sea legs or no. A Burgundy-colored platform, bright with brass nail heads, outlines the sole, and gives contrast to the perforated cut-out shank.

Beneath It All

Underneath your spring finery will be a foundation exactly suited to your type, your age, your proportions and your ideals of comfort. The girl at right has wisely chosen a pantie girdle adaptable to her lithe young figure. It is of durable, yet lightweight, power-net lastex mesh. Satin and lace makes her brassiere.

In the spring, they say, a young man's fancy is all on love. A girl's may be, too, but most girls also have an eye toward how desirable and glamorous they are going to look when the time comes. To make selection easier for any sweet young thing from 16 on up, the fashions on this page have been assembled. Those who want to try out their seductive charms immediately can get to work at once, for all styles pictured are obtainable in local shops. There are a few classics illustrated here, such as the fur-trimmed town suit and the tailored shirtwaist. Whimsies there are also, like the small-girl hat of tiger wood and the silly little nail-studded boots. Little Sister

Miniature Edition

Miniature editions of mother's or big sister's reefer will be worn by the very smartest little girls any day now. Far-seeing stylists have whipped up little coats like the one, above, in sizes 2 to 6 and on up for bigger girls. White cotton gloves and a China-white straw bonnet give a first-robin look to the practical Munro woolen coat. Of course, the blonde braids with their white ribbons help too.

Voted Most Popular

The high school girls likely to keep their dance books most crowded this spring will be vivacious, happy-looking youngsters. Part of their glamour will be the right dresses for the right occasions. Square necklines on sheer toe-length party frocks are perfect for long, coltish young bodies. Left, above, is a cornflower colored mousseline with self-shirred bandings. Right, above, is a pastel sheer, bowed and horizontally shirred.

Most Likely to Succeed

Even though silk and acetate jerseys have, of late, become prevalant in women's fashions, jersey has remained one of the most perfect fabrics for active teen-aged girls. A wearable and agreeable jersey two-piece for classrooms is the frock, above. Its colors are delicious—Aloha green, sunshine yellow, Frisco pink.

Boots! Boots! Boots!

Kipling would have really had something to write about if he could have seen, and heard, the clatter of little boots across school and campus walks today. Although some schools have banned wooden shoes and heavy clogs, the type of sabot above is growing in favor with the younger set. These are nail-studded in blond-wood, after the manner of little Dutch sabots.

This week is the children's hour of fashions. Every year from March 6 through March 11, the patter of little feet can be heard in stores all over the country, for this is National Children's Week. During this celebration, beautiful new bonnets or berets are fitted on both tiny sister and big sister. Laundry-clean school cottons and woolen coats come whisk off their hangers for the inspection of both mother and "the half-pint." The younger generation fashions on this page are typical of styles to be found in Washington shops. For information, call Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Maedchen in Uniform

The trilogy, above, is as much an everyday uniform to the growing high school girl as a tailored suit is to her older sister out in big business. It's not a bad idea to foster a young girl's preference for sweaters, skirts and jackets, for these can't be beat for wear and classroom adaptability. The flannel skirt is brown, the jacket beige and brown woolen, overplaided in orange.

Gingham Girl

Would you like your "angel child" to look exactly like something out of a story book? If so, put her in this crackling-clean princess frock and send her off to be the envy of her kindergarten set. Mary Haworth's Mail

Bride-to-Be, 19, Must Decide Whether to Live With Husband's Mother, Her Kin, or Off to Herself

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem concerns my 19-year-old maid. Alice is an orphan. When her foster mother died five years ago, she and her foster father went to live with her foster brother and his wife. Alice is very fond of both, and loathe to go against their advice. She was taken out of school and shared the housework with her sister-in-law until she was 17, when she got her first job as a mother's helper. She bought her own clothes and her father continued to pay her board.

At 18, she came to me, as "green help," at $5 a week. Out of this she bought her clothes, paid her doctor's bills and gave her sister-in-law $1 a week. She had her meals at my house, but from 12 until 4 o'clock every day (her time off) she went home and helped. I felt she was working beyond her strength. I increased her wages to $8 a week and shortened her hours until now she does not come to me until noon. She pays her sister-in-law $3 a week for room and breakfasts and still helps with the housework and getting the children off to school. Last spring her sister was ill for two months and Alice gave up her job with me, expecting not to get it back, and nursed her and did all the housework for a family of six.

Now she is planning to marry, some time in April, a 22-year-old boy whom her family thoroughly approves. He is making $20 a week and has had the same job for nine years. His hours are long, from 5 p. m. to 2 a. m., and they agree that Alice, for the present at least, should continue with me. At my suggestion Alice has been going to night school, and should be ready for high school by June. She is an excellent student and enjoys her studies. They had thought of renting a room with kitchenette close by my home and her school.

The boy lives with his mother in an outlying suburb. His help is not needed there, and while his mother would gladly have them with her, she wants them to do what they think best. But now comes the problem: Alice's father thinks she is very young to be entirely on her own; that, therefore, she had best identify herself with her future mother-in-law and make her home there. The sister-in-law claims she has made many sacrifices in bringing her up; that she needs the money Alice has been paying her, and that they should live with her. Neither Alice nor the boy wants to stay there. He feels, as I do, that she has been imposed upon for too long. If she goes to his mother, she cannot either keep her job or finish school.

Alice is old for her years, has long accepted responsibility, and is, in fact, so steady that I had planned to leave her in charge while I took a part-time job. I feel that a self-supporting man of 22 is wise enough to set up his own establishment, especially if his wife is an excellent cook and skilled worker. And, of course, if she goes to his mother's, I lose an excellent maid; but I would rather see her do that than stay on with the sister-in-law, who is a trouble-maker. Just recently, Alice learned that her brother never knew she had been paying board regularly for almost a year.

We would like your opinion, as to whether she should start on her own, go to the mother-in-law, or stay in the crowded household of three adults and three small children. She must decide within a couple of weeks which course to choose. Sincerely,

HOUSEWIFE.

Get Away From Family

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: Not only should Alice and her young man go off to themselves, after they marry, but she shouldn't feel the slightest qualm of conscience—so far as her sister-in-law is concerned—in so doing. It appears to me that she has more than paid her way during the time she has been living under her sister-in-law's roof; that she has, indeed, been rather callously exploited; and that she would be courting marital catastrophe in asking her husband-to-be to settle down with her upon that bed of nettles which she has so meekly endured during the years since she lost her mother.

The fine sense of responsibility, the sturdy strength of character, the admirable unselfishness, the ability to deal ably with crises as they arise, which she has demonstrated during these years, would seem to constitute positive proof that she is quite mature enough to stand on her own feet, apart from foster kin and parents-in-law. Under the circumstances, I do not believe she could possibly chart a wiser course than to set up housekeeping in the room-with-kitchenette, close by her home and her school, and thereafter concentrate all her energies on developing her own and her husband's social potentialities. Incidentally, she is to be congratulated on having a mother-in-law (in the offing) who has the good sense to let her son and his fiancee work out their plans without interference. M. H.

Gloves and Beaux

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is it necessary to wear gloves with a formal, or are they just carried? Also, I would like any suggestions you can give me for inducing some men friends to go places with me instead of just parking in the parlor. Sincerely,

PERPLEXED.

Customary Usage

DEAR PERPLEXED: Unless one is going to an extremely formal entertainment, where full ceremonial honor is to be paid distinguished personages, it is—according to my observation—no longer necessary even to carry long gloves, much less wear them. However, they are seen either worn or carried, by a few women—at nearly all evening affairs where decollete evening gowns appear. But the tradition concerning long gloves for ladies in full dress is nowadays more honored in the breach than in the observance. The trend is definitely toward wrist length gloves worn for the utilitarian purpose of keeping the hands warm in chilly clime or weather, and put aside with one's wrap.

If, in soliciting the pleasure of your company for an evening, a man fails to suggest some place to go, it is your prerogative to perform that office for him. If he is so thoughtless—or so niggardly—as to assume that you will be delighted just to sit out the evening at home, you are amply justified in acting on the assumption that, of course, he is taking you out. Thus, when he calls or after he arrives you may casually and lightly submit a choice of things to do—such as the movies, ice skating, calling on friends, dropping in at a new cocktail bar, having another couple in for bridge, etc. In other words, set the social pace yourself, if he shows no inclination to do so. If he enjoys your company, he will promptly follow your cue, and thereafter be ready with suggestions of his own. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Plays Double Role With Her Wardrobe Is Daring in Sports and Casual Clothes, Ultra-Feminine in Evening Ones

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU'RE TIRED of it all, of contemplating your same drab and uneventful-looking self day after day, then take a tip from a woman of positive personality. You've guessed it—Katharine Hepburn is the stage and screen star who believes that the one sure way of never getting bored with yourself is to become a study in contrasts. Certainly no one could accuse the fiery-haired actress, who is appearing here this week, of being anything but a contradictory and magnetic person herself.

Miss Hepburn's formula for chic and verve is one that can be adapted by even the humdrum office worker. It involves playing a double role with your own wardrobe. It involves giving it, and yourself, a change in venue. More important, it involves stepping up your personality to meet the new season, by means of a change of costume between acts.

Here's the way the willowy and picturesque Miss Hepburn does it herself. She expresses her mood, or whim, by her outfit and accessories. When daring of thought and action, she dons a casual, yet imperative looking suit. In her new stage comedy she is dressed by Valentina, a Russo-American, herself moody and exciting looking, who created ensembles to express Miss Hepburn's transient and subtle alterations in character during the course of the play.

Tailored Play Suit

As a self-willed, headstrong young patrician, Hepburn dashes about in a tailored play suit. Her debonair manner is suggested by means of very brief and dashing shorts and a man's shirt. She looks and is a hoyden! Still in an assured and "the-queen-can-do-no-wrong" mood, Hepburn wears a boldly checked luncheon dress, whose demure petticoat is offset by impertinent red shoes. Somewhat more tame, yet still commanding is Hepburn, dressed in a dinner gown of pleated white chiffon. She looks like a tawny and still defiant young Valkyrie in this. And last, for her transition into the chastened young bride, her manner and mood react to the softening influence of candy-pink chiffon.

Naturally every girl can not have Valentina provide a change of scenery with every costume, but as Hepburn is in private life a colorful study in contrasts, so can many a girl practice her preachings. She can adapt some of her own flashes of wit by collecting gay little sweaters to top her evening frocks this spring. Amusing belts, scarves, costume jewelry, initialed shirtwaists, like Hepburn's own, clever mad caps or fishnet veiled toques worn with afternoon frocks will at least give spice to her spring wardrobe—and perhaps add a touch of Hepburn personality.

Father Loses Out In Clothes Budget

It SEEMS that father isn't getting his share of the clothing budget. According to the figures, the daughter of sixteen to twenty-nine spends most for clothes, with wife second and husband running way behind in a poor third. That's in families where the income is over one thousand dollars a year. Where the income is less than that, the father spends the biggest proportion—probably because the whole family is on a necessity level. Another sidelight—men who earn five thousand dollars or over spend a larger percentage for their clothes than men who earn less. Some explain this by saying that the higher paid man must dress up to his job.

Decanter Cleaner

Use potato water for cleaning decanters and other bottles with small necks. Cut a raw potato and put the pieces into the decanter. Nearly fill with warm water, shake well and the cleaning is done. Drain, rinse in warm soapy water, then in clear warm water. Invert to dry.

Party Eve

"Honestly, I don't see sow I'm ever going to live through it—Oh, Viola! Will you call the caterer and tell him WHATEVER he does not to forget to put the shamrocks on the little cakes! Well, the whole thing is—it's just not worth it! No! Why, I haven't gotten to bed before 1 a. m. for a week—oh, there's the phone again! Well, if it's for me, tell 'em I just can't come . . . Who? . . . Mrs. Welcher? Well, I simply can't talk to her! No! . . . No! Tell her to call back later. I'm simply not going——Oh, wait, I might as well talk to her and get it over with.

"Now, what do you think she wanted? . . . Why, her brother-in-law's ex-wife is here visiting and she didn't want to leave her alone and—well, what was there to do but to tell her to bring her? Now I'll have to find another man. Say, Marjorie! Call Bob Giddings quick! . . . I don't care if he is young, he's pretty bald on top.

"My, I'm simply ready to drop. It's such a nervous strain. Viola, don't forget about the ash trays. I simply can't have all my flower pots filled with junk. Well, I'll certainly be happy this time tomorrow, when it's all over and done with. I simply can't see why I ever got started in these things—Say! did I remember to call the man about the chairs? Wait till I look at my list—now where on earth is my list? Viola! Did you take my list? Oh, here it is, under my belt!

"Yes, I ordered the chairs but—say, I wonder if the caterer will have sense enough to send green mints? Oh, viola! . . . You know, I'm going to sleep a week just as soon as this is over. Yes, I mean it. Oh, I wonder if I sent out that extra invitation to t. Chipps. She'll be perfectly furio. she's not invited. Where's my li. . . . Oh, I've lost my list again! Viola! Marjorie!

Well, there's just this much about it—as soon as this thing's over I'm really going to settle down and lead a normal life. Yes, I mean it! I just don't like parties, anyway. I'm not the type—oh, I wonder if I've got enough salad forks. Maybe I'd better call Harriet and ask her to bring hers, just in case . . . Oh, Marjorie!

"I tell you there's really nothing in this sort of thing. Where does it get you? What we all really need is to be alone more. Yes! to read . . . and mediate. "The world is too much with us—Marjorie, call Aunt Harriet and ask her to bring over her salad forks—oh, yes, and she'd better bring some extra spoons just in case . . .

"I tell you once this is over I'm going to cut out all this sort of thing. I mean it! It simply takes too much out of you. Nature never intended us to live this way—Viola, will you call the man at the caterer's and tell him WHATEVER he does to send the green mints? Anyway, it'll soon be over onw and that's something. I'll certainly feel like a free woman this time tomorrow and one thing certain—never again! I mean it! I'm through—Say! WHERE are the favors? My heavens! Did I forget the favors?"

The Day After

"Yes, I'm certainly glad it's over . . . Yes, I'm terrioly tired but I do think everything did go off very nicely . . . You really think everybody had a good time? . . . I'm so glad. You think Mrs. Bigger enjoyed it? . . . Say, the Swanks seemed to be having a grand time . . . Well, it was an awfully nice crowd . . . Oh, did you like the salad? . . . I'm so glad. Well, everybody just seemed to eat as if they were simply starved.

"What? . . . Yes I do feel greatly relieved to get it over. Still it went off so much better than I had expected. Of course if I had to do it again there's some things I'd do differently. For one thing, I'd have the tinted potato chips. . . Yes, and I'd have cheese wafers instead of plain ones with the salad . . . maybe some shrimp puffs—you know, like Mrs. Hatcher serves. Yes, that would be a nice—Say! Just as soon as the flowers come out a little more . . . and it gets a little warmer, you know what I believe I'll do?. . . I believe . . . I'll . . . give a little garden party!"

Your Figure, Madame!

Actresses Keep Youthful Through Proper Exercise

According to our almanac, which is by no means reticent about telling a woman's age, many of our favorite actresses are nudging 40 and some of them are well past the nudging stage. Yet we would rather go to see them than many of the so-called glamour girls just making their debuts.

If there is anything about the art of staying younger longer than these actresses have not mastered, it can't be very important. Discounting a certain mature charm which only enhances their fascination, they look very little older than they did 10, 15, and even 20 years ago. They are too attractive "in person" for camera magic or make-up to be the explanation.

Secret Is Relaxation

In spite of her recent Hollywood troubles, Kay Francis completely coincides with the average woman's conception of a smart actress, a style setter and a beauty. Miss Francis is now 40—just the popular age—but a comparison of photographs proves that she looks younger and lovelier now than she did 10 years ago.

Miss Francis' beauty secrets can be summed up in one word—relaxation. She likes sun and air, a moderate amount of activity and plenty of rest. Sailing is her favorite recreation, for it furnishes all these things.

Our tattling almanac states that Alice Brady and Ina Claire were both born in 1892—which seems like an exaggeration. Some of the most hilariously nitwit roles are portrayed by Miss Brady and the irresistible sirens enacted by Miss Claire are the real thing. Both are slender and Miss Claire is cited every now and then for having the most beautiful carriage of any actress. They follow special exercises to keep their measurements trim and watch the calories to stay at normal weight.

Billie Burke Keeps Charm

But what we can't get over is the fact that Billie Burke is 54! Discounting her share of mature charm, Miss Burke does not look more than five years older than she did 20 years ago, when she was the Queen of the footlights on Broadway. As a perennial beauty she is something to marvel at—and so is her beauty program. It is simple but rigorous. She exercises for 15 minutes every morning and, in addition, walks two and often five miles daily. Since she never neglects this routine, it serves to keep her measurements perfect: bust, 37 inches; hips, 37 inches; waist, 26½ inches.

Being individualists, these beauties have their own ideas as to how to go about keeping their looks, but their programs are simple. You could follow a similar one easily—and you would, too, if your career depended upon your youthful appearance.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Former Reporter Guiding Light of Singer; Sonja Henie Departs With Armload of Furs

New York, March 8.

A FEW nights ago, at a dinner party at the home of Miss Tobe, the fashion shark, one of my sister guests was Hildegarde, the little blonde night club and radio singer. Even though she corralled most of the male attention I really didn't mind, for after dinner she was prevailed upon to sit down at the piano and give out six or eight numbers in her peculiarly charming style.

ALICE HUGHES

Quite a girl, this Hildy. Although she is billed as "an international star," she is a Milwaukee girl, and rates the international tag because for nearly five years she operated successfully in the best night spots of Paris and London. Her somewhat baffling accent represents a strange mingling of Milwaukee and the Old World capitals, and her way of speech absolutely defies analysis. Hildy, whose voice is no world-beater, owes her success to her brilliant style of song-rendition. And at the moment she is doing very well for herself, what with her weekly appearance on a big Wednesday night radio show and an engagement after the theater at one of the Fifth avenue hotels.

One of the most interesting things about Hildy is her long association with the girl who is known simply as Anna. Anna was a newspaper reporter in Camden, N. J., when she met Hildegrade, and sensing the blonde's possibilities, quit the newspaper business and became Hildy's general factotum. She makes engagements for her and handles all her public relations, and the current success of this remarkable team is due in no small measure to Anna's deft manipulation. Anna allows Hildegrade a dollar a day for spending money, which just allows for a drug store breakfast and a limited number of cigarettes. A mighty nice, cute kid is this Hildegrade—and always look behind the success of such an entertainer for the inevitable Anna. There is always one.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—When Sonja Henie got off the Normandie the other day after its cruise to Rio, she was wearing silver fox and carrying a long mink coat over one arm. This may seem like an embarrassment of riches, but with all the money the Norse baby has made in the past year, I shouldn't have been surprised to see her come down the gangplank walking on an ermine carpet.

I find that the newest gadget for beaches is the shade glass, as a replacement for the long-popular colored glasses. The new sun protector acts more as an awning, and the wearer looks under them rather than through them. They are in fact a form of beach blinders.

The death of Krupskaya, widow of Lenin, in Moscow reminds me that during several visits to Russia I made frantic but unavailing efforts to meet this Old Lady of the Revolutiom. My failure was a sad journalistic flop, and it was one story that I was forced to come home without.

Society to Give Series of Parties For Governor and Mrs. Maybank

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

GOINGS AND COMINGS and informal get-togethers for visitors and just for instance are making most of the social news these days when formal partying definitely has subsided in deference to Lent.

But into town early today to add a fillip of interest to the social scene will come the Governor of South Carolina and Mrs. Barnet Maybank, who will hardly get their bags unpacked at the Mayflower before they are launched into a round of gala parties planned for them.

HOPE R. MILLER

Featured on their social calendar will be the dinner tonight given by the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. John Monroe Johnson, who will have their party at the Chevy Chase Club. Guests will include Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, who is a close friend of Gov. Maybank, and members of the congressional delegation of South Carolina, all of whom are acquainted with the Governor. Incidentally, Mrs. Johnson is distantly related to him, and her husband, Col. Johnson, who will return from a trip to Charleston on the same train that brings the Maybanks, has known the Governor for a number of years.

As everybody knows by now, or should, the Maybanks are coming to Washington on invitation of the South Carolina State Society, which will give a reception for them tomorrow night at the Shoreham Hotel. Prior to the event, Senator and Mrs. James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, will entertain the Governor and Mrs. Maybank at a buffet supper at the Shoreham. Later, standing in the receiving line with the guests of honor at the reception will be Edgar Morris, president of the South Carolina State Society, and Mrs. Morris, and members of the South Carolina Congressional delegation. The Governor and his wife will return to Charleston on Friday.

Mrs. Knight Davies Arriving for Visit

Mrs. Knight Davies and her daughter, Miss Emlen Davies, and Mrs. Aldace Walker, will arrive in Washington tomorrow to be the week-end guests of Mrs. Davies' son-in-law and daughter, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings at the Shoreham Hotel. Miss Davies whose engagement to Robert Leon Grosjean, of Brussels, Belgium, was announced recently will be guest of honor at a small tea to be given by Senator and Mrs. Tydings on Sunday afternoon. Friends of the bride-elect will make up the company.

Miss Davies, who with her mother recently returned from a trip to Rio de Janeiro, will leave April 1 for Brussels to visit her father, Joseph Davis, United States Ambassador to Belgium, who will not be over to attend her wedding the latter part of May. Mr. Grosjean is not expected to arrive in this country until early that month.

Mrs. Frank C. Letts Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Frank C. Letts, who has an apartment at the Anchorage, went across the street to Pierre's yesterday to entertain about a dozen of her friends at luncheon. The party was something in the nature of a farewell event, as Mrs. Letts will leave tomorrow for Lake Forest, Ill., to spend three weeks visiting her daughter, Mrs. George McLaughlin, jr. Her other daughter is Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador.

Among Mrs. Letts' luncheon guests yesterday were Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, who recently was visited by the famous explorer and geographer, Miss Louise Arner Boyd, and Mrs. Pendleton Mayo.

French Envoy Entertained At Dinner

When the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, was entertained at a dinner given last evening by Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, table decorations were in keeping with the event. Ten dainty figurines, copied down to the last bow-knot from original drawings of eighteenth century French costumes were flanked with fan-shaped flower holders, also embellished with lace and rosebuds. Looking like miniature Marie Antoinettes and other ruffled and be-wigged ladies of that era, the small figures stood in bowers of rosebuds and fern, which were further decorative accents for the table.

Mrs. Bloom made the centerpiece herself, finishing it about a year ago after months of work that began with research at the Library of Congress and ended in her home on Columbia road. There, she molded rosebuds, painted the dresses and dyed touches of feminine finery here and there to complete the 20-piece set that last evening decorated a dinner table for the first time.

In addition to the French Ambassador, those present at the "inauguration dinner" were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Marc Peter, the Minister of Portgual and Mme. de Bianchi, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. William E. Borah, Representative Caroline O'Day, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jacques Truelle; James Clement Dunn, political adviser of the State Department, and Miss Vera Bloom, daughter of the host and hostess.

Mrs. Werlich Gives A Cocktail Party For Miss Nash

Mrs. McCeney Werlich entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party at her home on Sixteenth street in honor of Miss Caroline Nash, who will leave soon for Europe.

Mrs. Werlich and Miss Nash have just returned from a tour of Mexico, and in honor of the visit the party had a distinct Mexican flavor. Decorations were in the riotous colors of that country and the brilliantly colored pottery and artificial fruit recently brought back from there by Mrs. Werlich were used for decorating the buffet and for serving.

Miss Nash will leave soon for the cote d'azur, where she will probably meet her favorite tennis partner, King Gustav of Sweden.

Harris & Ewing.

Photographed on their way to luncheon are Mrs. John McLain Wilson, of Chicago, daughter of Mrs. Arthur McFarland, of this city, and Mrs. Reed Dolan. Mrs. Wilson is the former Miss Alice McFarland and this is her first trip to Washington since her marriage. She is slated for a round of parties to be given in her honor

Parties Await Mrs. Brock

Many parties are in store for Mrs. William E. Brock, who will arrive from Tennessee on Monday to be the guest of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, of Georgia.

One of the largest will be the luncheon which Mrs. George will give on Thursday, March 16, and at which Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, and Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, will be 2 of the 75 guests.

On the day following Mrs. Brock's arrival, Mrs. Jack Hayes will fete her at a luncheon at the Chevy Chase Club. Then on March 17, Mrs. Brock, who is the wife of former Senator Brock, of Tennessee, will be guest of honor at an informal luncheon to be given by Mrs. Hugo Black.

Mrs. O. Max Gardner will be her hostess at a small dinner on March 13, and on March 15 Mrs. Lister Hill, wife of Senator Hill, of Alabama, will give a luncheon in her honor.

Miss Eckloff To Sing Here

Miss Margaretta Eckloff, 18-year-old daughter of Harry W. Eckloff, of the Department of the Interior, and Mrs. Eckloff, will make her Washington debut as a soprano soloist on Tuesday evening, March 16, at a musicale given by H. LeRoy Lewis at the Washington Club.

Miss Eckloff, a senior at American University, sang in Baltimore last October on a regular Sunday afternoon concert program.

Among those who plan to attend the musicale are Mrs. Thomas Reed, Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, Mrs. William Wheatley, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Atwood and Miss Katherine Doughall. Malton Boyce will be the accompanist for Miss Eckhoff.

Dinner at Palm Beach Honors Miss Boardman

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, who is vacationing in Palm Beach, Fla., was guest of honor at a dinner given there Tuesday night by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Cudahy.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Henry R. Rea was hostess at a tea at which Miss Boardman spoke. The event, for the executive board of the Palm Beach Red Cross, took place at the Lagomar.

Texas Representatives Entertained by Clarks

The Special Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. Thomas C. Clark were hosts at dinner in the Blue Room at the Shoreham last night.

Among their guests were Representative and Mrs. Paul J. Kilday and Representative Ed Gossett, all of Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were formerly of Texas.

Mrs. Branch Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Harllee Branch, wife of the vice chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, entertained at luncheon yesterday in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mrs. Edwin Pou, widow of Representative Pou, of North Carolina. Mrs. Pou is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden.

Mrs. Branch has issued invitations for a luncheon, March 18, in honor of two recent brides, Mrs. Schuyler William Livingston, formerly Miss Mary Walton McCandlisch, of Fairfax, Va., and Mrs. Arthur Lord Murphy, formerly Miss Eleanor Harllee, of Greensboro, N. C.

'Chip' Robert Really Surprises His Wife With Surprise Party at 1925 F Street

WILLIAM and a red carpet outside the 1925 F Street Club yesterday gave signs that there were social doings within—and sure enough, several hundred people had gathered there to wish "happy birthday" to Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr.

Mr. Robert, better known as "Chip," had arranged the whole thing as a surprise—and despite the fact that a D. C. social columnist had spilled the beans a day or so before, the guest of honor knew nothing about it beforehand. Which proves that, while difficult, it is sometimes possible to keep a secret in Washington.

"EVIE" ROBERT was inveigled to the club by her husband's telling her he had two friends from Atlanta who wanted to meet her. On arrival the two turned out to be nearer 200—an amusing mixture of politicos, newspaper people, and just plain residents.

People were constantly rushing up to other guests and greeting them effusively, only to discover they had never met, but had seen them in the newsreels so constantly that they felt like old friends. Among the "newsreel faces" were Attorney General Frank Murphy; Senator Arthur Capper, Senator Tom Connally, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the latter wearing a black dress and a smart black hat trimmed with pale lavender velvet ribbon, and Stewart MacDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, who has the best tan in Washington after his stay in Palm Beach.

Several, just returned from vacations, were present. We saw Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who came back not long ago from two weeks of seclusion in the country. (We hear that the Secretary is planning to join the fleet in the Caribbean.) Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land were other Navy folk present. Mrs. Land just up and about again after a siege on crutches.

The guest of honor wore a redingote dress, navy blue over a green and yellow print. Spring flowers were placed on the small tables. Many of the guests elected to sit down and watch proceedings from comfortable chairs.

Spring hats were everywhere. Mrs. Higginson Rogers topped off her blue fox jacket with a bonnet of toast colored straw trimmed with a veil. Mrs. Emory Sands had red poppies on hers. Mrs. Sands will leave shortly to return to New York, where she is working for the World Fair.

Mrs. S. Kent Legare wore a coat that screamed of Paris—very plain, black cloth, tightly fitted and draped in front. Her hat was of black fur. George T. Summerlin, jr., chief of protocol of the State Department, sat at a table with his attractive daughter-in-law, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., who wore a black frock and a little straw hat with a pink rose in front.

Mrs. John Hanes, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, was at another table deep in conversation with Jasper DuBose. Mrs. George T. Pettingill, who spends her summers in Essex, Conn., where she has a house, had with her Mrs. Thomas Comstock of that place, who is visiting her.

ALSO NOTED: Mrs. Wallach Merriam, pouring tea and wearing a new spring hat, of black straw with blue veiling; Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, George Garrett, Mrs. John R. Williams, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. Hetzel in a smart new suit trimmed with fur; the John Caswells, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Storm, William McAvoy, Arthur Krock, Leone Fumasoni Biondi, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, chatting with Admiral Mark Bristol,

Miss Elizabeth Magill Ralston Engaged To Wed Youart H. Kerslake in Summer

Bride-to-Be Is a Daughter of Late Army Officer

Of wide interest in both Washington and Honolulu, Hawaii, is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Magill Ralston, daughter of Mrs. Ralston and the late Col. Robert R. Ralston, to Youart Herbert Kerslake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert R. Kerslake, of Burnt Mills Hills, Md.

Miss Ralston received her education here at Western High School and also at Punahou School in Honolulu. Her father was stationed at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, for several years and was in command of the Third Engineers of that post. He was one of the most highly thought of officers in the Army. Ralston Field, at Schofield Barracks, was named in his honor.

Col. Ralston was stationed for many years in Washington, and their older daughter, Mrs. Robert H. Booth, the former Miss Constance Ralston, made her debut in this city in 1930. Mrs. Booth now makes her home in Fort Sill, Okla., where her husband, Lieut. Booth, of the Field Artillery, is stationed.

The wedding has been planned for the summer, in order that Lieutenant and Mrs. Booth may come to Washington to attend the event.

Mr. Kerslake was born in London, England, attended Friends School here and was graduated from Harvard College in 1933. He received his LL. B. degree from George Washington University Law School in 1937, and is a patent lawyer in this city.

Miss Ralston, who, with her mother, has made her home in Washington for some time, has been actively engaged in Red Cross activities for the past year.

Mrs. H. W. Keyes To Entertain For Maggie Conroy

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes (Frances Parkinson Keyes) will entertain at luncheon today in honor of Miss Maggie Conroy, noted educator of Lima, Peru, who is the house guest of Capt. and Mrs. Irving Mayfield. Miss Conroy will be in the United States for some time before returning to South America.

She has been widely feted since she arrived here from Europe a few days ago to visit Capt. and Mrs. Mayfield, whom she knew when the former was naval attache in Peru. Mrs. W. S. Culbertson entertained at a luncheon for Miss Conroy on Tuesday, and Capt. and Mrs. Mayfield feted her at a party on Sunday.

Mrs. Keyes, who has invited in a few friends to meet the visitor today, will entertain at a supper party on March 17 in compliment to Miss Ordway Whitford, whose marriage to Burton Wadsworth will take place the following day.

Mr. and Mrs. Legare Honor Albert Deweys

Mr. and Mrs. S. Kent Legare entertained last evening at a small dinner at their home on S street in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey, who are house guests of the Legares, will return today to New York.

British Envoy Feted at Dinner

The British Ambasador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay were guests of honor last evening at a dinner given by the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims. The party, to which a number of official and social notables were invited, took place at the Wardman Park Hotel where the Simses make their home.

The guest list included the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil; Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, the Counselor of the Danish Legation and Mme. Eickhoff, the Swedish Courselor and Mme. Wennerberg, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. Philip Goffin, Miss Irene Boyle and George Garrett.

The dinner was one in a number of such events enlivening the calendar last evening. Angus Malcolm, Second Secretary of the British Embassy, was host at a very small dinner. Mrs. David Barry entertained a few guests at the 1925 F Street Club and Robert Coe also was a dinner host.

Lynn Pattersons Give Dinners

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lynn Patterson, of Bogota, N. J., and New York City, who are spending several days in Washington, were hosts at a series of small dinners this week at the Shoreham Blue Room.

They had 10 guests last evening, the same number Tuesday evening and an equal number on Monday evening. They plan to leave today or tomorrow for New York City.

Mrs. Hutchison, Sister Are Here From Florida

Mrs. Benjamin F. Hutchison and her sister, Miss Gertrude Weaver, have come from Florida, where they have spent several weeks, and are at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Hutchison, whose country home is in Marcy, N. Y., will remain at the Shoreham until after Easter, but Miss Weaver is going on to New York City in a few days. Mrs. Hutchison usually spends the winter in Washington.

Lord Rothschild Here

Lord Rothschild, of Merton Hall, Cambridge, England, who has been at the Towers of the Waldorf-Astoria since arriving in this country several weeks ago, is now registered at the Mayflower Hotel. He plans to be here for several days.

Mrs. Walcott Entertains

No doubt the floral centerpiece at the luncheon given yesterday at the Sulgrave Club by Mrs. Charles D. Walcott was one of the most attractive of the season. The party was in honor of Mrs. Constance Spry, of England, who is noted for having the last word and best taste in floral arrangements both in this country and abroad. The luncheon took place preceding the lecture which Mrs. Spry gave at the Shoreham yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Walcott's other guests included Mrs. B. Y. Morrison, president of the American Horticultural Society; Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. William Holland Weimer and her house guest, Mrs. Serena Hutchinson; Mme. Cantacuzene, Mrs. Charles M. Lea and Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson. Mrs. Walcott is first vice president of the American Horticultural Society.

Another luncheon given before the lecture was that at which Mrs. Dion Scott Birney, president of the Trowel Garden Club, was hostess. Her guests included Mrs. Parke A. Galleher, Mrs. Allison Miller, Mrs. T. Y. Milburn, Mrs. Arthur Bliss and Mrs. Richard Saunders.

In New York

Mrs. Theodore Peyser is spending a week in New York as the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Raiss.

Mrs. Gann Head Of Republican Dinner Sponsors

'Five-Dollar-a-Plate' Party Enlisting Aid Of Social Notables

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann heads the list of prominent Washington women who are working for the success of the Republican "Five-Dollars-a-Plate" dinner, which will be given at the Mayflower Hotel on March 27.

Leading Republicans here and throughout the country are planning to attend and reservations are pouring in. Well-known society women active in planning the event are Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. William H. Doak, Mrs. Frank Wheeler Mondell, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster and Mrs. Warren J. Haines.

Colonial Dames Fete President

Mrs. Hutchinson Guest of Honor At Reception in Dumbarton House

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., president of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America, was honored yesterday at a reception given at Dumbarton House, in Georgetown, headquarters of the national society, by the District organization. The reception followed the regular monthly meeting of the local group, held in the morning, which Mrs. Hutchinson attended.

Her visit to the District completed those she has made since taking office to each of the societies in the United States, and she told the Washington members of their work as well as that of the national society.

Society Aids in Preserving Documents

The latter has published such works as "Index to Virginia Wills," "Travels in the American Colonies," "The Letters of Richard Henry Lee," and other papers of historic value. It was responsible for the erection of the first monument ever placed in Arlington Cemetery by a woman's society; it restored the church in historic Jamestown thus bringing before the public the value of sites falling into oblivion through neglect of the descendants of the early setilers; raised an endowment for the preservation and maintenance of the English home of the ancestors of George Washington, Sulgrave Manor; and maintains Dumbarton House as a headquarters and museum.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, were among the guests yesterday, as were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wives of associate justices of the Supreme Court.

All were interested in the old house and its authentic furnishings. It was once the property of George Beall, built before 1751 on part of a tract belonging to Ninian Beall, his father, and patented in 1703.

Mrs. Fairfax Harrison Heads D. C. Society

Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Belvoir, Va., president of the District society; Mrs. Elvin R. Heiberg, first vice president, and Mrs. William Holland Wilmer, chairman of Dumbarton House, received with the guest of honor. Other officers of the District society present were Mrs. Charles Willcox, third vice president; Miss Louise King, recording secretary, and Mrs. Wilson Lee, corresponding secretary. Miss Agnes Peter, of Washington, assistant treasurer of the national society, and Miss Aimee Powell, for many years custodian, also were among the guests.

Assisting at the tea table, which was set in the library as the dining room is never used for serving, were Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Peter, Mrs. Willcox, Mrs. Casanove Lee, Mrs. Edward Avery, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott and Mrs. N. Price Whitaker.

Among others attending were Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, editor of the National Historical Magazine of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Granville Valentine, of Richmond, of the Colonial Dames for the State of Virginia; Mrs. Dudley Morgan, Mrs. Louis Greene, Mrs. William Boothe, Mrs. Ethel Bagley, Mrs. William Channing Johnson, Mrs. Moncure Burke, Mrs. Charles Draton, Mrs. Henry Grant Meem, president of the Virginia Dames in the District; Mrs. Harry S. Robinson, Mrs. Wilfred Goodwin, Mrs. Arnold Willcox and Mrs. Horace VanDeventer.

Party Protests Proposal To Limit Jobs for Women

The National Woman's Party has dispatched to the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate an appeal on behalf of women, against an International Labor Organization proposal on "Regulation of Contracts of Indigenous Workers." The Woman's Party protested the I. L. O.'s effort to limit the right of groups of women to contract for their labor in any except domestic service.

"This is the first attempt ever made," says the party, "to eclude by world agreement large groups of women from practically all employment excepting domestic service."

Pen Women Hear Theaterlogue Program

Theaterlogue on China Given By Mrs. Morrill at Studio Tea

Program Adapted From Eunice Tietjens' Poems Presented at Meeting of League of American Pen Women

Mrs. Frank Gillingham Morrill, founder of the Civic Art Theater in Peoria, Ill., who is spending the winter in Washington, gave one of her famous theaterlogues at the Wednesday tea of the League of American Pen Women yesterday afternoon in their Grafton Hotel studio. Mme. Gustav Orlicz-Dreszer was guest of honor at the affair for which Mrs. Robert Horner, formerly of Illinois, was hostess, and many former Illinois residents were among the guests.

Mrs. Morrill's program was "Profiles of China," an adaptation of poems by Eunice Tietjens, built around the customs and people of China. Mrs. Morrill, who knew Miss Tietjens when the poet was associated with Harriet Monroe on the Poetry Magazine in Chicago, unified the poems, working them into a sequence portraying the Chinese home life, marriage customs and the quaint shops where they sold things for the spirit world.

She gave the program in Peoria the first time at a joint meeting of heads of the drama department of colleges and universities in Illinois, Iowa and Indiana and yesterday marked the forty-third time she had repeated it.

Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. Branch of the league assisted in receiving the guests. Presiding at the tea table were: Mrs. Dorothy DeMuth Watson and Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs.

Among the Illinois guests were Dr. Frederick Hamilton, president of Bradley College, in Peoria, where Mrs. Morrill is head of the drama department; Mrs. Walter Craven, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Murray Thornton, Mrs. Lester Helfrich and Mrs. Ward Rich, formerly of Illinois and now of Baltimore; Mrs. Scott Lucas, Mrs. Ralph Church, Col. and Mrs. Carter Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Colean, Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler Douglas, Dr. Robert Horner, Miss Anita Lutz, formerly of Peoria, who spent some years in China and is now living in New York, and Dr. and Mrs. Emil Hoganson.

Mrs. Leigh to Talk On Decorations

Mrs. Randolph Leigh, of Ranleigh, McLean, Va., will give a series of six informal talks on "The Principles of Interior Decoration" for the benefit of the District of Columbia branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The first of the series will be given at the home of Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, 3515 Lowell street, on Monday at 11 o'clock. The other lectures will be held on successive Mondays at various league members' homes.

Mrs. Leigh will cover every phase of interior decorating, including a brief outline of the history of architecture, the history of interior architecture and decorative wall treatments; fabrics, textiles, printed cottons, wall papers; the evolution of furniture, study of its uses and styles and interior decoration today.

Kitchen Studies

Many studies and experiments have been made to determine exactly the most satisfactory height for kitchen work surfaces. The best height has been found to range from 32 inches to 35 inches from the floor. Thirty-four inches is the suggested height for the average worker.

Break Rules, Arranger of Flowers Says

Constance Spry, English Authority, Speaks Before 700 At Society Lecture

With all available seats and standing room taken, Mrs. Constance Spry, English authority on flower arrangement, addressed more than 700 persons in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon. She spoke under the auspices of the local affairs committee of the American Horticultural Society and illustrated her talk with slides, showing both gardens and arrangements. Ben Y. Morrison, president of the society, introduced her.

Mrs. Spry, who has done much decorating for the British royal family including that for the wedding of Wallace Simpson and the Duke of Windsor, is not bound by rules. "If it helps to have hard and fast rules, hug your tatters close about you," she said. "I wouldn't deny anybody the pleasure of obeying regulations but I hope no one will deny me the pleasure of breaking them."

Rules Not Essential To Artistic Work

She indicated that a general background of knowledge of color and line found natural expression in artistic flower arrangement without benefit of rules. She gave two, however, which she said were useful but by no means indispensable. First, the familiar one, that flowers should be once and a half the height of the vase and, second that they should be used to accent the existing quality of the room and should be used in an arrangement in keeping with the character of the flower.

Illustrating the latter point, she said she had never been able to combine baby's breath with heavier flowers and consequently had used almost none of it until she found an arrangement which suited its character. She placed it in a large globe on a dark chest which stood before a Venetian mirror in a hall. This preserved the cloudy, misty effect of the flower, she explained. Peonies, she said, gave her the feeling of massiveness and she liked to arrange them in masses or put one or two with other flowers so their heavy character would be emphasized.

Use of flowers to hide an unsightly spot in a room is inadmissable, Mrs. Spry declared. Irrelevant vases also are "out" she said.

Among those who attended the lecture was Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, better known as "Aunt Bessie" of the Duchess of Windsor.

Local Committee Arranges Event

Mrs. Lloyd Shippen and Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson, chairman of the local affairs committee of the horticultural society, were in charge of general arrangements for the affair.

Mrs. Owen J. Roberts was a guest of Mrs. Francis B. Sayre at a luncheon at the Shoreham, preceeding the lecture, as were Mrs. Harold Marsh and Mrs. Howard Davidson, who attended with her. Lecturer Picks U. S. and Britain To Lead World

Fearn Finds Hitler Has Shown Value Of Democracy

It is the duty of the English speaking race to take the lead in world management, Leslie Watson Fearn, of London, told members of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women last night. The leadership must not be autocratic nor commercial, but based on principles rather than personal desires, he said.

Mr. Fearn, who is director of the Schola Vita, of London, a school designed to educate adults for co-operation, declared that only through such education could people make themselves into a democracy. The world may yet find it owes Hitler a debt of gratitude, he said, for focusing its attention on the value of democratic government.

Mr. Fearn was introduced by Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of the international relations section of the local A. A. U. W., which sponsored the dinner meeting he addressed.

A few among those present were Dr. Dorothy Sells, of Brookings Institution, and her guest, Miss H. K. Edwardson, of London; Miss Anna Youngman, of the editorial staff of The Post; Mr. and Mrs. Arch Mercey and Mrs. Robert L. Olesen, president of the club; Dr. Edith Allen, Miss Florence Currie, Miss Augusta Kriener, Mrs. Arthur Lamb, Mrs. Frank Pyle and Miss Verna Schult.

THE JUVENILE COURT COMMITTEE of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the federation headquarters, 1751 N street, in honor of Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, who has been chairmna for five years. It has been during her chairmanship that the alley program and summer camp vacations for the juvenile court children have been sponsored by the council.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, the president, and Mrs. R. A. Sauer, presided at the buffet table from which the luncheon was served, pouring tea and coffee.

Tributes to Mrs. Howerton were given by various officers of the council and she was presented with a scrapbook, containing newspaper articles and pictures, tracing the progress of the work of the committee under her chairmanship. There were 150 guests present.

THE SOROPTIMIST CLUB, at its regular luncheon at the Willard yesterday, voted to continue dressing Soroptimist dolls for injured children in the hospitals of the District; to continue sending children in need of care from the Children's Emergency Home to Children's Hospital; to supply a Braille edition of the Literary Digest to some institution in the District and to continue assembling books throughout the year for the installation of a new library in some institution of the District.

IDA HOYT CHAMBERLAIN, composer and Orientalist, will be guest speaker Saturday afternoon at the International Art Forum at Henderson Castle. Her subject will be "Magic Writing," the story of her experience in writing the temple ritual of Taoism, China's ancient religion, while in Peking, during five years of residence and travel in the Far East. The ancient ritual had not been recorded until Miss Chamberlain obtained permission to visit the temple over a six-month period for the purpose. She will play excerpts of the weird music on her collection of Chinese instruments.

THE PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATION of the Bethesda Elementary School yesterday decided to sponsor a summer playground at the school for the third year. The P.-T. A. will give $100 toward maintaining it and including swimming at Glen Echo for the children. The remainder of the money will be raised by contribution.

The school band played in its new uniforms and Miss Mary Cross, music supervisor, talked, advising the parents to give their children opportunity to develop any musical talent shown by their children.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 8.

Mister Joe Engel, one-time scout of the Washington club and now the prosperous owner of the Chattanooga franchise, visions a new field. Visioning new fields is an old habit of Mr. Engel's, incidentally. And there is nothing pastoral about the new fields which Engel visions.

POVICH

He wouldn't recognize a blade of grass if it jumped up and bit him.

Engel began to develop his vision as far back as 1910 when he was rushing the growler in his father's E street saloon in Washington. He saw himself as a big league pitcher and eventually became a big league pitcher, although at the same time he was one of the worst pitchers in the big leagues. He must have realized it, too, because he began to vision himself as something besides a ball player and registered as a student at the Georgetown Law School.

He was probably convinced that he was no big league pitcher when Clark Griffith sent him back to the minors—to the Minneapolis club. In payment for Engel, the Washington team was to receive its choice of one player of the Minneapolis team at the end of the season. At the end of the season, with Griffith not yet having made his choice, wrote Engel asking him to recommend the best prospect on the Minneapolis team.

Engel Recommends Joe Engel

Engel visioned this a new chance to get back in the big leagues and recommended himself as the best major league prospect at Minneapolis, but Clark Griffith would have none of that. So Engel wrote Griffith that Minneapolis had a whale of a catcher, a fellow who couldn't miss in the big leagues. He went into raptures about the catcher and on the strength of his recommendation, Griffith took Pat Gharrity from Minneapolis.

Gharrity's immediate success in the big leagues conjured for Engel a new vision. He visioned himself as a big league scout if not a big league ball player. And he ended up as a scout for the Nats. As a scout for the Nats he apparently found his natural field, for who should he dig up for the Washington club but Bucky Harris, Ossie Bluege, Fred Marberry, Sam Rice, Cecil Travis, Cliff Bolton and Buddy Lewis. He was tops among big league scouts.

But a few years ago Engel began to fancy himself as somebody more important than a big league scout. He began to envision himself as a club owner. He didn't know where the money was coming from, but he made an offer for the Nats' Chattanooga club. The offer was accepted and Engel began to set about to get the money. He whipped up terrific interest in local ownership among Chattanooga citizens and personally sold stock on Chattanooga street corners and put across the deal. He owned a house in Chattanooga and when the Tennessee Valley Administration developed a need for it, Engel sold his home for enough to buy a controlling interest in Chattanooga.

Chattanooga finished in the second division under Engel's ownership last year, but at the end of the season Chattanooga showed more profit than any club in the Southern Association. That was because Mr. Engel, with his rare salesmanship, had sold $75,000 worth of ball players to the big leagues; notably Freddie Sington, for whom the Brooklyn Dodgers paid $15,000; Dee Miles for whom Connie Mack gave $25,000, and Joe Honeycutt, whom Bill Terry bought for $15,000.

Discovered Arch McDonald

"But I'm missing a bet," Engel was saying today. "I should stop trifling with ball clubs and go in seriously for developing radio announcers. That's where the money is. Look at Arch McDonald. By right, I should get part of the purchase price those New York people paid for him."

How come?

"Say, I'm the guy who discovered this McDonald. I took him from behind a counter in a grocery store and hired him to announce the batteries at the Chattanooga park through a megaphone. I saw the talent in him right away. Bought some time on the radio and told him I wanted him to do a daily program.

"We bought the radio time together—the Chattanooga club and a headache powder company. That Arch had never been on the air before in his life. Used to come into my office at the park each morning and practice for his radio speeches. He'd grab a loving cup they presented me for setting a new attendance record in the Southern Association, and make believe it was a microphone and start his spiel. No, it wasn't a loving cup, either. I remember now. It was a brass cuspidor they presented me as a joke when I didn't set the attendance record.

"Anyway, that McDonald would sit in my office for hours and practice his radio speeches. We needed a headache powder by the time he was through. But from the first time he went on the air, we knew he had it. That Arkansas hillbilly background of his was great stuff. The fans went for it.

Sent Arch to Washington

"I sent him up to Washington in 1934. Knew he would go well up there. I gave him the "Old Pine Tree" theme song to take with him. And he put it across in Washington like nobody else could. He was sure-fire to be sure-fire. No wonder New York grabbed him for the Yankee-Giant broadcasts.

"He'll go well in New York, too. They'll like Arch's folksy stuff up there. Don't tell me they won't go for it. New York's the biggest bush-league town in the country. It's Peoria, except for the few hundred people they call cafe society. Arch will be sure-fire in New York. He'll make 'em love him. And don't forget, it was smart people who hired him up there. Who was the biggest attraction on the New York stage? Will Rogers, with his folksy stuff, that's who. And that's what Arch has.

"But Joe Engel's getting smart new about this radio business. I've got another fellow down there in Chattanooga I'm developing. Name's Tom Noble, and he's Arch McDonald in everything but size. I'm gonna send Noble up to the big leagues of baseball announcing in a year or two, and cash in on him. He can't miss—take it from the guy who discovered Arch McDonald."

On the Line With Considine

New York, March 8.—Table tennis (now wait a minute, this isn't as bad as you think) reaches a titanic peak of trivia tomorrow night at the fly-blown Hippodrome when the leading figures in this swishy business bare fangs at one another in what they call annual East-West matches.

CONSIDINE

They used to call it ping-pong when I was a simple child, but in the past five years table tennis bugs have banded together—perhaps for protection—created an association that now even has a house organ, drafted a constitution, and had a nasty scandal or two.

Out of it all has come a covey of players who, in their screwy business, are known around the world. A crop of them will be at the Hipp, including the national champion, a New Yorker named Sol Schiff; Jimmy McClure, a thinnish Indianapolis kid who has been world's double champion for three years, and one George Hendry, of St. Louis, the No. 2 guy in this country. The big shot of the business is a Czecho-Slovakian, or maybe he's a German by this time, named Bohumil Vana. The game's biggest money earner seems to be a New York girl named Ruth Aarons, who has played vaudeville and the swankier night saloons here and in London. She made about as much last year as a so-so big league ball player.

Amateurs, Pros All Alike

As in polo, there is no line of demarcation between amateur and pro in table tennis. The boys will split up the kitty tonight, after sending some precentage to the association. The only out-and-out amateurs connected with the association are—interestingly enough—the officials. It's some kind of law. A Mr. Morris B. Bassford, of Washington, D. C., is the president. Some of the vice presidents are Octavor Roy Cohn, the author; W. J. Buettner, treasurer of the Bendix Aviation Corporation; Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Big Ten; United States Senator Rush D. Holt, H. Earl Hoover, president of the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Co.; Sidney Lenz, the bridge expert, and Lynn Waldor, coach of Northwestern.

A little under 35,000,000 table tennis swatters were sold last year. Mrs. Roosevelt took up the game during the year. The Boeing Co. bought a table for the Yankee Clipper, and a match in London drew 15,000 paid admissions and the best players, for some reason, come from Hungary. Hank Greenberg and Jascha Heifitz and Joe Louis play the game. So does Sistie Dall. The best player in Hollywood is Wendie Barrie. About 34,984,210 of the 35,000,000 players are conscience stricken over their failing. They have a defensive air about their vice, affect a great heartiness about it, hurl belligerent challenges, and profess rare perfection, with a chuckle that says, "it may be ccentric, but not the way I play it." The lady athlete is at her utmost clumsiest—which is saying a lot—when she plays the game.

An Honor—to Say the Least

If Abner Doubleday is the father of baseball, then the father of table tennis is the guy who invented the oil burner. Oil burners cleared out the coal bins, story pipes and the confusion of millinos of American cellars, and provided room for the table on which this bobbling art may be practiced. Grandmaw recognized the game as something they played when she was a girl, after they had seen Victoria Falls through the stereopticon goggles. Self-respecting members of the family disdained it for a while, but gradually the thing became general in its appeal. It hasn't broken up as many homes as bridge, but give it time.

There is only a mild relationship between the table tennis that the garden-variety of American plays and the table tennis such as the top-

Snead, Guldahl Win 4-Ball Golf Crown

Smith, Runyan Beaten By 7 and 6; Winners Collect $1,000 Each

By the United Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., March 8.—Sam Snead and Ralph Guldahl, blazing home with a record-smashing blast, today won the international four-ball championship, one of golfs, severest tournament tests, and the $2,000 top prize.

Snead and Guldahl fired a steady barrage of unbeatable golf in the afternoon, after trailing most of the morning round, to trounce Horton Smith and Paul Runyan, 7 and 6. The winners received $1,000 each. It boosted Snead to fourth place in the list of money-winners for this year with a total of $3,140. Smith and Runyan split $1,000.

Smith, the former "Joplin Ghost," and Runyan, Professional Golfers' Association champion, set the pace on the morning 18, but they were overwhelmed by the golf Snead and Guldahl played in the afternoon. The latter team put together a record 28, seven under par, on the first nine of the afternoon round.

With Runyan carrying the load, he and Smith led most of the way in the morning. At one time they were 2 up, but Snead and Gudahl always managed to square the match. The two teams went to lunch all even, after Snead sank a 25-footer for an eagle 3 on the eighteenth.

Snead and Guldahl wasted little time unloosing the fireworks in the afternoon.

Slamin' Sam, who won the big money in the tournament swing last year, put his second shot 5 feet from the pin at the nineteenth and holed out for an eagle 3 to put his team 1 up. He and Guldahl took the next three holes, with Guldahl dropping a 40-foot putt on the twentieth and a 20-footer on the twenty-second for birdies.

Snead chipped within 4 feet of the pin and cupped a putt for a birdie on the twenty-fourth, putting his side 5 up. The twenty-fifth was

'Biscuit, 2d High Money Winner, Retired to Stud

By the United Press.

Arcadia, Calif., March 8.—Seabiscuit, 1938 champion and second highest money-winning horse of all time, will be retired to stud immediately and rested for at least a year before resuming pursuit of Sun Beau's earnings total at which he has been pointed for three seasons.

The decision was announced today by Tom Smith, trainer of the C. S. Howard Stable.

Down In Front

With Richard Vidmer

Miami Beach, Fla., March 8.—All of the great golfers of the land had been eliminated from the international four-ball championship this morning except Ralph Guldahl, Sam Snead, Paul Runyon and Horton Smith, who met in pairs in the final. But none of these who had dropped by the wayside in the first, second or third rounds could be called exactly idle.

Will Harridge Inspects Nat Rookies

League Prexy Amused By Harris' Gestures To Foreign Pitchers

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—Intrigued by reports of Spanish-speaking pitching sensations in the Nats' camp League President Will Harridge rolled into Orlando behind his chauffeur this afternoon and the Nats' bosses paraded their foreign talent for him.

Out of turn Manager Bucky Harris worked Roberto Ortiz, the giant Cuban, and Alex Alexandra, the vast Venezuelan, and Harridge was an intensely interested spectator as the pair of importations unfurled their fast balls.

"My curiosity about these fellows got the better of me," explained Harridge, "and that's why I drove over from Seabring today. If there are any new sensations in the American League it is the league president's business to see them. If they can pitch nearly as well as reports from Orlando say they can pitch, they'll be gate attractions."

Harridge Amused

Harridge was amused no little when he saw Bucky Harris, with his meager Spanish augmented by gestures, convey to Ortiz and Alexandra how they should pitch. "He'll either make pitchers out of them or a linguist out of himself," predicted Harridge.

The league president saw or heard nothing to contradict reports that Ortiz and Alexandra can throw hard and actually make the ball sing as it plunks into a catcher's mitt. He saw Ortiz rear back when the Cuban was given the word by Harris and

Last-Minute Goal Wins For Orioles

Gain 4-3 Victory Over Rovers; Doug Greig's Shot Decides

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Ushered in on the singing skates of two well coached and power-driving teams, organized ice hockey made its Washington debut last night at Riverside Stadium where the Baltimore Orioles nosed out the New York Rovers, 4-3, in the last two minutes of a thrill-drenched game.

Eighteen and a half minutes of the final 20-minute period had elapsed when Doug Greig, Baltimore wing, took a quick accurate pass from Norman Calladine, wiggled it into position with his stick, then poled it into the net for the winning marker as the audience, pro-Baltimore in sentiment, vociferously roared its approval.

Greig's lone score of the evening clinched The Washington Post trophy for his mates, and gave them the upper hand in the two-match argument for the Mayor Howard W. Jackson trophy. Chris Heurich, jr., prominent Washington sportsman, presented The Post trophy to Coach Bill Hines, of the victorious team, immediately after the match.

A turnaway audience of 7,500 fans saw the match and saw Calladine, already headed for a major league berth next season, give a brilliant exhibition of scoring power with three goals, one unassisted. It also saw Omar Kelly, stout-hearted Oriole goalie and a recent addition to the team, play a superb defensive game at the cage, cutting off potential Rover scores with his skates, stick, arms and even by flopping on the elusive puck as frenzied players bandied it back and forth on the crease.

Kelly, turning in 40 saves during the evening, many of them sensational, won repeated rounds of applause by his sterling work.

Rovers Score First

Al Collings, Rover left wing, broke the scoring ice after 4:32 of the first period, neatly sending the puck past Kelly's alert guard after taking a pass from Walter Rimstad. Skating as easily and as gracefully as the Riverside exhibition artists, Mary Hamm and Bill Mickey, who performed between periods, the Rovers seemed at this early stage of the battle to be a trifle too strong for the Orioles. But that impression was misleading.

Calladine finally came through with his first point of the evening, banging the disc into the netting after 16:33 minutes of the period, assisted by Greig, who grabbed the

George Washington Tops Hoyas, 36-26, After Overcoming 19-12 Deficit; Garber, Faris Star for G. W.; Pajak Paces G. U.

By Jack Munhall.

Wavering precariously on the brink of a humiliating rout in the first half as they were completely outplayed and at times even outclassed by an aroused Georgetown five, George Washington's hard-riding Colonials swept back with an unstoppable belated attack last night to turn back the Hoyas, 36-26, in their first athletic engagement since 1923.

While 4,000 wildly yelling fans, the largest gathering ever to see a basketball game at Tech gym, at first sat amazed and then rose to their feet for a close-up of the most relentless counter-attack seen here all season, the Colonials stormed to a cnvincing victory and the appending unofficial city title.

Behind 19-12 when it disconsolately slouched from the floor at intermission, George Washington with a fury born of despair and unquenchable pride, literally ran the game Hoyas into the ground in that second half, outscored them, 24-7, and left no reasonable doubt of its claim to the ranking of the District's outstanding team.

Take Easy Lead

But there were grave doubts as late as the middle of the last half that George Washington would justify its role of a slight pre-game favorite in most quarters. For Georgetown in a sharp reversal of its dismal form against Pittsburgh Saturday night took complete command of the game after 3 minutes of scoreless play and apparently was primed for an easy conquest of its bitter rivals.

Even though it was minus its regular center, Johnny McGowan and regular forward, Ed Kurtyka, who was revealed to be ill just before game time, the fast, smooth-passing Georgetown band hopped into 8-2 advantage after 5 minutes of play and never relinquished that lead until 10 minutes of the second half had elapsed.

Colonials Open Up

It was just as the clock reached the half-way mark in its trip to the zero 20-minute mark that the Colonials opened up with their furious burst, tied the count for the first time at 23 to 23, faltered temporarily to allow Georgetown to forge ahead, 24 to 23, and then revived quickly to regain that precious lead and nurse it until the final whistle.

When George Pajak, the sensational sophomore who replaced Kurtyka in the Georgetown line-up and surprisingly sparked his team's fast early pace, droped in the Hoyas' twenty-fourth point, he apparently sealed their death warrant.

For, as if suddenly conscious of the shortness of time and its uncertainty of victory in its most important game of the year, George Washington stepped up its tempo to an unbelievable pitch and tossed in points with the accuracy and force of a fire hose.

Capt. Bob Faris, George Garber and Reds Auerbach, the Colonials' trio of sharpshooters who could scarcely buy a point in the first half, began to drop in those irritating and unguardable one-handed shots released on split-second timing after a feint at the G. U. defenders.

G. U. Tires

Taking advantage of the Georgetown players who were plainly displaying signs of fatigue after their blistering first-half pace, Garber dribbled the length of the court to count on an over-the-shoulder shot while on the dead run. That made it G. W. 26, G. U. 24.

Seconds later Faris repeated the stunt and the handwriting was on the wall for the gallant Hoyas. They were dead tired, a stumbling, ineffective and beaten team.

But win they couldn't as George Washington, playing even more fiercely at Georgetown's relapse, poured through a barrage of baskets which was carrying it steadily to the van.

A. A. U. Boxer Suffers Brain Concussion

James Lofflin, CCC Fighter, Unconscious After Losing Bout

Loser of a bout in the 118-pound class of the annual District A. A. U. tournament last night at Turner's Arena, James Loffin, 20-year-old Fort Belvoir C. C. C. boy, is in Emergency Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and in an undetermined condition.

Young Loffin, a Washington youth who drew on his first pair of boxing gloves at the Northeast Boys Club, collapsed in the dressing room after a bruising bout with Willie Tapp, city amateur bantamweight champion, and was ordered removed to the hospital immediately.

Loffin was no match for his more experienced opponent, although he made a game fight and refused to quit in the face of overwhelming odds. A superior officer from Fort Belvoir, who refused to reveal his identity, accompanied him to the Arena and was in the boy's corner during the progress of the bout. Although Loffin was badly outclassed he did not appear to be in unusual distress, and officials saw no reason for stopping the bout, inasmuch as the boy was trying desperately to turn the tide of battle with a knockout punch.

He shook hands with Tapp after the decision was announced, appearing downcast at losing, and left the ring apparently in good condition. In the dressing room he removed his fighting togs and took a showerbath without any noticeable ill affect. Almost immediately after he tumbled to the floor, unconscious, and an ambulance was promptly summoned to remove him to the hospital.

Billy Kekeris, outstanding favorite to win the welterweight crown, advanced to the semi-finals by putting away Bob Hockenberry after 1 minute and 50 seconds of the first round. The National Guard southpaw put his man on the floor twice

Georgetown Rooters Hilarious as Team Leads Colonials

Pitt Paper Blasts Administration for Coaching Setup

Pittsburgh, March 8 (AP).—The Pitt News, campus newspaper of the University of Pittsburgh, in an editorial today blamed the resignation of Head Football Coach John Bain Sutherland on "blundering and short-sighted administration" of university affairs.

The newspaper appeared on the campus amid rumors that a student strike of at least one day would be attempted as a protest against the resignation of Sutherland, who for 15 years coached Pitt's Golden Panthers. A few students went to classes this morning with armbands reading "Jock."

"The resignation of Dr. Sutherland," said the News editorial, "is not a question of subsidizing, or of high-pressure football. It is not a matter of personal clash between Dr. Sutherland and Chancellor (John G.) Bowman. Nor is it even a question of football.

"It is a case of a short-sighted administration . . . administration which has not been confined to matters of athletic policy.

Walter Smith Elected Va. U. Cage Captain

Charlottesville, Va., March 8 (AP).—Walter C. Smith, of Belleville, N. J., was elected captain of the 1940 University of Virginia basketball team today. He has held down a guard position on the Cavalier cage combine the past two seasons.

Donna Leona Wins Tropical Feature; Panjab Pays $190.30

Little Filly Triumphs by Half-Length

Ashcroft Rides Triple; Panjab's Price Near Record for Season

Tropical Park, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Donna Leona, reputed to be the tiniest horse to race in Florida this winter, turned in another game performance and won the Hollywood purse for the Snow White stable here this afternoon. The chestnut daughter of Don Leon, a very nicely proportioned little trick despite her smallness, held on to score by a half length. It was her fourth triumph in six outings this year. Apprentice Ronnie Nash was in the saddle to record a consecutive double.

Pressing the winner at the end of the 5½-furlong test restricted to fillies and mares was Floragina, which reversed her usual order of running and came from behind. She was beaten a half length. Ghost Queen missed the place by another half length. U-Boat and Buttermilk completed the field.

Donna Leona, returning $6.60 for $2, reported back in 1:06 flat.

U-Boat showed the way by a narrow margin with Donna Leona and Buttermilk alongside, battling it out. The leader ran very wide turning for home and gave up her position to Donna Leona, which lost some ground herself. Floragina, unable to show her usual early foot out of No. 1 post position, saved a lot of ground entering the stretch and gained steadily after straightening out, but the tenacious Donna Leona held on in the drive. Ghost Queen beat two tired horses for the show.

Panjab, a black son of Kiev—Seven Pines, made his first start in the 4-furlong event for 2-year-old maiden platers and electrified the crowd by winning at odds of $190.30 for $2, only a few dollars short of the longest straight price paid in Florida this season.

Apprentice Jimmy Ashcroft rounded out a triple when he guided the 10-year-old Espinaca, $5.10, to a five-length score in the closing event. John Doe was second and Chatterfol third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUNTING RIDGE, $6.60, $3.60, $3.00; FRANCO SAXON, $8.50, $5.40; FAIR, $3.30.

HUNTING RIDGE, prominent on the outside in the early stages, moved up with determination when straightened into the stretch and disposed of FAIR, but was hard ridden to withstand FRANCO SAXON'S bid. The latter, slow to get going, worked his way up gradually on the outside in the last three furlongs and was wearing the winner down at the finish. FAIR, away forwardly, forced a steady pace and raced HAPPY HOSTESS into defeat, but faltered in the stretch run. MR. BUDDY, under extreme pressure all the way, could never reach the leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:34½. Winner, W. W. Adams' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN FATE, $32.10, $11.30, $6.40; SPITTENIMAGE, $5.40, $3.60; DINNER JACKET, $4.30.

GOLDEN FATE, hustled into contention in the opening furlong and, going well up all the way, closed gamely when the real test came and wore SPITTENIMAGE down in the last strides. SPITTENIMAGE forced a steady pace from the start, raced KNOWING into submission, made a game effort when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. DINNER JACKET bettered his position gradually while circling the field and wore KNOWING down in the final drive. KNOWING, quickest to begin, went in close attendance of the pace to the furlong pole, but then weakened.

Daily Double, Hunting Ridge and Golden Fate, Paid $166.90.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:01. Off 3:09. Winner, A. E. Webber's blk. g. (2), by Kiev—Seven Pines. Trained by W. Donnelly. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:49 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PANJAB, $190.30, $79.70, $28.40; BALLYHASTE, $4.20, $3.30; GAUDY, $5.70.

PANJAB, away forwardly and a keen contender on the outside, responded gamely in the final drive and outlasted BALLYHASTE in the latter, carried out by GOLDEN CARGO rounding the turn, closed in game fashion when clear and was wearing the winner down at the finish. GAUDY found her stride quickly, took a short lead rounding the turn, but faltered in the stretch run. GOLDEN CARGO broke alertly and showed speed, but bore out in the opening quarter mile.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:38½. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's ch. g. (3), by Time Maker—Lady Rockingham. Trained by Jack Howard. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:06 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCK MAKER, $5.10, $2.80, $2.50; SASSY LADY, $4.80, $3.80; PIT TERRIER, $5.60.

ROCK MAKER began fast, displayed keen speed while racing well out from the inner rail and drew away rapidly when flicked with the whip, but had nothing to spare at the finish. SASSY LADY, vigorously urged, forced a fast pace in the early stages and came out entering the stretch, but faltered in the last furlong. PIT TERRIER, under extreme pressure the entire journey, was unable to reach the leaders, yet held AMERICAN DAISY safe. The latter, racing on the outside all the way, continued gamely in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:04. Off 4:04½. Winner, Snow White Stable's ch. f. (4), by Don Leon—Myrtle Belle. Trained by J. G. Wagnon. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30a Time, 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:06.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONNA LEONA, $6.60, $2.80, $2.30; FLORAGINA, $2.90, $2.60; GHOST QUEEN, $3.00.

DONNA LEONA, in the thick of contention on the inside from the start, disposed of U BOAT entering the stretch and held FLORAGINA in the final drive. FLORAGINA, unable to secure clear passage the first half mile on the inside, cut the corner entering the stretch and made a courageous effort, but could not overhaul the winner. GHOST QUEEN, favored at a pace, finished gamely to punishment and outlasted U BOAT. The latter began fast and showed the most speed, but bore out badly entering the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:32½. Winner, Miss E. J. Granfield's ch. b. g. (5), by Sun Beau—Dark Victory. Trained by M. Simmons. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:40 4-5, 1:44 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK BEAU, $15.80, $5.50, $4.20; TERPSICHORE, $3.10, $2.60; ODDESA FRANK, $7.60.

DARK BEAU, under light restraint while going forwardly in the early stages, raced TERPSICHORE into defeat rounding the lower turn and drew out under strong pressure in the final sixteenth mile. TERPSICHORE, hustled to the front in the opening furlong, set a steady pace while racing well out from the inside and made a game effort when challenged, but was no match for DARK BEAU, the winner. ODDESA FRANK, kept forcefully while saving ground early, faltered through the stretch, yet outlasted HIJO GAUCHO. The latter, slow to get going, closed a good gap while saving ground in the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:59. Off 5:01½. Winner, A. G. Tarry's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VELOCITER, $8.30, $4.00, $3.40; ALPENGLOW, $6.70, $4.50; CHANCING, $8.10.

VELOCITER, away fast, was eased off the pace and followed the leaders under restraint until midway around the lower turn, where he moved up fast when placed to pressure, disposed of the leaders and gradually increased his lead to the end, winning in hand. ALPENGLOW, well up all the way, bettered her position while going around the turn and shook off CHANCING in the final furlong to place. CHANCING, in the early front, held his opposition safe for early speed, but faltered in the stretch drive. WULFSTAN, going in nearest pursuit of the leader for six furlongs, retired as if short. REBUTTAL bore out rounding the first turn and moved up on the inside down the backstretch, but retired in the last quarter mile.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:31. Off 5:32. Winner, I. Rodriguez' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINACA, $5.10, $3.50, $2.80; JOHN DOE, $25.90, $9.00; CHATTERFOL, $4.70.

ESPINACA, in tight quarters and forced back going to the first turn, gradually bettered his position on the outside after entering the backstretch, disposed of JOHN DOE approaching the quarter-mile pole, and held away the remainder of the trip. JOHN DOE, under intermittent punishment after the start, assumed command in the first half mile and continued stubbornly to outlast CHATTERFOL in the final drive. CHATTERFOL saved ground the entire trip and finished stoutly. PRINCE POMPEY was under extreme pressure all the way.

Dear Al: I believe some of the turf scribblers have gone overboard on the prediction that Kayak II will be another Seabiscuit. Granting that the South American horse did run a sensational race in winning the $100,000-added Santa Anita Handicap last Saturday, I don't believe he will get much better as the season wears on. There is one angle to the Kayak II victory that has been wholly overlooked. Few race fans know anything about the "scale of weights" which governs most handicapping. When horses of various ages meet in a handicap or allowance race, they are weighted according to the scale, or the scale is used as a pivot. For instance, 3-year-olds carry 102 pounds in January when going a mile and a quarter. The weight increases as the months go by. Thus, a 3-year-old going a mile and a quarter in October and November must carry 120 pounds. This is because a horse develops quickest during his third year. A 4-year-old gives him 22 pounds in January and only 6 pounds the following October. This all may read a bit complicated, but I'm going ahead. Now, Kayak II was foaled in the Argentine, where spring is our fall. The colt was dropped in late August, thus he is some six months younger than horses foaled here in February or March, although, due to the universal horse birthday on January 1, he is the same technical age. When Kayak II was racing in Maryland last fall he was carrying high weight, due to the scale for fall. In actual age, he was a very young 3-year-old. It was on these performances that he probably received the light assignment of 110 pounds for the Santa Anita Handicap. The weights were announced in December, which means that Kayak II had almost three months in which to mature, the same three months that make so much difference in the "weight forage" scale. He made the natural improvement that horses are expected to make during this stage of their lives. Thus he was right at home in the field with the 110-pound assignment. Anyway, this is an angle. BILL.

First race—Mexico City seems nicely placed in the day's opener. Gets in action here with 106 pounds and Snider to do the riding. I'm going to string along with this pair. Emir has shown speed on occasions and should be close. Toby Tyler off best races could take it all.

Second race—Oklab has been knocking at the door and probably will have Don Meade in the saddle. Gets only a steadying impost and appears to have a fair chance of taking down the chief event. Wakita failed at the other course, but is reported fit. Polly Fair should get part of the money.

Third race—Blue Covert scored two victories over at Hialeah and will be in there knocking. I see no reason for mistakes. Darby Dallas has plenty of speed. Bracing for the show end.

Fourth race—Little Harpist may come through with that long-awaited set of brackets in this field. Joe Renick will be booting this one and I'm going to take my chances. Holiday Tea and Bright Spot seem to have something on the others.

Fifth race—Mythical King, tossed in this with 104 pounds, should do a lot of running. Likes this track and Nash should get him to the pay-off line in front. Go Home is fit and ready. Dnieper is a possible surprise.

Sixth race—Woodsia, with Meade up, gets my call in this sprint. This one is rather inconsistent but appears set for a crack down in this company. Cruising is speedy and deserves attention. First entry may take care of the others.

Seventh race—Goana gets another chance in a field of maidens. This one has shown speed and should go well for Jockey Wayne Wright. J. Ware and Americup are fair maidens and could be in the thick of contention.

Eighth race—Inactive has beaten as good as these. It is reported that this will be another mount for Meade and I look for victory. Ritz Brothers and Icy Wind to take care of the place and show.

Best Bet—Mythical King.

Police Boys Club Unlimiteds Win Tourney Feature

R.R.B. Five Loses, 45-20, In Overtime

Army Medicos Down Hoya Intermurals; Columbians Victor

Police Boys Club and Army Medicos appeared as worthy challengers for the unlimited title in The Washington Post-A. A. U. tournament last night in Eastern High gymnasium with flashy victories, the former by the overtime route. The Boys Club five went an extra period to defeat Railroad Retirement Board, 40-35, while the Medicos defeated Georgetown Inter-murals, 43-34, with a last period attack.

Columbia Beverage starting a title defense in the 145-pound class, had trouble in the opening periods and then went on to win 30-18 over Prince George Police Boys Club No. 2. The 120-pound contest was merely an exhibition as three of the seven Police Boys Club squad members turned up overweight and the Greenbelt Shamrocks won on a forfeit.

Over 1,000 fans witnessed the second night's program of the 106-team tourney, while action will continue tomorrow and the first week's play will end with 12 tilts on Saturday.

The golf playing spectators recognized Intercollegiate champion Johnny Burke in the high-scoring role of the three games, leading the attack of the Georgetown Intermurals with 14 points.

Army Medicos Defeat Hoyas

A scrappy band of courtmen representing Georgeown University's intermural league and numbering golfers, gridders and diamonders, lost to Army Medico's unlimited contenders, 43-34.

Johnny Burke, National Intercollegiate golf champion, proved the ace of the Hoya's attack, scoring six field goals and two fouls for 14 points. Burke, a former member of the varsity squad, also played a good floor game, but the Hoyas were visibly tired in the second half and lost by the 9-point margin.

The first half was close all the way, not more than two points separating the teams, with the Medicos leading, 14-12, at halftime. But with "Ace" Burns sinking five sensational field goals and Frank Elliott connecting for 8 points, the Army five gradually drew ahead to win going away. Burns' 10 points led the winners.

Police Boys Club Wins in Overtime

The first overtime decision of the record tournament went to the Police Boys Club unlimited courtmen, who finally defeated Railroad Retirement Board, 40 to 35, after four nip-and-tuck quarters and a free-scoring overtime period.

The R. R. B. five held a 14-10 margin at halftime, but it was the biggest gap between the teams until the final minute of play. The score was tied no less than ten times in the seesaw encounter, and Chasen dropped one from midcourt with five seconds to play to knot the count at 32-all.

Russo scored from the floor and charity stripe early in the extra period and Dannehl and Sheels followed the game-clinching baskets. The winners lost a chance to triumph in regulation time by missing 12 foul shots. Walters and Russo, of the Boys Club five and Habermeyer, of the losers, tied for scoring honors with 9 points apiece.

Columbia Beverage Five Wins Handily

The Columbia Beverage five, defending champion in the 145-pound class, finally solved the zone defense of Prince Georges Police Boys Club, No. 2, and went on to win, 30 to 18.

The defense of the Marylanders baffled the Columbia courtmen, the latter leading only 10-9 at half time and the county five tied it at 10-all soon after the second half was under way. Weigel, F. Schaefer and J. Hunter found their scoring eye at this point and the champions went on to win by a 12-point margin.

Henry Weigel, former Tech ace, led the Beverage five, which has been organized for 13 years and retains some of the original players. Weigel scored 8 points, 2 less than the individual star of the losers, Frederich.

Greenbelt Shamrocks Win on Forfeit

Greenbelt Shamrocks, 120-pound class contenders, won their first battle without hitting the court as Police Boys Club cagers showed up with three overweight players and were forced to forfeit.

The teams played an exhibition and the Boys Club, using two of the ineligible men, defeated the Greenbelt five, 16 to 10. But it didn't go into the books.

Undefeated Rockville Girls In A. A. U. Debut Tomorrow

Oppose REA at Eastern High Gym; Greenbelt Plays McLean on Card

Undefeated for two years and winners of the District A. A. U. championship last year, the Rockville girls will risk their title and their record tomorrow night when they clash with the Rural Electrification Administration girls at the Eastern High gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

The game is one of four on The Post tournament program and should provide plenty of action for local court fans. In addition, the crack Delaware & Hudson five will make its first tourney appearance, meeting the Georgetown Boys Club in an unlimited class battle; the McLean A. C. faces the Greenbelt A. C. in an all-suburban clash, and Boys Clubs of Central Branch and Powell Community Center play in the opening 135-pound game.

The REA girls believe there should be a law against playing Rockville in the tournament. Last year REA drew Rockville and was forced to go down fighting before the ultimate champions. This year REA hoped to get a warm-up opponent game before meeting the Montgomery County lassies, but again they drew Rockville.

However, REA knows that Rockville must be beaten before another team wins the championship and will be out to give the suburban girls a battle they will long remember.

The Greenbelt community is pepped up about the appearance of the Greenbelt A. C. A large group of rooters will accompany the club, but they will have to do a lot of urging for McLean will not lack backers or a good basketball front.

D and H. will enter its game with the Georgetown Boys as a heavy favorite. However, the "Boys from Across the Creek" say they have a few surprises for the formidable Heurich Amateur League team.

The biggest day of basketball in tournament history is scheduled for Saturday. In the afternoon, eight games in the 90 and 105 pound classes will be played. The two courts at Eastern will be used with games starting at 1 o'clock. Saturday night the usual four games will be played. This program features a clash of the Jewish Community Center and the Y. M. C. A. Blues in the unlimited class. On the same card, the Agriculture and Highlander girls meet.

D. C. Quintets Await Tourney At Lexington

St. John's, Gonzaga Arrive Early; Play Begins This Afternoon

A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington, Va., March 8.—Two of the four schoolboy basketball delegations which will represent the District of Columbia area in the annual Washington and Lee University South Atlantic scholastic championships, arrived tonight in this little collegiate village perched over the North River.

St. John's, on its third quest for the title that has evaded it in the past, led the auto caravan over the mountains, while close in its wake followed Gonzaga, the purple horde which has furnished St. John's its hottest rivalry this season.

George Washington High, of Alexandria, Va., brought its crew into town late tonight, and tomorrow, probably just in time to play its first game, Devit Prep's five will arrive.

If there was any way to dampen the high spirits of the Johnnies and Gonzagans as they made their leisurely tour of the Virginia countryside, a stop at Staunton Military Academy did it. The fourth meeting of the teams this season took place there in a practice scrimmage and in the space of ten minutes of furious work, the Johnnies won their third victory, 8-5.

Gonzaga players were much the worst in the "nerves" department, mainly because it is their first tournament start outside of Washington. Because all the players return next year, Coach Orrel Mitchell decided the experience would do his lads worlds of good, thus the acceptance of the W. and L. bid. The schedule:

1:30 p. m.—Fork Union Military Academy vs. George Washington High School of Alexandria, Va.

2:30 p. m.—St. John's High of Washington vs. Hargrave Military School of Chatham, Va.

3:30 p. m.—Richmond Academy of Augusta, Ga., vs. Gonzaga High School of Washington.

7 p. m.—Spartanburg (S. C.) High vs. Danville (Va.) Military Institute.

RUNYON

While reclining on a bed of pain the past week, we have been reading a lot of those publications known to the movie trade as fan magazines. They are devoted exclusively to the movies and to the people thereof, and are uniformly well printed, neatly illustrated and very interesting.

Our reading of these magazines has disclosed to us that we have been misinformed and misled to a positively startling degree about life among the inmates of Hollywood, the seat of the picture industry, also about the characteristics of those inmates.

We may say that we are in a state of indignation bordering on downright displeasure toward certain persons more or less responsible for giving us a picture of Hollywood, and the inmates thereof, so greatly at variance with the facts as set forth in the fan magazines.

Indeed, our attending hysician, removing the thermometer from our mouth at the height of our indignation, took one glance at the tube and said unless someone had

Helen Dettweiler Upsets Jean Bauer

Dorothy Kirby Beats Marion Miley, 4 & 3; Patty Berg Advances

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Belleair, Fla., March 8.—Helen Dettweiler, Maryland State champion from the Congressional Club, near Washington, scored a decisive upset triumph over Jean Bauer, one of the top-ranking women stars of the country, here today in the quarter-finals of the annual Belleair Invitation event.

Miss Dettweiler, here handling the publicity for a local hotel, was out in 36 even men's par, and needed par for a 75 but scored a 4 and 3 to triumph over her fast friend, and qualified as an opponent of Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare in tomorrow's semifinals.

One-Sided Victory

Mrs. Vare, six-times National champion, scored a one-sided 6-and-5 victory over Betty Myers to avenge a recent defeat, while in other matches Dorothy Kirby upset Marion Miley, 4 and 3, and Patty Berg advanced by default as Laddie Irwin was unable to play due to illness.

Miss Dettweiler won two of the first three holes with regulation fours, and lost the fourth when Miss Bauer played a fine trap shot. The Maryland State titleholder won the fifth when her opponent conceded the hole, the sixth with a par 5, and turned 3 up as they halved the seventh and divided eight and nine.

The eventual winner went four up on the eleventh, dropped back to three as Miss Bauer deuced the twelfth and after halving 13 and 14 the Washington girl closed the match with a par 3 on the fifteenth, as her opponent was in trouble.

National Champion Patty Berg will attempt to extend her victory string against Dorothy Kirby tomorrow, while Miss Dettweiler, who upset Mrs. Vare on the Southern swing two years ago, will again find herself in the underdog role.

Guldahl's birdie 3 on the twenty-seventh, where he chipped dead for a "gimme" putt, gave his tandem a 28 for the front nine of the afternoon round, the lowest nine-hole card ever shot in four-ball competition, and put the team 3 up.

The 28 took the heart out of Smith and Runyan, who had played good enough golf to win ordinarily.

They halved the twenty-eighth in par, when Snead's putt rimmed the cup. On the next hole, Guldahl laid his approach 3 feet from the pin for a birdie three that put Snead and him seven up. They halved the thirtieth with four's and the match was over.

Guldahl, lanky, slope-houldered National Open champion, smiled and said, "I usually play better after lunch."

It was Guldahl's consistently brilliant playing that made the match a runaway in the afternoon. He received valuable assistance from Snead on two holes of the record nine, but Guldahl had a five-under-par 30 with his own ball. Snead, long-walloping West Virginian, lifted his game to great heights at times, but his play lacked the steadiness that Guldahl's had.

Smith and Runyan had 31-33 for 64, seven under par, in the morning. They had a 34 going out in the afternoon and played the last three holes one over par. Snead and Guldahl had 32-32—64 on the first 18 and were seven under par for the last 12 holes.

Here is the record nine shot by Snead and Guldahl:

Londos Meets Murphy on Mat at Arena

Jim Londos, acclaimed in darkest Africa and even remotest parts of Asia as world wrestling champion, thrusts his bull-like neck into the limelight again tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging Dr. Dropkick Murphy, the agile blonde grappler, in the feature bout of an attractive program. It will be a 90-minute time limit tussle.

DR. MURPHY

Allegedly heavier than when he campaigned here last winter, Murphy has sacrificed none of his speed and cunnning in adding poundage, and is expected to put Mr. Londos to the acid test. The handsome young Bostonian fought a thrilling duel with the raven-haired Greek Adonis last winter, losing when he injured his shoulder on a nasty fall from the ring.

Murphy's best trick is his vaunted "dropkick," which has felled the best in the game. He used it on Londos last winter, but the cagey Greek refused to be outmaneuvered a second time and crawled to cover after Murphy's sizeable brogans propelled him to the canvas.

Londos proved to the satisfaction of Washington fans that he has lost none of his skill by tossing popular Tommy O'Toole several weeks ago, pinning the Irish giant with his old reliable "airplane spin."

The semiwindup brings a newcomer before the eyes of the public in the person of Ben-Shalom, claimant of the Palestine heavyweight crown, who makes his debut against Jim Wright. Ben-Shalem has been sensational in New York, and is expected to win handily.

In other bouts, Wee Willie Davis faces Bibber McCoy, and Red Ryan tries conclusions with Jack Hader.

D. C. Man Defeated In Senior Golf Play

Pinehurst, N. C., March 8.—C. V. Haynes, of Washington, failed to survive the first round of match play in the annual Pinehurst seniors golf championship at the Pinehurst Country Club today. He succumbed to A. T. Safford, of Boston, by 5 up and 3 to play.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

We don't think it's a good idea to make airplanes when you're cool and the parachutes when you're excited.

If the Senate is going to okay 6,000 planes it should also order the chutes. There is an old saying when you need a life preserver you need it awful bad.

The next war is going to be fought in the air. About that time we are going to be bobbing for apples in a flooded mine near Scranton.

If there is a safe place in this world we intend to broadcast from there as guest artist.

Country Club. "It's too bad you and Henry Picard were beaten, but at least you get a day off."

Johnnie grunted and shook his head.

"There aren't any days off in this game," he said.

"Plenty of off days, perhaps, but no days off. I've got to go to work. There are other tournaments, you know."

And with that he picked up his clubs and started for the practice tees. When he reached them he found almost all the other losers there ahead of him, and the others arrived shortly after, for those who earn their living by the cash prizes they win at golf make a business of the game, and an eight-hour working day is not at all exceptional.

During the winter wanderings this season the average score of the winners in the ten or more tournaments played has been 8 under par for the 72 holes. In other words, a player must average four rounds, each two under par, in order to hope for the first prize. That is quite a mark to shoot at and constant, conscientious practice is the only way any player can achieve such super-perfection.

Henry Picard, who has succeeded Tommy Armour as the finest iron player in the field, was standing on an unused part of the course, a pile of 100 balls beside him. Hitting long irons to a caddie stationed 180 yards away, with precise swings he sent the balls whistling through the air, one after another. And the caddie never seemed to move. He stood there, his feet planted wide apart, a canvas bag in his hand, and each shot seemed to hit in exactly the same spot, take two hops and bounce right into his hands.

flight blokes play. The first movement on the part of the average player is to plant his or her Galento bulge on the edge of the table and keep it there except when scraping under the sofa for a lost ball. Sandor Glancz, one of the East's players, has made returns from as far behind the table as 25 feet. Most of the tap players stand far back and use tennis strokes, with topspin and slice, and hit the ball as hard as they can swing. It must be strenuous at that, the way they play it. McClure collapsed after a match at the Hippodrome last December, and he wasn't Hippodroming.

The game's parallel of the Black Sox scandal came during an international match in Prague in 1937 when two conestants batted the capsule back and forth for 2 hours and 8 minutes without missing. Their match lasted 7 hours and 12 minutes, and shook the game to its gizzard. As a result there is now a rule against what is called "chiseling"—which means keeping the pill in play rather than trying to score placements. Regular committees (with badges) actually prowl about the place on tournament nights ready to pounce on and penalize dastardly offenders.

Mussolini came out against the game not long ago and wouldn't let the Italian players join the 28 nations now in the International Table Tennis Federation. They're liable to be pretty tough with him, when the revolution comes.

cannon-ball the pitch into the mitt of Cather Jake Early.

"It's easy enough to understand his power," said Harridge. "Look at those long arms and those shoulders. I never saw a Cuban that big."

But it was Alexandra who was even more impressive. The Venezuelan, who had somewhere learned to pitch like a stylist, had all the actions of a big leaguer.

He displayed a fast ball that was fast even if not as fast as Ortiz's, but it was his curve that impressed Harridge.

"He'll look nice out there mixing 'em up for the hitters," opined Harridge.

Harris Impatient

As impatient as any rookie in the Washington camp is Harris himself. He is eager for the exhibition games to start to get a look at some of his training-camp wonders under fire.

The full complement of 45 players was in uniform today for the first time. Taking their first workouts with the club were Infielders Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis and Outfielders Douglas Dean and John Welaj.

Young Dean is a short, powerfully built lad who is tabbed for future reference . . . Welaj, not big, not small, is not expected to make it this year, either . . . Tomorrow the Nats will assemble in one workout in the morning for the benefit of news reel camera men, who will direct the day's practice . . . For five minutes today Harris had Ortiz pitch nothing but his let-up ball . . . it was while the Nats' manager was handling the mitt in the absence of regular catchers . . . The Nats here are divided into two camps. The veterans who live at the hotel and the 20-odd rookies who are quartered in a nearby boarding house . . . The man on the Washington squad who looks most like a ball player is Charley Gilbert, who was quite a ball player with the pennant-winning Cardinals in 1930-31 . . . Dutch Bergman Catholic University coach, who is vacationing in Orlando, threatens to don a uniform and work out with the Nats . . . he was formerly baseball coach at Minnesota.

The Brighter Side . . .

left a bonfire burning under the bed by mistake, an oxygen tent was indicated. He said we were in a bad way, according to the thermometer.

We learn from the fan magazines that Hollywood is a place where all the ladies are home-loving bodies, devoted to their firesides and their husbands, if any, and that all the gentlemen are regular fellows and on top of that he-men who are fond of all masculine pursuits.

We gather that the genus heel, male or female, is wholly unknown within the confines of Hollywood, and that conceit does not exist and that the inmates are as friendly and as easy to get along with as so many little kittens. We are told that they all love their mothers and fathers dearly, and in some cases their grandmothers and grandfathers, and that their one ambition is to save their money against those rainy days that occasionally come along even in California.

We get the impression that any inmate of Hollywood who thinks of evening as anything other than the time for communion with a good book is regarded as eccentric and even a little wild by fellow inmates. We draw from our reading of the fan magazines that all those inmates of Hollywood are geniuses in the art of acting, and if they have sometimes come out any less in the picture we have observed as a cash customer, it was the fault of the story.

Poisonous Propaganda

Now what makes us hot is that, depending on the narratives of persons we had a right to think knew something of Hollywood, we have been guilty of not only harboring unpleasant thoughts of the place and its people but have perhaps sometimes permitted a hint of what we were thinking to creep into print—as for instance the suggestion that there might be bad actors in Hollywood.

We can see now that we have been had, as the saying is. Until we read those fan magazines, we were accepting the information of wayfarers from the Pacific Coast that there were bounders and cads and run-a-bouts in Hollywood the same as everywhere else and some of this information, mark you, came from persons who live right there in Hollywood.

It is now our belief that they go around purposely spreading poisonous propaganda to keep down immigration to Hollywood. We can see from the fan magazines that Hollywood is heaven on earth and populated by angels, and those guys out there are trying to preserve it for themselves.

Calladine wasted little time putting his mates out in front as the second period opened, scoring with a golf-like drive from just beyond the crease after 29 seconds of play. Greig fed him another pass after 2:52 minutes, and he feinted Goalie Mitchell, of the Rovers, out of position with a neat swish of the hips, and rammed the puck home for the score.

"Goal Disallowed"

New York almost received credit for a goal midway in the period when Rimstad apparently scored on a pass from Collins, but it was ruled illegal by the goal referee. Kelly's defensive play in the second stanza was particularly bright, and his individual efforts probably prevented the Rovers from making a runaway of the contest.

New York got back in the match after 1:52 of the final period when Bob Brownridge took a pass from Vince Germann and smacked it into the cage for a marker. Collings, skating like fury, knotted the count at 3-all after 7:45 minutes of the period had elapsed, scoring on a long, pretty shot some 10-yards from the hoop. Matters stood this way until Greig and Calladine teamed up for the finishing punch.

S. T. Bledsoe, Santa Fe Head, Dies at 70

Was One of Nation's Foremost Exponents of Streamlined Trains

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 8.—Samuel T. Bledsoe, president of the Santa Fe System lines and one of the Nation's foremost exponents of streamlined train service, died today.

Bledsoe, 70, had been suffering from arthritis of the spine since January but the immediate cause of his death early today was an internal hemorrhage.

Bledsoe was elected chairman of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad's executive committee in 1931 and took over the double duty of chairman and president on May 2, 1933

Wanted Greater Speed

He concentrated on providing greater speed and more comfort for patrons of the system extending from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Fifteen streamlined trains were placed in service during 1937 and 1938. Tracks were improved with "80-mile" curves to facilitate fast travel.

Bledsoe was born May 12, 1868, in Kentucky. He studied at schools in Jamestown and Bowling Green, Ky. He attended the University of Texas Law School in 1888 and 1889.

Bledsoe began a law practice in 1890 in Ardmore in the Indian Territory and was retained as attorney for the Santa Fe at Ardmore in 1895.

Burial in Rock Creek

He came to Chicago in 1915 to serve as assistant general solicitor, and in 1918 was appointed general counsel and became a director.

Funeral services will be conducted here Friday and the body will be sent to Washington for burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Survivors include his wife, Talitha; a daughter, Mrs. Bartlett Cormack, of Beverly Hills, Calif.; and a son, Virgil, of Phoenix, Ariz.

Speakers' Unit Head

FREDERICK P. H. SIDDONS, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., who has arranged a series of lectures for presentation to Group 3 of the Virginia Bankers Association

Virginia Group To Hear D. C. Bankers

Customer Relations To Be Principal Discussion Topic

The speakers' unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, of which Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., is chairman, has arranged a series of lectures on "Customer Relations" to be given before Group 3 of the Virginia Bankers Association. Ten addresses will be made at the Marshall National Bank & Trust Co. Building Marshall, Va., each Thursday at 7:30 p. m., beginning today.

The course will embrace subjects relating to the service of banks in relationship to the public, and will cover such subjects as management, credit and analysis, investments, trust services, taxes, activity charges and personnel.

The officers of Group 3 of the Virginia Bankers Association are: E. W. Cox, chairman, Monterey; Frank S. Driver, vice chairman, Weyers Cave, and P. W. Anderson, cashier, Marshall.

The following bankers of Washington will address the group: Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary, American Security & Trust Co.; Charles C. Boswell, assistant treasurer, American Security & Trust Co.; Warren R. Forster, vice president, Hamilton National Bank; Edward M. Foreman, Riggs National Bank; Stuart S. Ogilvie, assistant cashier, Second National Bank; Frank M. Perley, trust investment officer, American Security & Trust Co.; L. Pierce Riddle, personnel manager, American Security & Trust Co.; William E. Schooley, assistant treasurer, American Security & Trust Co.; Paul J. Seltzer, assistant treasurer, American Security & Trust Co.; Eliot H. Thomson, publicity manager, Washington Loan & Trust Co., and W. T. Vandoren, vice president, Liberty National Bank.

This plan is one of the first to be worked out through the speakers' unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association that covers such a broad field, and if this group of the Virginia Bankers Association feels it is successful they will continue their activities by possibly organizing a chapter or study group of the American Institute of Banking. The co-operation of the Washington Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was obtained in arranging this course of lectures.

Banking Units' Dinner

The auditors' and fiducary sections of the District of Columbia Bankers Association hold their annual joint dinner meeting today at the Lee House, at 6 p. m. Robertson Griswold, vice president of the Maryland Trust Co., of Baltimore, and vice president of the trust division of the American Bankers Association, will be the speaker of the evening

Gerald E. Keene, assistant cashier, Second National Bank, and J. Eliot Moran, assistant trust officer, American Security & Trust Co., are, respectively, chairman of the auditors' and fiduciary sections.

Insurance Leader Returns

Dwight D. Scott, president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters, has returned to his desk in the Mutual Life Benefit office after three weeks' vacation at Palm Beach.

Wheat Prices Dip as Export Demands Fall

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 8.—The price of wheat in all world markets took its sharpest dip in weeks today as grain traders expressed fear that the Argentine government may be forced to change its heretofore conservative marketing policy because of the piling up of stocks.

Private reports indicating that the Argentine government's program of buying farmers' wheat at a guaranteed price is resulting in congestion of storage space practically shut off export demand in Europe.

Chicago prices opened about ½ cent lower, held that level until noon and then sagged further, closing at the day's lows or ⅝@⅞ below yesterday's finish, May 67¾@67⅞, July 68@68⅛. Trade was more active than in recent sessions.

Stock Prices Resume Advance and Score Gains of From 1 to 5 Points; Bonds Led by Rails and U. S. Issues

New York, March 8.—The creep of security prices to higher levels which has been perceptible since the January lows, became first a walk and then almost a trot today. Secretary of Commerce Hopkins provided the inspiration for a spurt in buying that produced another million-share day on the stock exchange and individual gains of 1 to 5 points for both stocks and bonds.

Power, store and food divisons recorded new highs for the year or longer; the 100 key shares were at the best level since the 1939 peaks recorded January 4 and no less than 102 of 810 issues dealt in on the big board established new tops. In the bond section, the composite for 30 leaders, the 10 representative high grade and 5 speculative rail groups penetrated their previous 1939 highs.

Commodities, however, moved in a direction opposite to equities. Apprehension over Argentine crops and shipments affected both cotton and wheat markets, the former breaking 11 to 15 points, the widest swing cotton has experienced for some time. Wheat sold off ⅝ to ⅞ cents at Chicago, meeting support in the late trading.

Volume Indication Favorable

Action of stocks supported chartists' arguments that volume indications so far in 1939 have been generally favorable. On Monday, prices worked irregularly lower to the tune of about 840,000 shares. Tuesday offerings dried up in the face of a scarcity of buyers and turnover barely 570,000 shares. Today, under the influence of revived demand, transactions expanded to 1,048,440 units.

The start appeared to presage a session of the same pattern of the preceding day and price movements throughout the morning were uncertain and only fractionally improved. Around noon the tickers carried the latest prediction from Mr. Hopkins, that national income would expand six to eight billions this year to between 68 and 70 billions; that the business advisory council had given him specific proposals for helping business and that progress is being made in solution of tax problems.

Hopkins Talk Responsible

The response by investors and speculators was immediate as well as sharply in contrast with the more or less indifferent attitude with which similar expressions from President Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau and others have been received in Wall Stret. Buying gathered headway and reached greatest activity in the final hour when the best levels were reached and tickers threatened to fall behind. The finish was around the top.

Favorites Regain Lead

With the pick-up in transfers the old favorites returned to market leadership. General Motors leading the list with a net gain of ⅞ on sales of 26,000 shares. Coppers were prominent on an advance in the price of the refined metal for export, Anaconda and Kennecott adding more than a point each. Railroad issues were well represented among the 15 most actives and advances of a point or more, even in low-priced members of the group, were numerous.

There was no special good news for the carriers beyond additional comment and analysis of a favorable character from investment sources. Earnings, of course, have been improving from month to month.

Utilities Strong

Utilities attracted interest through announcement of an accelleration in the gain of power production over a year ago. Output for the latest week was up 10.2 per cent. Stocks in the group while strong were not particularly active. Engineers Public Service taking the lead with turnover of 13,200 shares. Aviations rose, but on less-than-usual demand, Douglas adding 1⅞. Bendix and Boeing large fractions.

Oils again tended to lag, although analysts pointed out that the weight of motor fuel stocks is much less than a year ago—56 days' supply against 65 days—with consumption outlook vastly improved. Standard Oil group shares were a unit on the upside while Texas Corporation and a number of others were ahead large fractions. Among other shares which closed a point or more to the good were American Telephone, up 3 for another new high; du Pont, with a gain of 5; International Business Machines, Western Electric, International Harvester and Pennsylvania.

Bonds Generally Higher

Listed bonds surged forward today, with only a few issues in the foreign section showing any uncertainty. Alleghany Corporation issues were particularly strong, owing to the crossing of the $40 mark by C. & O. shares. Speculative rail bonds were in excellent demand, and other groups likewise responded to the increasing optimism. United States Treasury securities led the high-grade investment group into fresh high ground. Turnover in all issues was $9,250,000.

Secondary Rails Firm

Alleghany Corporation bonds were up 3 to 4¾ points on the indication that the collateral is attaining the 150 per cent stipulated in the indenture. Secondary railroad liens showed advances from fractions to more than 4 points with numerous issues up 1 to 2 points. Borderline and default rails were almost equally strong. Local tractions failed to join the upswing, but communications issues moved up. Industrial convertibles reflected the improvement in related equities.

Treasury Issues Advance

Among United States Treasury securities the usual list of record high appeared, on gains ranging from 1-32 to 9-32 point. One issue advanced more than a point, but this was merely a reflection of inactivity during the general advance. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were firm. Highest grade corporate obligations, such as Telephone debentures and United States Steel 3¼s, were at tops.

Steel Prices Reaffirmed for 2nd Quarter

Production Rate Is Unchanged at 55 Per Cent

New York, March 8.—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation today issued an announcement reaffirming present prices on its products for shipment during the second quarter. Pig iron prices have also been reaffirmed for the second quarter by most of the producers, says Iron Age in its weekly survey of the steel industry.

"There has been slightly better buying of steel in the last week, though the improvement has not yet been sufficient to be reflected in higher operations. Ingot production for this week is estimated at 55 per cent, unchanged from a revised figure of 55 per cent for last week. The Pittsburgh rate is 49 per cent, last week's rate having been revised to the same figure owing to the temporary shutting down of a steel plant.

"Pig iron production in February gained 4.8 per cent, on a daily basis, over January, while the gain in steel ingot output on a weekly basis was barely 2.7 per cent. Owing to the shorter month, total output of both steel and pig iron was below that of January.

"Some of the improvement in orders in the last week has been in tin plate, production of which has risen 3 points to 53 per cent, which is better than it appears on the surface because of the present excessive tin plate capacity, equal to about 90,000,000 base boxes annually where maximum normal demand would not exceed 60,000,000 boxes.

"Further increase in tin plate orders is expected soon; the automobile industry will require more steel as expanding assemblies use up supplies on hand; specifications against recent contracts for construction and railroad purposes are expanding; the farm implement industry is stepping up production and taking more steel; the early arrival of spring weather will hasten outdoor work on farms and elsewhere. These are some of the outstanding factors that are counted on by the steel industry to bring long-expected improvement, which appears to have been delayed rather than suspended indefinitely.

"Railroad equipment orders include 15 locomotives placed by the Locomotive Co. and 2,000 freight cars ordered by the Canadian National Railways from three builders in Canada. The New York Central will distribute orders this week for about 55,000 tons of rails, the Erie will soon buy upward of 20,000 tons and the Central of New Jersey-Reading is in the market for 10,000 tons.

"Fabricated structural steel contracts in the week were about 18,300 tons, while new projects out for bids total 12,750 tons. Reinforcing bar awards were nearly 15,000 tons, including 8,040 tons for a bridge at Seattle, Wash."

Borden Company Earnings Increase

New York, March 9.—Earnings for the year ended December 31, 1938, of $6,641,205 were reported by the Borden Co. today. This was a gain of $350,553 over 1937. Net earnings were $1.51 a share on the 4,396,704 shares of $15 par value common stock in 1938, contrasted with $1.43 a share on the same amount of outstanding stock in 1937.

H. L. Green Co. Net Drops

New York, March 8 (AP).—H. L. Green Co. and domestic subsidiaries reported today for fiscal year ended January 31 net income of $1,714,649, equal to $2.83 a share on the common stock, against $1,839,958, or $3.02 a share in the preceding fiscal year. The company operates a Nation-wide chain of stores.

Carnation Income Gains

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—E. H. Stuart, president of the Carnation Co., reported to stockholders that the company's net earnings for the year ended last December 31 amounted to $1,968,825, compared with $1,810,391 for the previous year. After payment of preferred dividends the earnings equaled $2.91 a share on common stock. This compared with $2.65 in 1937.

International Salt Co.

New York, March 8 (AP).—International Salt Co. and subsidiaries reported net earnings for 1938 of $550,613, equal to $2.29 a share on common stock, compared with $506,936, or $2.11 a common share, in 1937.

Weakness of allied commodities took the props out of cottonseed oil today and, despite feeble rallies, closing prices were 9 to 13 points net lower. Offerings came through long liquidation, local pressure and professional selling. Sales totaled 116 lots. March closed *6.87, May *6.99, July *7.10, September 7.17, October *7.17. Crude oil was quoted at 5¼ cents nominal in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾ cents Texas nominal.

Osages Request U. S. to Correct Error of 1865

Tribal Councilman Seeks $776,000 For Their Lands

John Joseph Matthews, of the tribal council of the Osages, of Oklahoma, is in Washington for this year's attempt to have the Government correct an error it is alleged to have made in 1865. The attempt has been made periodically because the Osages have a long memory, the councilman asserted yesterday.

MATTHEWS

He mentioned also that the House of Representatives always seems to have on hand at least one "watchdog of the Treasury," which is important because to correct the Government's initial "mistake" would cost at least $776,000.

Matthews told about it at his hotel yesterday. Six other members of the tribal council have returned to the reservation and left matters in his hands.

"It is this way," the tribesman explained. "At one time the Osages lived in Missouri, but before the Civil War one part of the tribe was lured to the Three Forks in Oklahoma, and the other part moved to Kansas. During the war the Kansas Osages fought for the Union, and the Oklahoma part fought for the Confederacy.

"Then in 1865 the Government declared a policy of friendship for all Indians. It told the Oklahoma Osages, 'We want to be friends, and forget that you fought against the Union—but we want your lands.'

"A treaty was made at Fort Smith, Ark., and the Kansas Osages were moved to the reservation in Oklahoma. The money from the Kansas land, it was agreed, was to be paid into a 'Civilization fund' for the benefit 'of all Indians.'

"The Osages understood that 'all the Indians' meant the two groups of their tribe," Matthews said, "but the Government said it meant the Indians of all the tribes, and it spent the money that way.

"Leaving aside the interest, the principal was about $776,000. The Osages believe that was their money," the councilman said firmly, "and that there isn't any reason they shouldn't have it.

"We have tried to get it every year since I have been on the council, and the tribe is very much disturbed about it," he concluded. "It has been disturbed for 74 years."

Mrs. Patty Morris, Jefferson's Kin, Dies in Annapolis

Mrs. Patty Kean Morris, 81, great-great-granddaughter of Thomas Jefferson, died Sunday in Annapolis, at the home of her son-in-law, Commander T. Ross Cooley, according to word received here yesterday.

She is survived by her brother, Gen. Jefferson Randolph Kean; two half-brothers, Otho Kean, of Washington, and Prescott Kean, of Hopewell, Va.; two half-sisters, Mrs. Fred Gallup, of Charlotte, N. C., and Mrs. Rolfe Wells, of Norfolk, Va.; two sons, Robert K. Morris, of Panama, and William S. Morris, of Duluth, Minn.; four daughters, Mrs. Allen Sumner, of Montrose, Va.; Mrs. Page Hunter, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. H. King Hutchins, of New York, and Mrs. T. Ross Cooley, of Annapolis; ten grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in Annapolis Tuesday, with burial at Monticello, Va.

Lieut. Col. Lucas' Funeral Saturday

Services for Lieut. Col. Lewis Clarke Lucas, 71, U. S. M. C., retired, will be at 10:30 a. m. Saturday, in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Lucas died in Texas Monday. He was retired in 1915 after 30 years in the Marine Corps, but served on the general board of the Navy Department from 1918 to 1932.

He held the West Indian, Spanish Campaign Badge and Brevet Medal, and the Expeditionary Badge and Expeditionary Medal for service in Cuba and Panama.

'Republican-on-March' Dinners Here March 16

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House minority leader, announced yesterday that the first of a series of "Republicans-on-the-March" dinners would be held here March 16 as a part of a "Forward to '40" drive. Governors Bushfield, of South Dakota, and Baldwin, of Connecticut, will speak.

Bob Hague, Stage-Struck Sailor Of Many Careers, Dies at 58

Fisherman Who Rose to Head World's Largest Merchant Marine Fleet Also Was Generous Broadway 'Angel'

New York, March 8 (AP).—Bob Hague, 58, "the stage-struck sailor" who headed the world's largest privately owned merchant marine, died unexpectedly today in the prime of a multifarious career that lifted him from the lowly lot of a fisherman.

Apparently in robust health, he was stricken with cirrhosis of the liver. Several transfusions failed to aid him.

Born Robert L. Hague at Lincoln, R. I., Hague left Worcester Polytechnic Institute to join the crew of a fishing smack, but abandoned the sea temporarily after a rough career with sailing vessels to learn the machinist's trade.

Forsaking that, he was successively a locomotive fireman and engineer, oiler on a ship and assistant superintending engineer of the Standard Oil Co. of California. In the World War the United States Shipping Board placed him in charge of reconditioning interned German ships and repairing American ships on the Pacific Coast.

He returned to Standard Oil in 1920 and in less than two years built its fleet from 81 to 205 ships which sailed the Seven Seas under half a dozen flags.

Always interested in the stage, Hague's magnificent suite at the Ritz Tower was a haven for actors, many of whom he financed before their days of stardom.

He was married three times. His first wife was Alsa Kneeland, of Los Angeles, whom he wed in 1923. Two years later he married Edith Bobe, victim of a sensational $500,000 jewel robbery in 1924. His third wife was Mary Lewis, former opera star. They separated last year.

His intimate friends included former Mayor James J. Walker, Postmaster General Farley, William Gaxton, Victor Moore, Joseph E. Mulrooney and half the police force of New York City, as well as sailors, publishers and locomotive engineers.

Hague was the "angel" for many Broadway productions and helped the Lambs Club through several financial difficulties. Broadway reports said he earned $100,000 a year and spent every cent of it.

Arturo Toscanini to Direct NBC Symphony Here Tuesday

Concert Will Be Last Before He Sails for London Engagement

Arturo Toscanini, famed opera and symphony conductor, will direct the N.B.C. Symphony Orchestra next Tuesday at Constitution Hall.

The concert here will be the last before Toscanini sails for London to conduct the Biritish Broadcasting Co.'s symphony.

The renowned Metropolitan Opera maestro was the first non-German to be asked to conduct at the Wagner festival at Bayreuth, Germany. He has toured Europe with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Toscanini also conducted a series of concerts at Salzburg, Germany.

His first experience as a conductor took place in Rio de Janeiro in 1886 when he led Claudio Rossi's Opera Company in "Aida."

Toscanini, who began his career as a 'cellist, is a native of Parma, Italy, and a graduate of the conservatory there.

He has conducted at La Scala, widely-known Milan opera house, and in many other Italian cities.

Named guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in 1926, Toscanini remained with the organization for ten years.

Federal Jobs Decrease 6% In January

Christmas Mail Rush Employes Contribute to Drop

Federal Government employment and pay rolls decreased in January with the discharge of temporary employes hired to handle Christmas mail, the Civil Service Commission announced yesterday.

In January there were 863,811 civil employes, a decrease of 54,950, or 6 per cent, since December, 1938. The January pay roll was $131,382,390, as compared with $142,064,975 for the previous month.

In the District, the Treasury Department and the Postoffice Department reported the largest decreases in employment. In the Treasury Department, the Bureau of Internal Revenue is decentralizing its activities.

Increases in Federal employment here were noted in the War, Navy, Interior and Agriculture departments. Employment totals also rose in the United States Housing Authority, the wage and hour division of the Labor Department, and the National Park Service.

Sizable increases in employment outside the District were reported by the Panama Canal Administration and by the Public Works Administration, the commission said.

Chas. Dailey, 72, Congress Clerk, Dies at Home

Charles Dailey, sr., 72, file clerk in Congress since 1933, died yesterday at his home, 1423 Columbia road northwest.

A native of Geneseo, Ill., he went to Colorado as a child and was educated in the schools of Denver.

Mr. Dailey was for 33 years the publisher of the Aspen (Colo.) Times and twice served as a member of the Colorado legislature.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emeline B. Dailey, and his son, Charles B. Dailey, jr.

Funeral services will be held Friday at Gawlers Funeral Home, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Burial will be in Aspen, Colo.

Miss Washington, ICC Employe, Succumbs at 63

Miss Rebecca J. Washington, 63, a direct descendant of John Augustine Washington, died yesterday.

A native of Charlestown, W. Va., she had been an employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission for 23 years.

Miss Washington was the daughter of Thomas B. and Eleanor Washington and on her mother's side was descended from Francis Thomas, early Maryland Governor.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. H. Lightfoot Forbes, of Elkridge, Md.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Charlestown.

Drive to Stress Military School Role in Defense

Association Plans Move After Hearing Plea for Officers

A Nation-wide program to publicize the role of military schools in national defense was established at the final meeting of the Association of Military Schools and Colleges here yesterday.

A spokesman from the War Department told the association earlier in the day that now more than ever the teaching of theoretical military science in the schools was essential to building a potential officer force. He declared the War Department has reversed its previous attitude of putting on military drill.

Discussion involved whether military schools should reiterate their support of military education for the R. O. T. C., combined with liberal arts education, or should "soft pedal" the soldier aspect in deference to opinion sometimes expressed that the schools are training boys to be soldiers.

To meet War Department demands, the association will ask Congress for increased officer instructor personnel. There are about 30 officers teaching military science to 10,000 military school students, according to Col. R. L. Jackson, vice president of the association.

A member of the committee on publicity, Gen. Sandy Beaver of the Riverside Military Academy, Florida, announced the committee will meet at his school in the coming week to formulate plans for the campaign.

Indictment Bares 'Treasure Hunt' For Bogus Money

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—A "treasure hunt" on a golf course for 1,000 counterfeit $20 bills was disclosed today with an indictment of Frankie Parker, known as the "airplane bootlegger" in prohibition days.

A Federal grand jury charged Parker and August Englehardt, convicted counterfeiter, with possession and conspiracy to sell more than $20,000 in spurious United States Treasury certificates.

After the six-count indictment, Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan, of the United States Secret Service, told details of a plot in which counterfeit $20 bills were buried, he said, in a "golf course bank" and in Chicago parks.

Robert Tells How Advertising Aids Political Career

The essence of success in applying advertising principles to politics is to base your publicity "on the backlog of public sentiment built up during the two years before the campaign," Lawrence A. Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, yesterday told 100 members and guests of the Washington Advertising Club at the Raleigh hotel.

"It would be an excellent idea," he said, "if all our junior colleges offered a general course in principles of advertising, since most of our business and professional men learn this subject too late to do them any good."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Dr. Charles F. Redner, vacationing at Miami Beach, contributes an amazing hand which he dealt in one of his beach club games. He bid seven no trump immediately. Here are the cards:

♠AKQJ
◇AKQ
♣AKQ

The other players who are willing to testify to the deal and the hand, are D. A. Hughes, A. C. Hitzelberger and Dr. W. L. MacDonnell. All four players live in Utica, N. Y.

Skier Takes a Tumble

S. G. Houghton, writing from Smuggers Ranch, Stowe, Vt., sends a slam hand (shown in today's box) upon which a strange lead and a bad guess cost the declarer an embarrassing tumble. Here is his letter:

"A skiers paradise is not always such, and when Old Man Weather sends prolonged rain and a following freeze as once in a while he must, even in the best places, out come the bridge tables amid fervent prayers for fresh power to cover that most damnable thing, a breakable crust.

"The experts might call the bidding an example of just such crust, but the point remains that the slam might well have been reached and just as well made in any group.

"It was the best in a round of six rubbers at a fortieth while prayer papers to J. Pluvius sputtered on the hearth. The combatants were: South, a tax expert; West, a writer; North (dummy) an investment counsellor, and East a professional skier of French birth who in summer teaches the Chilian army (their winter.)

Pointless Play

"The bidding, if jumpy, was certainly not tentative. The lead is very interesting. I happen to know that West did not hear his partner's bid, otherwise it might have been all over but the shouting at trick one. But the fourth-best spade made a real problem of it for declarer. Obviously the game depends upon the heart management.

"South embarrassed unduly by his worthless spade jack after taking the ace, led a club, ran three to discard the losing spade. Two trump tricks landed him in dummy; a spade lead ruffed by East was overruffed. Then came the delayed play in hearts.

"Declarer excels at Form 1,040 and the Gelandesprung, but he had to guess here. He led the five; West ducked with the jack. Long cogitation, the king from dummy and stark ruin.

"I hope this hand may teach a lesson to your readers. One must take the chance that presents itself, whether it is a downhill Schuss or a ten-spot of hearts."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE Farm Credit Administration is working on an appeals system for employe grievances that seems to have some promise and the architects of the plan incline toward the notion that there should be some final court of resort that might be set up within the Civil Service Commission. This idea for a final tribunal within the Commission first was advanced here by Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell at the meeting in Washington of the Civil Service Assembly of the U. S. and Canada. But while the FCA is working over the plan—now in tentative shape—it is with the knowledge that fewer grievances occur under its roof than possibly any place in town. Basic personnel policies that were originally sound and consistently adhered to are the reasons for the peace over there.

The Wage-Hour Division, that bent backward in shaping the qualifications of its inspectors so that the labor unions could offer most of the men for the jobs, has at this time hired about 125 inspectors and won't take on any more before July. Lack of funds is the reason.

This pertinent querry to Congressmen comes in our mail from a Federal employe:

"Are you aware that the professors in charge of personnel management of the Government are attempting to make college associations and education a requirement to the near exclusion of all other qualifications in the requirements necessary for appointment in the Federal Service. This situation is evident from the recent publication of an examination to be held for sub-professional and minor executives in which college education is a necessary requirement for taking the examination.

"In addition, persons passing the examination are given preference to the exclusion of others if they elect to accept clerical appointments. Statistics show that not more than 5 per cent of the population in any congressional district attend college. In the past it is probable that not many of your constituents had occasion to be contacted by Government personnel. However, such is not the situation today, because of home-lending activities, wage and hour laws, national labor relations board, social security, farm adjustments and many other activities. While not many of your constituents may seek appointment in the Federal service, Government employes with college education will have contact with many of your constituents not fortunate enough to afford a college education, and the questions involved may not be considered from the best mutual viewpoint.

"IN view of this, will you support legislation (a) to provide college education free to the same extent as grade and high school educations are now available, (b) and, in the matter of Federal appointments to provide for the recognition of ability to pass an examination without college education and to provide for the recognition of practical experience as such. This might hold in effect until all of your constituents are able to afford a college education.

Notes: "The Pot Boiler," a play by Alice Gerstenberg, will be presented at 8:30 this evening by the Music and Dramatics Committee of the Farm Credit Club, in the North Interior Auditorium. The play is to be directed by Maxine Mitchell, a graduate of the Marjorie Webster School. In the cast are Virginia S. Lynn, Josephine Tomkiel, W. H. Balderson, Ralph F. DeSimone, Paul B. Gural, J. Mahlon Selby and George W. Wilcox. The Farm Credit Chorus, directed by Robert F. Freund, will sing . . . Senator James M. Mead, Representative Robert Ramspeck and others will speak tonight at a mass meeting, under U. F. W. A. auspices, in the Labor Department Auditorium. Ramspeck will talk on "Prospects of Government Workers' Legislation."

Bob Burns Says—

Men, the time has come for you to stand up for your sartorial rights. An' if you don't know what "sartorial" means, it's jes' too bad because what the fashion experts is gettin' ready to do to you is plenty! Pretty soon you're gonna be asked to wear "twilight blue tails, dinner jackets an' plum-faced evenin' dress overcoats!" These designers is gonna make you look like Easter eggs with hats on. Color is comin' into man's apparel with canary dinner jackets for tropical wear, an' overcoats lined with gold satin. Imagine, blue felt high hats an' blue cutaway suits with white double-breasted waistcoats!

Men, changes like this is gonna take us out of the stuffed-shirt class an' put us right in with the stuffed birds! If we let these fashion experts get away with this, they'll have us jes' as dizzy over styles as the women! Jes' as if we're not havin' enough troubles at home now!

Utility Head Made Town Councilman

Warrenton, Va., March 8 (AP).—The Warrenton Town Council named G. Nathan Gouldthrope, branch manager for the Virginia Public Service Co., to fill the unexpired term of Councilman Charles G. Stone, resigned.

Stone resigned at a meeting of the council last night, giving as his reason the fact he recently announced himself a candidate for Commonwealth's attorney of Fauquier County, subject to the Democratic primary. Stone's term on the council would have expired in September.

"What do you eat this time of year?" asked Jimmy Skunk of Bobby Coon.

"Anything I can get, and that isn't enough," replied Bobby Coon and grinned.

"The same here," said Jimmy Skunk as he began to dig around a rotting old stump. Almost at once he pulled out something and ate it with evident relish. Bobby Coon moved near, but not too near. He was careful about that.

"What did you find?" he asked.

"A grub. A fat grub," replied Jimmy. "I like fat grubs." He smacked his lips.

"I would rather have a Frog," said Bobby Coon, "but just now I could do with one of those things. You haven't one to spare, have you?"

Jimmy hadn't. Of course not. "I would like a fat beetle," said he as he continued to dig around that old stump. He didn't know that that fat grub would in time have become a fat beetle had Jimmy not found him.

"I could eat a beetle myself, but I would rather have a crayfish," said Bobby. Some people call it crawfish.

"I would like a crayfish, but I don't get one very often," replied Jimmy.

"You don't spend enough time around the water. You don't find crayfish away from water. Give me Frogs enough and a few crayfish for a change and I can live nicely," said Bobby Coon. "Do you like fish?"

Jimmy Skunk nodded. "Yes," said he, "but the only time I get any is when I happen to find one that has been washed up on the shore or some one has left.

"I always have one or two good fish feasts when the high water goes down. Almost always some get left in little pools and then I catch them," Bobby explained.

Jimmy had continued digging around that old stump and now brought out another grub. He smacked his lips again. "This is better than I had hoped," said he. Bobby looked on anxiously and edged just a wee bit nearer. "Give me all the grubs and worms and insects I can eat and that is all I ask. Of course I eat other things too," added Jimmy.

"Mice?" inquired Bobby, who had just caught a Mouse when Jimmy first saw him.

"Of course," replied Jimmy. "Quite a lot of Mice, especially young and tender ones. I find them when I am looking for grubs and insects."

"Birds?" inquired Bobby.

"Just a few. Just once in a while and then in the nesting season when I happen to run across a nest on the ground. I don't waste time looking for them. Eggs are good for a change, but there are other things I like better."

"What, for instance?" demanded Bobby. "I like eggs and birds myself, but like you I don't often get them excepting in the nesting season, and not so many then. What do you like better."

"Grasshoppers. Grasshoppers and crickets. Give me all I want of those and you can have your birds and eggs," replied Jimmy. "I wish it was time for them now."

"I wish it was time for corn. You can have your grasshoppers, but give me corn when it is full of milk. Seems as if I never can get enough of it," said Bobby.

"It is good for a fact," agreed Jimmy. "I like some myself. And I like a little fruit. I eat berries and other fruits while I can get them. They make variety."

"I like them myself," acknowledged Bobby Coon. "We seem to like many of the same things."

"And just now there are mighty few of them," said Jimmy, who had failed to find another grub around that stump.

THE HECHT CO.'S NEW CREDIT PLAN

Merchandise Certificates

Visit Our Credit Department—Upon authorization, you will receive a book (or books) of Merchandise Certificates, totaling $10, $15, $25 or more — which will be charged to your account. Each book contains Merchandise Certificates in denominations of 25c, 50c and $1. Should you make purchases totaling uneven amounts you may pay the difference, or you will receive actual change. In order that you get full value of your account with us YOU MUST CARRY THEM WHEN YOU SHOP.

Use Them to Buy Small Homewares—Here a shopper, who has purchased a book of Merchandise Certificates in our credit office, is shown using her certificates like cash. She is making a purchase of 29c in our Housewares Department. She hands the salesgirl a Merchandise Certificate for 25c and four cents in cash, in payment. Here we see the quick service available under this plan. Merchandise Certificates function with all the speed and efficiency of "Money in Your Pocket."

Use Them to Buy Apparel—Your Easter coat and hat . . . your Easter frock . . . and all your accessories as well, can be bought with Merchandise Certificates. Come down now when selections are at their best, and make your choice. Pay for them out of income over a six months' period. Be first with the new fashions while they are still new. Use Merchandise Certificates, to buy anything from lipstick to linoleum . . . from lingerie to a fur coat.

Use Them for C.O.D. Deliveries—Just another instance of the convenience and ease of this new Hecht Co. credit plan. If you see merchandise advertised, but are unable to come downtown for it, merely phone for it on a C.O.D. basis. When The Hecht Co. driver delivers your merchandise, pay for it with a Merchandise Certificate. If change is required, the driver will pay you in actual money, as he does with any C.O.D. purchase.

LIKE Cash in your pocket! That's the story of The Hecht Co.'s new kind of "Money." We call them Merchandise Certificates—and they give you every advantage of cash, PLUS THE CONVENIENCE of paying over a six-month period. Think of it! Now you can buy anything in the store—from ribbons to radios—from lipstick to lingerie—and pay out of your income. Actually, shopping will hold new thrills and new enjoyment for you, once you have used this new kind of "money." Get your own Merchandise Certificate booklet—and start your Easter shopping with this new kind of "money." Visit our Credit Department on the Second Floor, and arrange for your first book of Merchandise Certificates tomorrow!
